

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. SECRETARY'S DEPARTMENT, BOSTON, }
January 1, 1868. }

To the Honorable the Senate and House of Representatives.

I have the honor to submit for the information of the legislature, in compliance with the General Statutes, an abstract, prepared from the certified returns of EIGHTY-SEVEN corporations organized within the Commonwealth in the year 1867, under chapter sixty-one of the General Statutes, and of twenty companies previously formed who have certified an increase, and ten companies a decrease, of capital stock during the year.

Appended to this abstract is a general statement giving the amount of voted capital, and the amount of capital stock represented as paid in since the enactment of the law in 1851, authorizing the corporate association of three or more persons. The capital invested during sixteen years, ending December, 1867, amounted to $114,295,695.78, from which $1,921,800 was withdrawn in 1867; leaving a balance of $112,373,895.78 as the present amount of paid capital.

Very respectfully,

OLIVER WARNER,

PUBLIC DOCUMENT No. 11.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

To His Excellency ALEXANDER H. BULLOCK, Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The Commissioners on Public Lands have the honor to submit herewith their Sixteenth Annual Report.

Under the Tripartite Indenture of December 31, 1864, between the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, the City of Boston, and the Boston Water Power Company, the Commissioners have commenced the building of the second large drain, as required by the indenture, and have made satisfactory progress in the work. This sewer when finished will terminate all obligations respecting sewerage to the parties named. All lateral sewers connecting with main drains are constructed at the cost of the respective abutters.

Since the last Annual Report the Commissioners have had two public sales of land,—one on the 26th of November, 1866, the other on the 8th instant. At the former sale the eight lots of land not taken by the purchasers, as referred to in the last Annual Report, were re-sold at an advance upon the amount previously bid for them of nearly $12,000. Two other lots of land were disposed of at the same sale. The other public sale was on the 8th instant; fourteen lots were offered, but only seven were sold, a part of them at a slight advance upon the minimum price. The proceeds of the sale of November 26, 1866, amounted to ($77,022⁸⁴/₁₀₀) seventy-seven thousand and twenty-two dollars ⁸⁴/₁₀₀. The proceeds of the last sale will not be realized in season for this Report. The total amount of the proceeds of sale, excluding the sale of the 8th instant, is $2,424,816⁸⁸/₁₀₀. The total amount of expenditures to this date is $1,227,789¹/₁₀₀. The quantity of land unsold, nearly all of which is filled, is 960,000 square feet, the value of which may be estimated at least $1,500,000.

It has not been the policy of the Commissioners to force the sales of lands. They have offered them only as money was required for carrying on the work, or as it was presumed that the land would be taken for immediate improvement or as a desirable investment. Thus the Commissioners, though they have had to rely solely for means to carry on the work upon the sale of land made to the contractors in 1858, and on one moiety of the proceeds of subsequent sales, have been enabled to conduct the enterprise with success, and make it contribute largely to the revenues of the Commonwealth. The high character of these improvements on the Back Bay, and the progress of the city in wealth and in population, render the demand for the unsold lands certain at no distant day.

Chapter 338 of the Acts of the year 1867 renders it imperative for the Commissioners on Public Lands to convey to the City of Boston "that part of Berkeley Street situate on the Commonwealth's lands, in the Back Bay, as it is now located and completed, sixty feet wide;" and there is a further provision in the Act, that "the said City is authorized to widen the roadway of said street, whenever authorized to do so by the governor and council, to the width of eighty feet without any claim for damages by the abutters on said street." A deed corresponding with the provisions of this Act will soon be submitted to your Excellency for approval. But the Commissioners take this opportunity to suggest that, in their judgment, further legislation relative to the conveyance of streets to the City of Boston, is necessary. By law the Commissioners have authority to make these conveyances, but no law exists limiting the time within which the streets, when so conveyed, shall be accepted. In November, 1865, the Commissioners presented to the City of Boston a legal conveyance of that part of Newbury Street which extends from Arlington Street to Berkeley, and thence to Clarendon Street. The City conditionally accepted the latter portion of the street, and omitted to accept the former, which was equally well graded at the time the conveyance was tendered, and upon which have been placed a church and taxable property of great value to the city. No reason for such apparently inconsistent action has been given the Commissioners, and they deem the question how long abutters upon a street shall be largely taxed for municipal purposes, while municipal privileges are thus withheld, a fair subject for legislative inquiry.

The Mill Dam and its connecting roads and bridges, for the purposes contemplated in chapter 201 of the Acts of the year 1861, have received due attention of the Commissioners the past year, and the necessary repairs and improvements have been made. They have to report the amount of money received for tolls from the first of May, 1863, to October 15, 1867, at $89,850.⁸⁴/₁₀₀. The expenses during the same time, for grading the roads, rebuilding and repairing bridges and sidewalks, watering and lighting the Mill Dam road, collecting tolls, &c., have been $58,471.⁸²/₁₀₀. This leaves a net income of $31,478.⁸⁶/₁₀₀. The amount deposited with the treasurer of the Commonwealth is $30,500 bearing interest at six per cent. The teams and materials used on the road are also the property of the Commonwealth.

The Commissioners would again call attention to the subject of a division of the accumulated fund among the various municipalities to which the connecting roads of the Mill Dam extend, on condition of their accepting their several portions of these roads as public highways. The propriety of discontinuing the tolls at the earliest possible moment will hardly be questioned; and this result is rendered even more desirable by circumstances connected with the increased use of portions of these roads, which contribute very little to the fund. For instance the Brighton and Watertown branch (formerly the Watertown turnpike) was, when assumed by the Mill Corporation, an essential contributor to the Mill Dam tolls ; but since the West Boston or Cambridge Bridge was made free, the Watertown branch has contributed nothing of importance to the fund. The Arsenal bridge has been rebuilt at heavy expense since these roads came into possession of the Commonwealth ; a large additional expense was incurred in building a draw to this bridge, at the solicitation of citizens of Watertown, and under direction of the legislature ; the travel between Watertown and Brighton has become so large as to require a greatly increased expense in keeping the road and bridge in repair ; and the traffic accommodated by this avenue is of great importance to at least one of the municipalities to which it extends. If the tolls are much longer continued, it therefore becomes a question whether a road which contributes little or nothing to the fund, but connects and accommodates the business relations between populous and wealthy towns, ought not to be assumed by those towns at once, and on such equitable terms as the legislature may prescribe.

ANNUAL REPORT

OF THE

FOR THE YEAR ENDING

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE, }
JANUARY 1, 1868. }

To the Honorable Speaker of the House of Representatives.

SIR:—I have the honor to transmit to the legislature a report, which is appended, of the cases argued, tried or conducted by the Attorney General of the Commonwealth during the year 1867. A change having occurred in the office during the year, some of these cases were conducted by my predecessor, and others by myself.

In compliance with the duty imposed upon me, I have given opinions upon various questions of law submitted to me by the Governor and other officers of the Commonwealth, and a condensed statement is hereto appended of the substance of some of them, which are deemed proper to be made public at this time, in order that it may be known what construction has been put upon the constitutional and statutory provisions under consideration.

It is likewise made my duty to present such observations and statements as in my opinion the criminal jurisprudence and the proper and economical administration of the criminal law warrant and require.

The most conspicuous fact to which I desire to call attention is the increase of homicides within this Commonwealth.

Three degrees of criminal homicide are recognized by the statutes of Massachusetts, namely: murder in the first degree, murder in the second degree, and manslaughter. The first is punishable by death, the second by imprisonment for life, and the third by imprisonment not exceeding twenty years, or by fine.

There is no distinction in the form of indictment for the two degrees of murder; but a general charge of murder is set forth, and the degree is found by the jury. Within the past year no less than ten indictments for murder have been pending in the courts of the Commonwealth, and several homicides have recently occurred, upon which no indictments have yet been found.

Of these various indictments, but one has been tried within the year, namely, that against Rounds, in Suffolk County, which was tried by my predecessor. After the evidence for the Commonwealth had been put in, the prisoner tendered a plea of guilty of murder in the second degree, which was accepted, and he was sentenced accordingly. Two other indictments are pending in Suffolk County, and an early trial of them is expected. Of the remaining seven indictments, two have not yet reached the Supreme Judicial Court; in two instances it has been deemed advisable to substitute indictments for manslaughter in place of the indictments for murder; in one instance a plea of guilty of manslaughter has been accepted, and in two instances the prisoners have been committed to insane hospitals before trial, under the provisions of General Statutes, chapter 172, section 14.

As has been intimated above, there is at present no mode of presenting in an indictment a charge of murder in the second degree. If an indictment for murder is found, it is transmitted to and entered in the Supreme Judicial Court when next in session for the county. In some counties the terms of that court are so infrequent that considerable delays in trials for murder are often inevitable. Thus, the only term of that court held in Norfolk County is in February, and if a murder is committed there in March, the indictment cannot ordinarily be entered in the Supreme Judicial Court for eleven months afterwards; and not until then can a time be fixed for the trial, which will probably be as much as two months later.

I respectfully recommend a change in the statutes, so that indictments for murder may, if the grand jury choose, specify the degree of murder intended to be charged; and that indictments for murder in the second degree may be tried in the Superior Court; and that indictments for murder in the first degree shall at once be transmitted to and entered in the Supreme Judicial Court for the county at any time, either in term time or vacation ; and that the clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court for the county shall thereupon send notice thereof to the chief or first justice of the Supreme Judicial Court and to the Attorney General, with a copy of the indictment, and a time may thereupon be appointed by said justice, or any other justice, of said court, for the arraignment of the prisoner upon the indictment, which time may be either in term time or vacation ; and the proceedings upon his arraignment, and all other proceedings in the case, may be as now provided by law.

The number of criminal cases in which questions of law have been brought from the Superior Court to the Supreme Judicial Court, upon exceptions or appeal, is very large ; and during the past year, as heretofore, the rulings of the Superior Court have been affirmed in a very large proportion of them. In many cases, indeed, when the cases have been reached, the counsel for the defendants have not attempted to support their appeals or exceptions by argument.

Thus, in Barnstable County, where there were two cases, in both the exceptions were overruled ; in Berkshire County, where there was but a single case, the exceptions were waived ; in Franklin, Hampshire and Hampden Counties, where there were sixteen cases, the exceptions were overruled in every instance ; in Worcester County, where there were thirty-six cases, the rulings of the Superior Court were affirmed, either upon argument or without argument, in thirty-two instances, and reversed in three, one case being still undecided ; in Plymouth, where there were three cases, the exceptions were overruled in every instance ; in Bristol, the exceptions were overruled in ten cases, and sustained in one case ; and in the other counties, the cases from which were heard in Boston, and were conducted in part by my predecessor, sixty-nine cases have been decided, in sixty-one of which the rulings of the Superior Court were affirmed, and in eight reversed. In all, the rulings of the Superior Court have been affirmed in one hundred and twenty-five cases, and reversed in twelve cases.

This statement clearly shows, what I believe the opinions of all judges and prosecuting officers of experience will confirm, that in very many instances questions are raised in criminal cases which are clearly frivolous or immaterial or intended for delay. There are two principal evils incident to this practice. One is the delay of justice. This is partially met by the provision in General Statutes, chapter 115, section 10, providing that in such cases the presiding justice may pass sentence, notwithstanding the allowance of exceptions. The other is the increased cost of the administration of the criminal law. At present the whole costs in criminal cases, including copies of the papers, are taxed to the counties. It seems to me that it is practicable to discriminate between cases which present questions proper for judicial determination and those which do not; and that in the latter class of cases the defendants may properly be required to pay their own costs.

By the provisions of General Statutes, chapter 86, section 50, when intoxicating liquors, seized upon search-warrants, have been adjudged to be forfeited to the Commonwealth, such liquors as are deemed suitable for certain specified uses are to be delivered over to the agents of cities and towns to be sold, and the net proceeds are to be paid over to the treasurer of the Commonwealth. Probably a considerable quantity of such liquors has been delivered over, during the several years that the above provision, and the similar one in a preceding statute, have been in force; and some such liquors have probably been sold by the agents, and others probably now remain in their hands, the property of the Commonwealth.

The treasurer or other officers having general charge of the property of the Commonwealth have received no notice when liquors were so delivered over to agents of cities or towns, and have no means of knowledge to enable them to bring such agents to account; and I am apprehensive that the Commonwealth may have lost some money by reason of the failure of such agents to pay over the avails of forfeited liquors to the Commonwealth. On inquiry at the office of the treasurer, I find that no sum has ever been received by him from forfeited liquors until the past year, when one thousand dollars was received through this office, upon a compromise of a litigated claim.

Deeming this matter within the general scope of my duty, I respectfully recommend some appropriate legislation adapted to ascertain what property of this description, belonging to the Commonwealth, now remains in the hands of the liquor agents of the various towns and cities, and what sums, if any, may be due from such present or past agents, on account of sales thereof.

I also respectfully recommend the passage of a statute providing that, in addition to present provisions upon the subject, any justice of any court of record may at any time, in term time or in vacation, order witnesses for the Commonwealth in any case pending before such court, to recognize, either with or without sureties, to appear and testify at the next or any succeeding term of the said court, and may issue proper process to bring such witnesses before him for the purpose.

The statute of 1867, chapter 254, authorizes the Commonwealth to challenge two jurors peremptorily in criminal causes. I have not been able to learn that thus far this power has ever been exercised. I have instituted inquiries of the various district attorneys for the purpose of being able to give complete information on this subject. In the absence of such complete information, I desire respectfully to submit my own opinion, adopted after much consideration, though without opportunity of observing its practical operation, that the statute is a wise one and should be retained, at least until further trial. It seems to me proper that, in the trial of an ordinary criminal offence—murder, assault, larceny, burglary, forgery, or the like—the prosecuting officer should possess the power to set aside a limited number of jurors, who may appear to him to be clearly unfit to sit in judgment upon the case, although no legal reason can be assigned for his exclusion.

In the last report of the Attorney General, certain cases were referred to which had been carried on writs of error to the Supreme Court of the United States. These have all been decided in favor of the Commonwealth.

Two civil actions brought by the Commonwealth to recover taxes from corporations, have within the past year been carried on writs of error to the Supreme Court of the United States, and are now pending therein.

Notwithstanding the great number of criminal cases which require attention, the principal labor and responsibility in the discharge of the duties of this office still arise from the civil business. The whole number of civil cases pending in court in which the Commonwealth is a party or interested, now in charge of the Attorney General, is forty-six, and some of these involve large pecuniary values, and questions of importance and difficulty.

The amount of money collected in this office for the Commonwealth during the past year has been $49,405.25.

I respectfully repeat the recommendation of my predecessor, that the Attorney General may be authorized to appoint an assistant, who, under his direction, may aid him in the performance of his official duties.

I have the honor to be,

Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

CHARLES ALLEN.

A B S T R A C T S

Of Official Opinions of the Attorney General, from May 1st to December 31st, 1867.

ALIEN PASSENGERS.

One who, not being a sailor by occupation, nor intending to become one, but desiring simply to be transported from one port to another, makes a contract with the master of a vessel by which he is to work his passage, is a passenger, within the meaning of Gen. Sts. c. 71, § 15, prohibiting alien passengers to be landed in this Commonwealth without giving bond or paying head money; and the fact that such person is entered on the ship's list as one of the crew, at a merely nominal rate of wages, will not vary this construction.

CONSTITUTIONAL LAW.

A statute authorizing the Commonwealth, in a criminal cause, to challenge peremptorily two of the jurors from the panel called to try the cause, is constitutional.

It is competent for the general court to pass an act uniting two municipal corporations, with a provision that the same shall not take effect unless accepted by a vote of the majority of the inhabitants of both of them within a specified time.

EMPLOYMENT OF CHILDREN IN FACTORIES.

Under St. 1867, c. 285, no child between the age of ten and fifteen years may be employed in any manufacturing or mechanical establishment within this Commonwealth, unless he has attended school at least three months during the twelve months next preceding such employment.

The effect of the first proviso in the same section is, that this rule applies to every such child who has lived within the Commonwealth during the preceding six months.

FISHERIES (RIVER).

The Commissioners of River Fisheries may use part of the money provided by St. 1867, c. 844, for building fish-ways over dams, where the proprietors of the dams are not bound to establish them.

INCOMPATIBILITY OF OFFICES.

A register of probate who accepted the office of register of bankruptcy under the laws of the United States, before the passage of St. 1867, c. 857, § 2, is not entitled to continue in both offices; but, unless he resigns his office of register of bankruptcy, he ought to be removed from his office of register of probate.

INTOXICATING LIQUORS.

The term of office of a town liquor agent, appointed under Gen. Sts. c. 86, § 17, extends to the full period of twelve calendar months from the date of his appointment, although such appointment is not made until after the expiration of three months from the first Monday of May; unless the certificate of his appointment shows on its face that his term of office is to expire on the first Monday of May.

City and town liquor agents have no authority to sell forfeited intoxicating liquors, which come to them under decree of court, except for medicinal, chemical and mechanical purposes, or to be used in the arts.

Such agents have no authority to sell such liquors to persons who buy to sell again; but only to consumers.

In selling forfeited liquors which come to city or town liquor agents under decree of court, such agents act as agents of the Commonwealth, and not as agents of the cities or towns or of the state liquor commissioner; and they are entitled to a reasonable compensation for their services.

The authority of special agents of the state liquor commissioner, appointed by him in the city of Boston, under Gen. Sts. c. 86, § 9, is limited to the sale of liquors received by him from the commissioner. Such agents are simply agents of the commissioner, and are in no respect agents of the city.

If forfeited liquors which come to the possession of agents of cities or towns for sale, under decree of court, are found to be impure, or become impure while in their possession, they have no authority to sell the same in a state of impurity, or to sell the same to rectifiers or distillers, to be converted into alcohol and sold again ; but they may cause such liquors to be rectified, acting for the Commonwealth, and using reasonable and proper means therefor, subject always to express directions from the Commonwealth or its proper officers.

LOAN AND FUND ASSOCIATIONS.

There is no statute now in force authorizing the incorporation of loan and fund associations, without special charters.

PAUPERS.

If state pauper children, who are not liable to be a charge to the state for more than six months, are in any of the state almshouses, it is the duty of the superintendent thereof to furnish to them such instruction as may be reasonable, under the circumstances ; and to this end he may properly arrange for their instruction in the common schools of the town in which the almshouse is situated, and pay therefor a reasonable sum ; and in his account with the state he may properly be allowed for the same.

The Gen. Sts. c. 71, § 7, do not authorize sending a pauper, against his consent, out of this Commonwealth to another state in which he may have recently gained a settlement, provided he has a derivative settlement in any town within this Commonwealth.

PEDDLERS.

Watches and watch chains are not jewelry, within the meaning of Gen. Sts. c. 50, § 15, prohibiting hawkers and peddlers from selling jewelry and other articles.

PROVINCETOWN HARBOR.

The commissioners appointed under Res. 1867, c. 86, in determining upon a plan to be reported by them for the protection and preservation of Cape Cod Harbor at Provincetown, are not limited to the method which is mentioned in the last clause of the first section of the resolve. The purpose of that provision was to enlarge and not to restrict their power.

The governor and council have no authority, under that resolve, to approve of a plan for the protection and preservation of Cape Cod Harbor at Provincetown; which by the estimate of the commissioners requires an expenditure of $149,000.

SCHOOL FUND.

The new shares received by way of stock dividend upon the shares held, as a portion of the school fund, in the Western Railroad Corporation, should not be distributed as income, but should be added to the principal of that fund.

STATE HOUSE.

No appropriation of money having been made by the legislature to meet the expense of making the alterations, improvements and repairs in the State House, provided for in Res. 1867, c. 84, the general authority conferred upon the commissioners therein named to carry out the purpose of the resolve includes authority to do so upon the credit of the Commonwealth.

Under the peculiar circumstances of the present case, if the commissioners can effect a material saving to the Commonwealth by borrowing money and giving a note or notes therefor in the name of the Commonwealth, and if they have complied with the requirements of the resolve in reference to contracting for the whole of the work within the maximum sum there fixed, they have authority to give such note or notes in the name of the Commonwealth, not exceeding that sum.

The language of the resolve does not require the commissioners to contract for the whole work upon the State House in a single contract.

Since the death of the president of the senate, the full power originally conferred upon him and the speaker of the house of representatives, in making the alterations, improvements and repairs in the State House, vests in the latter.

TAXES.

Under St. 1862, c. 224, a tax is to be levied and collected upon the full amount of all premiums actually received by insurance companies for insurance, either in cash or in notes absolutely payable; without any deduction for re-insurance, in case a re-insurance is afterwards effected. And it is immaterial that such re-insurance is effected on the same day with the original insurance.

The rule is no different in this respect if a re-insurance is rendered necessary in order to comply with the requirement of Gen. Sts. c. 58, § 32, providing that no stock company shall hold, on any one risk, a sum exceeding one-tenth of the capital existing, and surplus, after making certain deductions.

If premium notes are taken for a percentage of the nominal sum covered by an open policy of insurance, before any risks are indorsed thereon, and before such policy attaches to any actual risk, such notes are not taxable under St. 1862, c. 224, as premiums actually received; but it should be ascertained, in such case, what premiums have been received upon actual contracts of insurance.

Under St. 1865, c. 283, § 4, in estimating the fair cash valuation of all the shares constituting the capital stock of the Boston and Lowell Railroad Corporation, for the purpose of taxation, the tax commissioner should include the added value which the stock issued on or before December 5th, 1866, has acquired from the fact that a dividend is promised to be paid upon it in 1873.

Co-operative associations organized under St. 1866, c. 290, are taxable under the provisions of St. 1865, c. 283, §§ 3-5.

CONDUCT OF THE MEN.

duct of the prisoners has been uniformly good, and performed their labors with apparent cheerfulness.

The number of convicts at the prison September 30, v their average age being about 26 years ; the oldest is 63 y the youngest 16 years. About four-fifths of the numm mitted the crimes for which they were sentenced either or indirectly by the use of intoxicating drinks.

LIBRARY.

Library contains 1,700 well selected volumes. The school is well provided with good teachers from the New York churches, who cheerfully engage in this work.

SABBATH SERVICES.

Services upon the Sabbath are quite interesting; the Chaplain, and the Deputy Chaplain, sit on one side of the Chapel, and the Deputy Chaplain on the other; the other officers of the prison sitting in promenade on each side of the chapel. A number of visitors are always present. There is an organ in front and a choir composed of the prisoners. The entire exercises are conducted with perfect order and decorum. The audience shows much interest in the Chaplain, Rev. Mr. Carlton, who is a very able and faithful preacher.

ADDITIONAL CELLS.

The sum of $50,000 was appropriated by the last court to increase the number of cells in the west wing work is nearly completed, and when finished will add to the prison, at a cost not exceeding $40,000.

FINANCES.

The total receipts of the prison for the year ending Sept. 30, 1867, (including $5,686.15, stock on hand September 30, 1866,) . . . $122

The total current expenses for the prison, including officers' salaries, for the year ending Sept. 30, 1867, are, (including $5,686.15, stock on hand,) 10

Net profit, $2

The financial management of the prison the past has been more successful than ever before. It will be seen from the above statement that the income from the prison has been $22,346.¹⁶/₁₀₀ over and above its current expenses, including the salaries of the officers. It may be proper to add that the officers received $1,424.84, in 1866, under Special Resolution of the General Court, which is not included in the Vardaman account, not having passed through his hands.

THE WARDEN, ETC.

The State is largely indebted to the Warden, Hon. John Haynes, for the present financial condition of the prison. Having given much thought and care to the same, which has never been unmindful of the prisoners, and has made every provision for all their necessary wants. By his moderate and courteous manners and his firmness of character he secured the confidence of the convicts and the esteem of all the officers and all other parties having official intercourse with him. It is a regret that the last legislature of the State did not adopt the committee's report recommending an increase of the Warden's salary to three thousand dollars.

The efficient Clerk, William Peirce, Esq., who is faithful and prompt in the discharge of his arduous duties, is also lit for his successful efforts in the same direction. State officers, by their fidelity in the discharge of duty, have aided in securing the successful management of the prison, and have our commendation.

SUGGESTIONS.

relating to reports, (chap. 303, sect. 1 of the Acts of 1863, "An Act in relation to the State Prison," approved May 14,) provide that the Inspectors shall annually, before the fifteenth day of October, make a report to the governor and council, containing a statement made to them by the Warden, of the condition of the prison, containing various details, &c. Chapter 307 of the same year, approved on May 14, requires that the Warden of the State Prison shall annually, substantially the same returns to the secretary of the State Charities, to be lodged with him before the first day of October, under a forfeiture of one hundred dollars. It is evident from the title of the bill, "An Act concerning the returns of Sheriffs, Keepers of Jails and Houses of Correction and Overseers of the Poor," that it was not generally intended to apply to the Warden of the State Prison; for it is probable that two bills would be passed on the same day, one by the Finance Committee after a careful investigation, relating wholly to the State Prison, requiring the Inspectors, to make these returns on the first day of December, and another requiring him to do the same on the fifteenth of October.

The nature of the contracts for the labor of the convicts was known to the legislature at the passage of this Act, and from other facts is fully understood by the Finance Committee who introduced the bill relating to the State Prison, the Warden has been unable to comply with the last Act.

I therefore suggest, that as all this information is now before the legislature in the annual reports of the officers of the prison, and printed several weeks in advance of the session of the board of state charities, that the Act be so amended as not to apply to the Warden of the State Prison, but that the time for making it be made to comply with chapter 307 of the Acts of 1864.

We also fully approve of the recommendation of the for an improvement in the doors of the cells of the wing, as specified in his report.

ESTIMATES.

Our estimates for the maintenance of the prison for the 1868, are based upon the present cost of supplies in the departments, and assuming that the number of men is (534,) and the receipts also upon the labor of men now employed by contractors, and at the same prices;

WARDEN'S REPORT.

governor ALEXANDER H. BULLOCK, Governor, and the the Executive Council of the Commonwealth of setts.

EN:—It is with feelings of profound gratitude to our ther that I am enabled in this, my Tenth Annual state that the past year has been crowned with prosperity and success; it has never been surpassed in the previous history of the institution.
has occurred to disturb or mar the usual routine of notwithstanding we have had an unusual number workmen employed in the yard, made unavoidable ence of extending the west wing, and the changes ons in the workshops by the Tucker Manufacturing er, industry and a disposition to submit cheerfully sary discipline has prevailed almost universally.

HEALTH.

year has passed without fevers, epidemics or con-cases of any kind. With a population of 647, we ven deaths, about the usual percentage, as follows:—

	Color.	Age.	Crime.	Sentence.	Cause.	Time Served.
,	White,	20	Attempt at rape,	3 yrs.,	Consumption,	1 y. 5 m.
,	"	46	Attempt to poison,	12 "	"	1 y. 7 m.

.	"	40	Attempt to kill, .	15 "	Apoplexy of lungs, . .	4 y. 9 m.

It will be observed that, as usual, a majority of our are from consumption. This is the prevailing complaint in prison, and is owing, I doubt not, first to the confinement which has a tendency to develop tubercular disease, secondly, to the baneful practice of self-abuse, which prevails to a very great extent in this, as in all prisons; this is one of the greatest evils connected with prison life, one that cannot be controlled, prevented or guarded against. No less than 15 convicts, whose ages varied from 17 to 50, were admitted to the hospital the past year in consequence of bleeding from the lungs, which was doubtless greatly augmented, if not caused, by this practice. Of this number, 15 were occupants of the north wing, the cells of which are the smallest and least ventilated in the institution. This in itself would seem to be a good reason why the improvement in these cells, recommended in another part of this Report, should be made.

PARDONS.

Fourteen have been discharged by pardon, thirteen by the Governor and one by the President, as follows:—

* Pardoned by the President.

I can add anything to what I have said in previous on this subject. Experience has confirmed the opinion expressed, that it is the most important principle with prison discipline. The facilities for obtaining our country are so great, that it has become the all-thought of the convicts; the probability and expectedly discussed on their way to the prison; it is of nine-tenths of the letters written, and the personal with their friends; it preys upon them day and hope deferred maketh the heart sick."

truthful illustration of the proverb cannot be found situation of a prisoner whose case is before the consideration; it frequently unfits them for every-roying the appetite, rendering them unable to sleep and in some instances, when unsuccessful, the loss or death, has been the consequence.

objection to it is the liability of making mistakes; of success of the few who can command money tial friends is certainly better than the large major-umbers who are entirely destitute of those advan-at A or B may be pardoned is of little consequence de world, but its effect is quite another thing here, they chance to leave behind them C and D, who longer, for a less offence than theirs; the effect discipline in such cases cannot be otherwise than dele-y have the impression that the authorities of the more or less to do with every pardon; at least, that or approval is necessary. Distrust and dissatisfac-ndered in consequence.

successful at the head of an institution of this kind, ce of the inmates must first be obtained; until that hed you labor in vain. I would not shut out hope he greatest criminal, yet I would make the obtain-on so difficult and uncertain, that the chances of ld not be considered when contemplating crime; ences should be fully understood; nothing should ance; if convicted, they should be made to feel that e must assuredly be carried into effect. It is not that deters men from committing crime; it is the chances of conviction, and the certainty, if convicted, that sentence will be executed; and just in proportion as the sentence is rendered more or less certain, will crime exist in a community.

Our criminal code should be revised, reducing the sentence for life in all cases, except for murder in the second degree to a term of years; establishing, as far as practicable, a uniformity of sentences, not so severe as to crush the criminal, or lay upon his mind the impression that it is vengeance, not justice, that is meted out to him.

I do not favor long or extraordinary sentences, but such as are adapted to the particular case (without reference to others,) actual demands, with the understanding that, with the exception of what time may be gained by good behavior, the full term is to be served. Do this, and you will not only confer a blessing upon the convict by relieving his mind from the terrible suspense and anxiety he is now subjected to, but an important step will be taken towards the suppression of crime.

The bill in regard to conditional pardons before the legislature, at the last session, was so emasculated before its passage as to be of little value. I hope the subject may be reviewed at the next session, and perfected.

DISCIPLINE.

How shall the necessary discipline in a prison be enforced is a question often asked; a perfect and satisfactory method is still a desideratum. Various kinds of punishments are resorted to in the several States to accomplish the end, but all are, to a greater or less extent, objectionable; the theory of reward and punishment is not, as yet, sufficiently recognized to make them effective.

In Maine—The dark cell and lash not prohibited, though the latter is never used.

New Hampshire—The same.

Rhode Island—The dark cell.

achusetts, the dark cell has been the only punishment ten years. This, in all cases, has been found sufficient doubtless the least objectionable of any system of now in use. I disapprove of it, however, for the reasons: First, that in darkening the cell, you must exclude the air, and destroy the ventilation; the of the convict who is frequently or for any length subjected to this discipline, must unavoidably become Secondly, the labor for the time he is shut up is lost substitute that will prove effective and free from objections, is certainly very desirable. I have given thought and attention to the subject, and have come to the conclusion that a system of marks can be introduced which will, in great measure, supersede all other punishments. I am in favor of the idea that reformation is the grand object of the prison, and that kindness and rewards are the agencies to be employed. I would recommend for good conduct and industry that every convict should be entitled to one good mark a month, and one bad mark should be deducted one day for every year of his sentence, so that he should not exceed ten a month. For every bad mark the number of days to be added to his sentence, instead of the time now passed in the dark cell. For every month when no good or bad marks were received, nothing should be deducted from his sentence. The Warden to have authority to bestow good marks on Christmas, and other occasions, for good and meritorious conduct. No pardons to be granted without the recommendation of the authorities of the prison, and liable to be revoked by the governor and council at any time before the original sentence would expire. If a convict is reconvicted, to serve the unexpired term of his first sentence; and if regularly discharged and reconvicted, the term on his first sentence to be added to his second. If reconvicted a third time, to be imprisoned during the pleasure of the court.

The principal objection to the above plan is, that it places too much power in the authorities of the prison. But is it not better to trust one man with power as another, if you can find a worthy one? Cannot a man be found who may be trusted with these, as well as for a judge with still greater powers? In Massachusetts, a judge can in some cases impose a fine, a sentence of a few months in jail, or life in Prison, for the same offence, at his pleasure; and you have never heard it intimated that this power was too greatly abused.

Again, it would only be extending the powers man now possess, either directly or indirectly, in our commutation laws. The Massachusetts law is as follows:—

“The warden shall keep a record of the conduct of each convict, and for each month that a convict appears by such record to have fully observed all the rules and requirements of the prison, if he has not have been subjected to punishment, there shall, with the consent of the governor and council, be deducted from the term or terms of his sentence, as follows:— From a term of less than three years, ten days; from a term of three and less than seven years, two days; from a term of seven and less than ten years, four days; from a term of ten years or more, five days.”

It will be noted, that for a term of ten years, a convict who observes all the rules of the prison and is not punished, has allowed six hundred days; thus reducing his sentence to eight years and four months. We start then with a convict standing that his sentence is really but eight years and four months, and our practice has been to add a day to this sentence every day that he is shut up for punishment. This is explained to the convict upon his admission to the prison, and he therefore understands that every day's punishment in effect adds one day to his sentence. The extent of his punishment is left to himself; he has only to express a wish to go to the wall, a promise to obey the rules to be released; nothing more is ever required of him. It will be observed, therefore, that the Warden has the power now of controlling one year of the time of every man sentenced to ten years, and four months for every one sentenced to two years in our prison. Would the proposed law confer any new power upon him? Certainly not; it would only be extending a principle admitted by every one familiar with its working, which has proved eminently successful in prison discipline. It is no objection to our commutation laws. They think the law is wrong; that no promises of rewards or mitigation ould be made or held out to these men ; that they ompelled and not hired to behave well. But is it with Divine teaching ? Are not the scriptures romises of reward to those who repent and keep ot all sinners before God, and does it necessarily because men are found inside of prison walls that e only sinners, or that they are to be excluded or reach heaven by some other way or means than on, the convict should be surrounded with every ce possible, such as religious and secular instruccases, and lectures, holidays and privileges of ds to be earned by good conduct. But above all, ntlemanly, humane and reliable persons should be ome in contact with him as officers or instructors, pending upon their influence as on all the other ited. The idea that it is of little consequence who of these men, providing they are sufficiently muscuetic to cause them to be feared, is a great mistake ; mplishments are very desirable, but of secondary n ; it is brains not muscle that is required. They rned by fear, but by the intellect, quick to discover vantage of the slightest failing of the officer. It is ecessary that he should be a true man, capable of his temper and governing himself under all circum-harging his duties firmly, faithfully and unostenta-ding the slightest familiarity, and by so doing he them into any shape he pleases. If, on the other irritable, vacillating, open to temptation, or in any able, he will certainly fail, and confusion and gn wherever he has control.

STATE PRISON.

An officer should be above suspicion, and at no time especially when on duty, should the smell of that demerit has been instrumental in consigning to this prison directly or indirectly, at least eight-tenths of its inmates taint his breath, for from that moment he becomes to the convict an object of contempt without influence for good, may be feared and obeyed but not respected.

He must also be a man in whose integrity the authorities have implicit confidence, for through him are made the reports for misconduct, and to err or cause a prisoner to be punished undeservedly would be a serious wrong. To say we have never erred in this particular would be to claim that we are more than human; but the efforts we make and the means we use to enable us to arrive at a just conclusion are manifest as to disarm criticism should we unfortunately be in a mistake.

I have no doubt that at least eighty per cent. of all criminals of crime can be reclaimed and made useful members of society by proper discipline. It cannot be accomplished by harsh or cruel treatment or any other process which has a tendency to crush out and destroy their self-respect. On the other hand every effort should be made to fan into a blaze the latent spark of manhood they may bring with them into the prison; they must be assisted and encouraged in every possible way; an opportunity should be afforded them to work out their own redemption, to do something for themselves; and this should be done in some way similar to that I have proposed. My experiment be tried, and I feel assured that the course which follows such a course for a series of years, although it may commence with selfish motives, will acquire almost inevitably habits of industry, decision of character and a confidence in himself which will not desert him when he goes back to the world.

In adhering as far as practicable to the foregoing principles my success has exceeded my fondest anticipations. For almost ten years that I have held the position of Warden of this institution, I have never to my recollection received from a convict an uncivil answer or an unpleasant word, although it may sound egotistical, I think I can say that in winning their good will and confidence to an extent surpassed in any institution of the kind.

HOLIDAYS.

Days have been continued, and attended with the results which has heretofore characterized them. They are an important element in our discipline, and are regarded with a great deal of pleasure by the inmates. They are oases in the great desert of silence and monotony. They are enshrouded, and are anticipated and enjoyed in a manner not to be described, but must be witnessed to be appreciated. On these occasions we are usually in the presence of many of our friends, among the most conspicuous of whom is Ex-Governor Andrew,* who has a deep interest in all that pertains to the success of the institution, or the welfare of its inmates; and although in the office, he does not forget us upon these occasions, and his presence and kind words has done much to elevate, and stimulate them in their efforts at improvement.

LECTURES.

"I was in prison and ye visited me."

On the last year, a new feature has been introduced into the institution, consisting of a series of eleven lectures, given in the chapel. The course included the

During the above, the community has been thrown into mourning, on the sudden death of Ex-Governor Andrew, a man of whom it can be said that he was the prisoner's friend, ever ready to listen to their real wrongs, and to aid them with his counsel and advice. Even in the war, when occupied from morn till night in the affairs of the nation, he always found time to examine and investigate all cases brought before him for consideration, without regard to whom the parties might be, or the nature with which they were charged. The labor he performed in the institution far greater than can be imagined by any one not familiar with the same. It can be truly said that he was not only honored and esteemed, but loved by all connected with this institution.

That the experiment proved a success can be readily understood, but the real benefit conferred can never be known. To many of our inmates it was a great novelty,—something coming as they do from a class who are not in the habit of patronizing lyceum lectures; but to all they were interesting and instructive to a great degree, awakening in the minds of many new thoughts and aspirations previously unknown. It created an unprecedented demand for books and information on the various subjects discussed.

We feel under great obligations to all those who have so generously and gratuitously lent us their aid, and I can assure them that although they may meet with more refined audiences in the outside world, yet nowhere will they find one that can so fully understand and appreciate a kind action.

CONTRACTS.

The contract held by F. M. Holmes & Company for the past five years for one hundred and fifty men, terminated on the 1st of last July. The men were secured by the Tucker Manufacturing Company, who pay $1.07 per week for them—an advance of fifty-seven cents.

In taking leave of the Messrs. Holmes, I desire to express my high appreciation of them personally and as corporations, in fulfilling in every respect their obligations to the State, and ready to aid and assist us in advancing measures deemed expedient for the discipline of the institution, and for the betterment of the inmates. When such men can be secured for the State, no fears need be had that the contract system will be successful.

The State has been particularly fortunate in the past, as at the present time, in obtaining high-minded men —men who have ever shown an interest in the convict that they might make out of his labor; and it is with I state that no contractor has ever complained that were not obedient, cheerful and industrious, and, no stints or tasks are set them, yet almost unversing more work than would be required of them. so with pride that I allude to the fact that the Tucker uring Company received a silver medal at the late nhibition, for bronzed iron work manufactured in this n; and so greatly interested were their majesties, the of France and the king of Prussia, in the beauty and ship of the articles exhibited, that they made quite purchases of the same. Orders from them, as well almost all parts of Europe, are being filled at the ime.

g the summer, a fair was held at the prison for the of raising money to purchase an organ for our chapel. ners contributed the articles, all of which were made and in their own time. I am happy to say that it e successful. Not only was $550 raised—enough to the organ and pay all the necessary expenses attend-air—but an amount of good realized by the donors ot be estimated.

FINANCES.

great pleasure in stating that pecuniarily the past has most successful year ever known in the institution. pts were $118,011.10, and our expenditures, $95,664.94, a clear profit of $22,346.16. This result has been shed, notwithstanding the salaries of the officers were by the last legislature about $6,000 per annum, and been obliged to pay more for beef, flour, beans, pease, e other articles, than we did the previous year. our present number, and the prices we now receive for or, even if the cost of provisions and clothing should e same, the State may hereafter count upon an annual m the prison of at least $25,000. The realization of uncement will be, I trust, satisfactory to the commu-readily appreciated by our tax-payers.

ESCAPES.

We have no law in this State by which a convict from the prison can be compelled, if recaptured, to make good the time he was absent. This, I think, is a great mistake. It is an inducement for them to attempt to escape which ought not to exist. The time they are absent from the prison under such circumstances ought not to be counted as a part of their sentence. True, they may be punished for the escape if recaptured within a certain time, but the statute of limitations does not prevent that, even before their original sentence would expire.

IMPROVEMENTS.

The sum of $50,000 was appropriated by the last Legislature for the purpose of extending the west wing of the prison by putting in one hundred additional cells. The work has been done in a most thorough manner, and at a cost not exceeding $40,000.

We have now 652 cells, independent of the hospital and infirmary, sufficient to accommodate as many as ever ought to be congregated in one prison.

There is one more improvement necessary in the north wing of the prison. This wing contains 304 cells; it was constructed in 1828, one of the first upon the principle of separating inmates at meal times and night; the cells are much better than those constructed at the present time, and the doors are nearly solid, admitting but little light and air. These doors give way to the grated doors similar to those in the other wings. The cost would not exceed $6,000, and the improved ventilation would add very much to the health and comfort of the inmates.

GENERAL REMARKS.

In my Report of 1865, in describing the new wing of the prison in 1850, I used this language: "This is, without doubt, the best prison in the world;" referring to the new building. The following extract from an article published in the October number of the "North American Review" upon American Prisons, would seem to imply that this was misunderstood.

still painfully true that our prison reports generally do communicate that dry kind of information which they are never, or else communicate it very defectively; while some of them are so disfigured with self-complacent praises of the institution where they are written, and one-sided statements of facts as greatly to lessen their value. This is, without exception, prison in the world, says one warden. * * * If this is the eye of the prison officers at Dublin, Berlin or London, Paris, Aux, Dr. Wichern or Sir Walter Crofton, we can imagine how they would be excited at the assurance of the Yankees."

I think it necessary to explain the error, for I felt that an examination would prove that the remark, when construed it, was not so very wide of the mark—on the whole, take it all in all, would not suffer in comparison with any other in the country, if in the world.

It is shown that there are others who entertain similar views. I could fill this Report with extracts from letters of distinguished individuals, not only at home, but from the highest degree complimentary to the institution, and necessary, but will content myself with the following. The committee of the Prison Association of New York, during the last two years have been examining the various prisons in Great Britain and Canada, and have recently made a very full report, in which, among a great many other kind of facts, they say:—

"We are signed have no hesitation in pronouncing the State Prison at Charlestown the banner prison in the country. In its architecture, its ventilation, its staff of officers, its discipline, and all its details it seems to us fairly entitled to this pre-eminence."

"At Charlestown you will see a prison under as thorough and as complete discipline as any on the American continent. * * * We are gratified to avow the conviction that the Massachusetts State Prison at Charlestown, considered, is the best which it has been our fortune to visit."

"The opinions were not based upon a casual observation of the committee, Dr. Theodore W. Dwight and Dr.

Wines, paid us several visits, and one occasion spent at the prison in order to see it in all its phases. I do not contend that our system or discipline is perfect; far from it; but the authorities of the prison have used the powers delegated to them by the statutes of the Commonwealth to improve them. It is comparatively easy to point out defects or to arrange upon paper a system of prison discipline which apparently would be all that was required, but quite another matter to reduce it to practice.

Not unfrequently do we hear the remark that the inmates of this prison are treated too well; that our policy is a lenient one; that the terrors the place formerly inspired are disappearing, and we shall soon have persons committing crimes for the purpose of coming here. These criticisms usually come from those who know but little about the subject; who have faith in no one but themselves. The following statistics upon the subject will, I trust, answer conclusively the carplings, and quiet their fears.

From 1847 to 1857 the discipline of the prison was severe and inflexible, based upon the idea that no good could come out of Nazareth. The principal method of enforcing discipline was the lash, used with great freedom and perseverance. What was the result? With an average population in the State of about 1,000,000 we received during the period, 1,622 prisoners, of whom 230 were recommitments. In 1857 the policy was changed, the commutation law adopted, the lash abolished. We recognize that though fallen they were still men created in God's own image, with minds to be improved and with souls to be saved, and various methods instituted to enlighten and elevate them, with the following results. From 1857 to 1867, with an average population in the State of 1,200,000, we received during the period, 1,495 prisoners, of whom 176 were recommitments.

CHAPLAIN'S REPORT.

To His Excellency ALEXANDER H. BULLOCK, Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and the Honorable

The Chaplain of the State Prison, in offering his report, would desire most gratefully to recognize the goodness of the great Disposer of all things, in the measure of success enjoyed through another year, and for the industry, and the general proper behavior of the men under his charge. He has no very striking incidents to relate, nor anything of a marked character to direct your attention to, but will proceed along in the even tenor of his way, trying to accomplish something for the benefit of the convicts.

Personal conversation, more or less protracted, according to the varying circumstances of different cases; Sabbath-school instruction, by teachers who feel their responsibility, and are much interested in the welfare of the taught; Divine service, preaching in the chapel, either by the Chaplain or some other minister with whom he exchanges (or some good Quaker who occasionally desires to address the prisoners;) religious services, consisting of reading the Scriptures, some exhortatory remarks, or relation of some fact or anecdote circulated favorably to impress the minds of the men, with music and singing; distributing tracts and small books, and religious papers as the "Christian," "Tract Journal," "Massachusetts Messenger," "Sunday School Advocate," "Massachusetts Youth's Companion," "Sabbath School Times," &c., &c.; singing the Scriptures, conversation and prayer with the prisoners in the hospital; placing the blessed Word of God in the hands of the men, including Italian, Portuguese, French and German, as well as English; these have been the chief means used during the last, as in former years, for the benefit of the prisoners committed to our spiritual oversight; and it is a source

has borne fruit, though the fruitage has not been as would have been desired, not enough so to break the r bend them down to the ground; still, some fruit, it, for which we thank God, and take courage to th hope.

persons have been accustomed to regard the inmates ons as beings so hardened and abandoned that they sible to moral and religious influences, and conse- t their reformation is hopeless. It is to be regretted ous people have imbibed this mistaken notion, and some ministers of the gospel, who preach that the us Christ cleanseth from all sin, think it is of no ch to convicts. Some have said that they did not each in the prison, because they did not believe it ny good. So then, according to them, while minis- preach that publicans, and harlots, and drunkards, hieves can be converted outside a prison, the moment s threshold, they must be given over as beyond the power of Him who has died on the cross, that r believeth in him might not perish, but have ever-the prisoners are mere youth, in whom the tender and sympathies of our nature are easily affected. m committed their offence (and in many cases their e,) under the influence of strong drink, and never but with feelings of the deepest chagrin, pain and Some were early in life cast as waifs upon the street, ents, nor brothers, nor sisters, nor friends to care for grew up in indolence and ignorance, in an atmo- taminated with vice and sin of every kind, and y temples of God were near by, pointing with their rd, they were never inside them, and knew scarcely Christ, heaven and salvation than the wild savages Africa. Some again are children of pious parents, m their earliest days the voice of family prayer, to attend church regularly, and the Sabbath school, nded by all religious appliances, and yet, through emptation, have fallen, and brought disgrace upon themselves, and shame and sorrow upon their friends; this as it may, the instances of radical reform that have come under our notice during nearly seven years, are sufficient to convince us that convicts are not beyond the remedial power of the blessed gospel, and that the gracious Sovereign of the universe, who giveth iniquity, transgression and sin, is as willing to forgive as to punish the "sighing of the prisoner" that comes from the prison, as to the voice of anguish that comes from the heart of the bruised and toiling slave, or the prayer of the mariner above the storm as he tosses on the billows of the deep, or the cry of penitence from the palace or the cottage, the city or the church.

It is the opinion of the Chaplain that Christians should pray more for the conversion of prisoners, and pray in faith, trusting that their prayers will be heard, and that in answer to them there will be revivals of pure and undefiled religion in the State prisons, jails, houses of correction, and kindred institutions all over the land. And why not? Such revivals have been. There was a revival in the State Prison of New York in 1836, an interesting account of which is given by the Rev. Job Washburn, which may be found in the report of the Prison Discipline Society.

There was a very powerful work of grace in one of our Northern State prisons a few years since, and a very large number of the prisoners were hopefully converted, and a regular church was organized, and many of the convicts united with it. There was a gracious revival in this very prison in the year 1842. Jared Curtis, who was Chaplain at that time says:—

"For several months a state of deep and solemn interest on the part of the prisoners on the momentous subject of religion, and the salvation of the soul, prevailed in the prison; an interest, felt not by a few, but by great numbers; an interest, embracing not the more ignorant only, but many of the intelligent and enlightened, and not a few of those who were hardened in sin, the sceptic, the reviler, the scoffer, the atheist; those whose human appearance, were beyond the reach of hope, and who, in the eyes of the world, would have been the last selected as likely to be the subjects of religious impressions. It is by no means to be supposed that all, whose minds were thus affected, became truly penitent, and received the renewing grace of God; but the writer cannot, for a moment, doubt that many were truly converted and became 'new and his humble, devoted disciples and followers. Even aghast, and were constrained to exclaim, 'This is the L.' They felt that no power short of divine could produce and effect such transformation of feeling and character, so entire, as they could not fail to witness. This state of being and interest commenced in February. At first it was principally to a single department of labor. Within a few weeks it extended itself in others, until finally it pervaded every part and no sensible diminution of interest was perceptible for months. To the officers and those conversant with the institution the usual aspect of things was remarkable. There was a new atmosphere. The labor and discipline were comparatively new. Prisoners felt that another eye than those of their officers was upon them, and that other objects than those of ordinary notice and duty engrossed the mind and heart. Instead of the very common question, how they might obtain release from the bondage of their present situation, the all-absorbing question was, What shall we do to be we must forbear to quote further, and suffice to say, that we have seen revivals in Sing Sing, Auburn, and many other prisons, and in jails, houses of correction and all kinds of reformatory and penal institutions.

Why should there not be? Is anything too hard for God? Doeth according to His will in the army of heaven and the inhabitants of the earth?" Is He not just as able to do great things as ever, and to manifest His powerful and glorious displays of Divine grace, bringing multitudes to the blessedness of redeeming mercy?

"Hail! Mighty Jesus! how divine
Is Thy victorious sword!
The stoutest rebel must resign
At Thy commanding word."

Why not such revivals, we ask again? The souls of men who have been brought down to such an extent as to be confined in penitentiary institutions are as valuable as the souls of men out of prison. Of whom, if they had their deserts, would have been long ago in the same places. And of those who have been broken any law of the land so as to be penitentiary prisoners, how many of them have cherished such wrong feelings, have nurtured and indulged envy, malice, revenge and other baleful passions to such an extent that the sight of Him who sees the heart and judges the soul, they may be worse than even some burglars and robbers.

Let not Christians then forget to pray for convicts. They are not all necessarily greater sinners than other men, many of them doubtless are. Let no one infer from this that we would palliate the crimes of men, or be in the least ; far from it. There are those here who have committed great crimes—crimes against God and humanity—are deserving of severe punishment, and all (with a few exceptions, perhaps two or three per cent.,) are deserving of the greater or less extent of the charges laid against them. They are suffering justly ; but what we contend against is that they are all such abandoned wretches that it is not to pray for them, or in any way labor for their redemption, and, therefore, it is our earnest desire and request that Christians would pray for them sometimes, if not daily, that they assemble their children around the family altar ; that they would sometimes remember them in the social meetings of prayer and conference meetings of the church ; and that the elders, occasionally at least, would present their case in the prayers of the sanctuary.

We would ask prayer also for the chaplains, that they may be men of vital piety, preaching the truth, and nothing but the truth, in love and faith, not shunning to declare the counsel of their Master, that the word may prove the power of God and the wisdom of God to salvation."

Out of 128 men who came here during the year, 1867, none could neither read nor write,—a rather larger per cent. than in 1866, but look at the facts and see who they were : six were brought up in Ireland and brought up Roman Catholics, one was brought up in Ireland and brought up Episcopalian, one was born in Ireland of Irish descent and brought up Catholic, seven were brought up in Massachusetts, and only one of whom was born in Massachusetts, and whom were slaves up to the time of the war, one was brought up in New England, brought up Roman Catholic, and only three were brought up in New England, one of them born in Rhode Island and the other two in Massachusetts. Thus, out of 128 persons who joined this institution during the last year, only five born in New England can neither read nor write.

the desirous of learning to read and write are afforded doing so. They are taught to read, and pens, ink and books are given them that they may learn to write. I have often been gratified in hearing some poor fellow come to him, his face lighted up with a smile, and say, "you won't have to write any more letters for me, I can write my letters now for myself." In speaking of writing, the chirography of some of the clerks here is very fine, and would do no discredit to a clerk or bank cashier.

The community generally could see what we see here of men imbibing alcoholic liquors, and hear all that some hundred individuals have told us concerning the difficulties, hardships, cruelties, sins and crimes commonly and indirectly with strong drink, there would, I think, be a more earnest effort than ever to stem the tide of rum and distilled damnation which now threatens to overwhelm the land. Of the 534 men now here, the greater portion are glad to vote for the prohibitory law; for many of them their safety from the perils of drunkenness depends to a great degree, on such a law. They realize their weakness and are fearful of themselves, and desire such a law to aid them in their resistance to the seductions of the rum. Rum has been their bane and curse. When about being discharged to go out again into the world to combat its varied temptations, in answer to the hope expressed that they would do well, they often say, "I shall do well enough if I can resist when urged to take a drink, but in some place where I can't get it, I shall do well." "If I come back here, it will be rum that brings me." They do not throw as many safeguards as possible around the fellows? Why not do everything to help them? There are men who will not only vote license and open saloons here to lure them to ruin, but will take them by the hand, having their quarters here and pretend to be their friends, offering the bottle to their lips, and thus running them back again. Oh, the tender mercies of the devils, the rummers and rumsellers. May not every man who is a fellow creature say, in the language of scripture,

"O my soul come not thou into their secret ; unto bly mine honor be not thou united."

If Massachusetts wishes for thinly populated pris number of daily applicants has been large. The six days which we had the greatest number, viz., 247, on the 13th, 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th and 19th of August; and several had diarrhœa.

number of days passed in the hospital was likewise explained by the fact that four or five individuals those with consumption, had ailments whose treatment required rest in a horizontal position for a long time. The case with D. R. Brown with obstinate chronic dysentery of Wm. McLaughlin with urinary fistula; of James McLaughlin entered prison with diarrhœa, being much worn by previous excesses and exposure; of Seth C. Vickery, with pulmonary hemorrhage and diarrhœa; and of one who had an abscess in both inguinal regions, running from the one to the other, threatening peritonitis, were long in reaching the stage of suppuration and death.

prisoners have died, four of them from pulmonary consumption and one of the four with disease far advanced when they entered the prison. Of the remaining three, one was found dead in his cell, another was moribund when seen, and the third had been in prison nearly ten years under treatment by himself, but calculated to break down vigorous constitution.

Robert Bradshaw entered prison May 26th, 1864. He caught cold in the spring of 1866 by leaving off his flannels. On the 13th, 1866, he entered the hospital. Cough came on with a sense of tightness across the chest. After some days he began to expectorate mucus streaked occasionally with blood. He gained flesh and strength rapidly. An examination of his chest revealed dullness under the left cavicle from the presence of tubercles. He died October 2d, 1866, aged 23. A post-mortem examination showed that his left lung had several tubercles and was crowded with tubercles in different stages of development. Two pints of fluid were found in left thorax, the walls of which were lined with a thick membrane, the result of inflammation. There was likewise an abscess in upper part of lung, and tubercles around it. Heart was very much diseased.

Dennis Gallavan was in the jail at Salem and New Bedford in the aggregate thirteen or fourteen months previous to his trial. He entered the prison February 21st, 1865, with a cough in his lungs, and in consequence of the feeble state of his health was released from a portion of the solitary confinement in the court, and admitted to the hospital. He was put on cod liver oil and iron, the usual treatment for consumptive disease. Months before he died he became impressed strongly with the conviction that his difficulty of breathing was caused by an invisible powder, or "stuff," as he termed it, thrown into his cell by those about him. His disease was slow in its progress, and he outlived several of those who entered the hospital subsequent to himself. He died October 19th, very much emaciated, having just walked across his room to his bed. He was 47 years. The right lung thoroughly adhered to the pleura, was filled with tubercles, and had an abscess in the superior portion. His left lung was less diseased.

Albert Slater entered prison February 11th, 1863. He was a cooper; died October 25th, 1866. Two years prior to his death he was taken with epileptic fits, followed by paralysis of the lower extremity, so that he dragged his foot in walking. He had dropsical swelling in his right, then in his left leg. Effusion followed in his abdomen and chest. The all abscesses in its apex and was filled throughout with tubercular deposit. The brain was not diseased. He was 25 years old.

He entered prison May 22d, 1865, and had given me no trouble, being in unusually good health and spirits up to the 1st of February 9th. Soon after dinner he complained of a cold, and was sent to the hospital about four o'clock. He was put to bed and received such treatment as the officer of the hospital deemed proper. I saw him about eight o'clock, the next day. He was cold and blue, with a bloated look and a weak pulse. He died at noon that day. I regret to say that the examination after death did not reveal satisfactory results. I ascertained that on Thursday, Friday and Saturday he had eaten raw English turnips, which he had done accidentally, and which probably produced a fit of violence severe enough to have caused a shock to the nervous system great to bear.

Kennedy entered the prison September, 1865. He was previously impressed, he fasted so rigorously during his imprisonment that his health became seriously impaired. About the middle of the month he took a cold by throwing off his bedclothes in the night and got a cough. The last of July he complained to me in his shop that he was sick, that "his heart was not strong." He applied to me for the first time on the 10th of August, on the consequence of raising blood. He had at this time a weak pulse, and was invalided. September 16th, tubercles of the left lung were detected and he was put upon a course of cod liver oil and iron. He soon began to expectorate and for several weeks during October and November he discharged pus from his bowels. He sank more rapidly than he otherwise would if he had not restricted himself to a small quantity of food. He died February 15th. At autopsy large numbers were found throughout the right lung, and a large cavity, occupying full one-half of the left lung, lined by cords. The remainder of the lung was filled with tubercles. His age was twenty-seven.

He had been in the prison ten years, with the exception of an interval of five months.

In August, 1866, he applied to me for loss of appetite, and for some dyspeptic symptoms, and diarrhœa. Oct.

27th, he got a cough, and shortness of breath, w left side. There was at this time dullness through chest, from effusion. He was immediately adm hospital. Tr. iodine was applied to chest, and sq lis, colchicum, with cream of tartar, were given. Edema in lower extremities soon commenced, and accumulation took place in abdomen.

In November and December he could not r recumbent position, and was tapped for ascites. H repeatedly punctured, from which operation he got About two weeks before he died, he had a second pleurisy in left side, followed by effusion, which ag his difficulties, and rendered the operation of thorasis, or tapping the chest, necessary. Seven p were drawn off. He died May 19th, aged 35. E bloody serum were found in cavity of left pleura. brane was covered with a thick layer of lymph, t the recent inflammation, and overlying a thicker substance, the product of the previous pleuritic inf

Dennis Lynn entered prison November 15th, 18 Was found dead in his bed in the morning of August. He had applied occasionally for treat May, had complained of pain in chest, especially i of the heart, and aversion to food. An examina that there was enlargement of heart. His case di amenable to active treatment, but he was assign work in one of the wings. He consulted me Au account of a slight hemorrhage of the lungs. T vious to his death, he went through his usual la complaint. He died probably immediately, and wi ing, as the occupants of the adjoining cells, or offi heard no utterance of pain.

The heart was enlarged, and the liver was called the nutmeg character, which, in a major indicates in its possessor a long-continued indulgen spirits. ent in our prison induces not a probable, but a very tendency to tubercular disease of the lungs. There out twenty-four convicts who have this disease in es of development. strong, if not conclusive proof of the deteriorating of prison life upon the health, is drawn from the fact t every one who leaves these premises sick, even with incurable disease, unless in a moribund state, in a few weeks a decided improvement in his physical condition.

Smallpox and varioloid have prevailed more or less in Charlestown, but no cases of these diseases have occurred among the inmates of the prison.

I have visited the prison every day but two, when I have a substitute. Some days I have made two or three visits when required, besides occasionally in the night to administer to some one sick.

Mr. Lounsberry continues to perform the duties of the hospital, as heretofore, in the day time, sometimes sleeping in the hospital during the night.

We have in the hospital two inmates, one of whom does the cooking, and assists the other in taking care of the sick. When watchers are required, they are selected from the reliable of the prisoners, and receive their directions from the Physician, through the hospital officer.

In conclusion, I desire to express my obligations to the Warden for his readiness to aid me in the discharge of my duties.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

In several instances where executive clemency has been granted for the remission of a portion of the convict's sentence, the assistance of the Agent has been sought. In all such cases, the Agent's endeavors have been put forth successfully.

Those who were regarded as better adapted to a life of labor than to land service, were found with berths on ships, and sailed for short or long voyages, as seemed most favorable to their condition.

The greater portion of those who have come under the influence of the Agency, and received advice and assistance, started right and continued striving to make progress. Some have fallen again through waywardness or instability, and some through the influence of evil companions.

The men, as far as heard from, where they have given employment, have generally given good satisfaction to their employers, and have done full as well as any other class of men.

ERRATA.

In the Report of the Board,—

On page xliv, the statement that seventeen hundred persons were removed to private establishments and placed in private families, is not strictly true. Many have never been in public establishments, though under supervision by the Board.

In the Report of the Secretary,—

Page 39, Table I., the "Total amount expended" should be $292,640.33; $292,700.83, and the "Balance against the Prisons" should be $219,213.49.

Pages 43-4. The Number in the Springfield House of Correction, Oct. 1, 1866, should be 43, instead of 44; in the Cambridge House of Correction, 172, instead of 173; in the Boston Jail, 171, instead of 173; in the Boston House of Correction, 397, instead of 399; the Total therefore should be 389, instead of 391, in Jails; 1,133 instead of 1,135 in the House of Correction; and 1,522 instead of 1,531 in the County Prisons. The number in the House of Industry should be 408, and, on the 1st October, 1866, 426.

Page 69. The amount expended for "Medicines and Medical Supplies," for the Burial Almshouse should be $564.01, and the total of this class of expenditures should be $564.01. This increase of $60 should also appear in all the totals into which this item enters; thus the "Total expenditures" at Tewksbury should be $586,207.29.

Page 77. The "Whole Number" in the Bridgewater Establishment should be 904, and the total for all the institutions, 8,699.

Page 143, note. The number of the insane in the establishments named is 2,780, but actually about 2,600; the average number is 1,779, and the number of deaths is 237.

In the Report of the General Agent and the Appendix,—

Page 304. The whole number of persons committed to the County Prisons is 8,552; and on page 308 the aggregate for the State should be 10,884.

OBSERVATIONS ON THE ERRATA.

er to exhibit the difficulty of printing correctly all the Statistics in this volume, it is proper to say that the Secretary is required to forward his Report to the Board, in print, as soon as may be after the first of October. As the Returns from the State Institutions, Towns, &c., do not begin to come in until that time, and are often delayed (in some cases until after the middle of January, the Secretary is compelled to prepare his Report towards the results of some of his Tables, before they can be made up. Hence an occasional discrepancy between the text and the body of the Report—the former being the latest and the more exact.

The General Agent is also required to report, in print, and both these Reports must be mainly completed before that of the Board can be prepared. Hence a delay generally occurs in printing the Report of the Board, which also is brought down to a period three months later than the Report of the Secretary and Agent. Another obstacle to perfect accuracy in the Report of the Board is the fact that the financial concerns of the State Institutions are not all definitely settled for the year so early as to be recorded without danger of error in some instances.

The hope of the editor of this volume that all the errors of the former Report have now been corrected, but there may be others which have escaped notice. If so, he will esteem it a favor to have them pointed out for future correction.

AL NOTE.—On page lxxi of the Report of the Board, the following sentence is inserted: "An advocate for teaching articulation to all deaf-mutes," may be understood not to represent Mr. Gallaudet's views correctly. He favors the use of the sign language, combined with oral language and the English alphabet; but, in his Report, he advocates trying the experiment of articulation with all deaf-mute pupils at the beginning of their education. (See the Tenth Report of the Columbia Institution, Washington, 1867.)

BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES
February 6th, 1868.

To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives General Court convened.

The undersigned, members of the Board of State Charities, have the honor to present, for the consideration of the General Court, their Fourth Annual Report, to which are appended Reports of the Secretary and the General Agent of this Board as required by law.

The Report of the Board will be found to include statements respecting the following subjects, in the order assigned:—

- I.—General Principles of Charitable Administration.
- II.—Condition of the State Institutions.
- III.—Considerations Respecting the Insane, Deaf-Mutes and Idiots.
- IV.—Proceedings and Expenses of the Board in 1867.
- V.—Recommendations and Suggestions.

The Reports of the Secretary and General Agent will exhibit the proceedings and statistics of those departments, and are commended to the notice of your honorable body.

All which is respectfully submitted by

OF THE

BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES.

PRELIMINARY.

The subjects to be discussed in our Annual Report have this year been increased by the action of the last Legislature, which referred to this Board the question of committing juvenile offenders to private reformatories; and by an order of the House of Representatives, which directed an inquiry into "the condition of the Indians of the Commonwealth, with regard to the disabilities under which they are placed." Although this order, which passed the House at the end of the session, did not have the force of a joint resolution, it was deemed proper to make the inquiry proposed, and the Secretary was instructed to do so. The result of his investigations will be found in his Annual Report; and the Board would concur in his recommendation that a committee of the Legislature of 1868 be appointed to prepare a bill enfranchising the Indians of the tribes.

"That the subject of additional provision for the care and reform of juvenile offenders be referred to the Board of State Charities, with instructions to inquire into the condition of the private charitable institutions within the Commonwealth, with special reference to the expediency of committing juvenile offenders to such institutions; and said Board shall report to the next general court."

After some correspondence with officers of private charitable societies, supposed to be interested in the subject of this Resolve, a hearing was appointed on the 18th of December, 1867, for the purpose of learning definitely the condition of such societies, and of the institutions under their charge; and of ascertaining whether it would be practicable to secure such commitments as are mentioned in the Resolve, without transgressing the letter or the spirit of our constitution.

From the statements made at this meeting we have concluded that there are, as yet, few private reformatories that are at the same time able and willing to receive juvenile offenders under sentence. Doubtless the number will increase, and, in all probability, will increase rapidly; so that in framing a law to meet the present condition of things, the Legislature will also anticipate the changes which a few years may bring about. But ought a law, authorizing commitments to private reformatories, to be passed?

We have no hesitation in saying that it ought not, unless under such restrictions as would secure to the courts and to the State the same powers which they now have in commitments to public reformatories and prisons. Ample provision must be made for visitation, for investigation, and for transfers and removals when necessary.

Besides this, the establishments to which commitments are made, should be kept small; and, so far as possible, distributed over the Commonwealth; and, moreover, instruction in common learning and in labor should be required. With these and other restrictions, necessary to prevent errors and abuses of the committing power, a general law could be passed, under which an establishment, on complying with the conditions, could receive young delinquents under sentence. But no exception should be made in favor of any class, or against any class of our citizens, and to no single institution should a power be conceded that is withheld from others which are able to comply with the necessary requirements.

The other topics of this Report will be presented in the following order:—

- I.—General Principles of Charitable Administration.
- II.—The General Condition of the State Institutions of Charity, Reform and Correction.
- III.—Special Considerations regarding the Insane, the Deaf-Mutes and other Exceptional Classes.
- IV.—The Proceedings and Expenses of the Board.
- V.—Suggestions and Recommendations.

THE WORK TO BE DONE.

I.—GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF CHARITABLE ADMINISTRATION.

In its Second Annual Report, this Board set forth several cardinal principles which it proposed to observe in all its measures for the care and treatment of the dependent and vicious classes. Among them, the leading ones were the following:—

1. That it is better to separate and diffuse the dependent classes than to congregate them.

2. That we ought to avail ourselves as much as possible of those remedial agencies which exist in society;—the Family, social influences, industrial occupations, and the like.

3. That we should enlist not only the greatest possible amount of popular sympathy, but the greatest number of individuals and of families in the care and treatment of the dependent.

4. That we should avail ourselves of responsible societies and organizations which aim to reform, support or help any class of dependents; thus lessening the direct agency of the State, and enlarging that of the people themselves.

5. That we should build up public institutions only in the last resort, and that these should be kept as small as is consistent with a wise economy.

Experience and reflection convince us that these principles are sound, and that their importance was not overrated in that Report. The second is of special importance, and we shall endeavor to show, in some preliminary remarks, the importance of administering public charity in such wise that it may promote the unity and integrity of families, instead of breaking or weakening them, and may enlist the greatest possible number of families in the work which it has to do.

The State has a large number of Wards who are to be educated, reformed, or cared for. There are the children in the almshouses and the Reform Schools, and the children and youth who have been apprenticed out from these establishments, but who still are minors, amounting to nearly three thousand. Then there are the chronic and incurable insane, and idiots, (who are to be regarded as children,) making the whole number about four thousand.

Now it will be generally admitted that the work of rearing, training, and caring for most of the children and youth, could be better done in private families than in public institutions, provided only the right kind of families could be found.

We believe that a large number of the right kind do exist, and that by a proper policy they may be increased; that there are many urgent reasons for pursuing a course that shall increase them. Every part of the policy which has even an indirect bearing upon the domestic relations should be shaped in such a wise that it may promote the unity and integrity of families, instead of lessening them.

God ordained the family to be the fundamental social institution. In it are the roots of individual virtue and happiness, and of national strength and prosperity. All political and social organizations should be shaped, so far as possible, with a view to foster and strengthen this primal institution, and to preserve intact its essential features; to wit: separate homesteads, in which may be constant indulgence of parental and filial affection, extending to kith and kin; natural relations of sex, and the mutual influence of various ages. Where these are enjoyed in homesteads, with a portion of land, there is the type of the family. Where such families are multiplied, and spread over even an ungenial soil, the people flourish and cling to it with the tenacity and vitality of the grass; and national life is healthy and secure.

Now all institutions which ignore or nullify any of the essential features of the family are, in so far, unwise; those which persistently nullify them are wrong. Imitations of the natural family upon a large scale are not only by necessity imperfect, but they are always difficult, and sometimes dangerous and pernicious; especially when they involve permanent separation of sexes and ages.

The family is, moreover, the most powerful remedial agency which exists in any community.

Holding these views, the Board has tried to shape its policy in accordance with them, especially with regard to those children and youth who are directly under its charge; and it urges extension of that policy towards those for whose treatment it is indirectly responsible.

BENEFITS OF THE FAMILY SYSTEM.

For the reasons and considerations set forth in former reports, and enlarged upon in this, the Board hold that the family treatment, as a rule, would be better,—

First, for the Wards themselves.

Second, for those who have the charge of them.

Third, for the Commonwealth itself.

FIRST. It would be almost a waste of words to show how much better it would be for the Wards themselves to be trained and cared for in private families rather than in public institutions.

Let men reflect that their own child or relative may become an orphan, may fall into vicious ways, may become insane or idiotic, and at State charge; and there will be few who will not say they should prefer to have such unfortunates committed to the charge of an intelligent and virtuous country family, rather than reared in an Almshouse, trained in a Reformatory, or committed to a Lunatic Asylum.

We have dwelt much elsewhere upon the evils inherent in the system of congregating together, for long periods and in large numbers, those of one age or sex, or of peculiar temperament, or of morbid condition. Those evils cannot be avoided or corrected by any method of administration; and we need not here repeat the arguments against the system. They are manifest to every reflecting mind; and are only justifiable on the assumed ground of economy, or of necessity.

SECOND. It would, as a general rule, be better for those who have charge of these Wards, if they could live at ordinary homesteads; and better for their families to have them do so.

It being granted that the unity and integrity of the family are desirable, it follows that it is better, as a general rule, that the members remain at or near the homestead. A young man or woman may acquire peculiar tact and skill in an Almshouse, in a Reformatory, in a Lunatic Asylum, but they acquire it only for themselves, and generally at the sacrifice of some ties of family, of home, of neighborhood, which had better been preserved. If one have any peculiar sympathy for the unfortunate, or natural tact for their management, he may become a greater expert in some special establishment; loses for himself the inestimable advantages of home influence, and his family lose the advantages which they might have enjoyed directly from his presence, and indirectly from the exercise which his talents and powers would exert upon the dispositions of others.

A clergyman who should leave home, and live in the city, might thereby become a better preacher, but not a better father and neighbor.

Any degree of excellence in whatever calling, that is purchased at the expense of domestic ties and duties, usually costs more in happiness and usefulness than it is worth; as every old man and woman, whose occupation in life has been the enjoyment of those ties, and required the neglect of other duties, find to their sorrow. The scheme of Divine Providence implies no such contradiction as that we must cheat in order to please God, and starve affections, planted by God in the very depths of our nature, in order to please Him, and to attain excellence in any calling.

In illustration of this idea, suppose a thousand women be taken out of the families of Massachusetts, and employed specially and solely to what are called works of charity. We admit that the work done by them should be more and better than it would otherwise have been; still it is probable that public virtue and charity would upon the whole have been promoted by their staying at home. It certainly would be if they could be engaged in some work of beneficence, without neglecting those domestic duties which every woman owes to the family, and of those social influences which she owes to society.

This is peculiarly so here; for owing to the numerical parity of sexes, and other circumstances, there exists in many parts of Massachusetts an abundant surplus of womanly strength and capacity which is unemployed and dormant. By judicious and discriminate arrangement, gradually introduced, might be the work of training and reforming the young, of nursing and caring for and even curing the infirm in mind, as well as which is now attempted by aggregating the subjects at a few establishments in large establishments, might be done by distributing them in suitable families in various parts of the country, with the advantage to themselves and to the community.

The common objection is that suitable families, who have the requisite knowledge, and who are willing to enter upon such work, do not exist. We believe that this is a mistake. Experience shows that Massachusetts abounds in the material for all kinds of beneficence that may be possible and desirable. The families for such work have not been found, because they have not been called for. If called for, they will come; and entering upon the vocation, will become worthy of it. What if they are unfitted by experience? Almost every person led by circumstances into a higher calling than he would purposely choose, and which even requires virtues which he seemed to lack, feels its powerful reflex action upon his character, and becomes elevated and strengthened thereby, provided it entails no hypocrisy upon him. As with individuals, so with families. Notwithstanding many a family in Massachusetts, which was led to adopt a boy from the Almshouse, or the Reform School, mainly from selfish motives, and without a proper sense of their duty to him, have come to regard him with interest, and to extend to him parental affection. Sometimes they adopt him, give him their name, their blessing, and part of the inheritance.

Abuses occur; but abuses, not inherent in a system, are to be reformed, rather than be used as arguments against the system itself. Some families certainly, are not only unfit to be guardians, but are incapable of ever becoming such. Then to select them out without ruling out all others. "Probability is the guide of life." The average of Massachusetts country families are virtuously inclined. Most of those which become interested in the care and training of the Wards of the State, will, under proper supervision, act by them honestly; the occupation will react upon them; and they will add to honesty, kindness and generosity. At any rate, the children committed to these families will be subject to ordinary social influences; and these will be, upon the whole, more favorable to the development of character than the artificial influences and enforced discipline of the Almshouse, and of the House of Reformation.

THIRD. The family treatment would be better for the Commonwealth. The average of Massachusetts families are intelligent, and very apt to learn. They will improve by every opportunity; and by practice will become more skilful and successful in managing the peculiar class of children or other persons committed to them as Wards. Should we not encourage this by all means? Our community is yet in the gristle, and our social institutions pliable; and we should lose not the small opportunity of moulding them into the right shape. If words of charity and love are to be assigned to some particular class, should we not strive to create charitable families, rather than charitable individuals? Would it not be better to take steps in that direction, rather than in the opposite one, which leads to setting apart certain persons, who shall devote their lives to special forms of charity? May we not have the advantage of that segregation into classes, without its disadvantages? May not the members of a family become interested and experienced in rearing orphaned children, training and reforming perishing youth, nursing certain classes of invalids, and looking after certain classes of the insane, without the manifest disadvantages attendant upon certain individuals renouncing family ties, narrowing their social relations, and sharpening one set of faculties by narrowing their whole nature?

The disadvantages of the latter course are direct, patent, and matters of history. In some parts of the world they grow into vices under which the people groan; and generate leeches who deplete the public veins, and impoverish the public purse, under the poor plea that they do not enrich themselves.

These things we may avoid, because we see them; but there are other disadvantages and evils, less patent, but quite as essential. Such is the blow given directly to the family—the essential unit of society—and that given to it indirectly, by privation of opportunity for daily practice of beneficence.

Besides, there are many families where the material bonds of unity are so feeble, that the withdrawal of one member finally effects its dissolution. A young man or woman who is drawn from the home of such a family to pursue a calling will

THE FAMILY TO BE CHERISHED.

While it gives a greater return of money, entails greater personal expense, is apt to remain permanently away; and the loss of their society, and of their moral and material support, is likely to break up the family, whereas, if they could bring their work home, it would, in most cases, be better for all parties, provided the work were not only remunerative, but beneficial by its moral influences.

There is no danger that such an arrangement will interfere with the natural and healthy disposition to swarm off, farther than to prevent its destroying some old hives that ought to be reserved.

Again, the State may do much directly, and more indirectly, to prevent the extinction of certain families, and to equalize the material condition of others. It may do it directly by a wise use of the means expended for the maintenance and education of its wards. If a case of special perversity in a youth, or insanity, or other misfortune affecting an adult, in a certain class of people, it is sure to throw at least one person upon the community for support, and is likely to drag a whole family down into pauperism after him.

This class is not made up of the rich, nor of the poor; but of that multitude out of which these two classes are supplied.

The great middling rank is marching on vigorously and prosperously; but certain circumstances cause one person to lag, to require the assistance of others, and finally to be dragged along with them, a life-long burden upon the public. It is certain that the fate of such persons, and therefore the number of paupers, depends sometimes upon the provisions made by the government for enabling citizens to tide over periods of special trial and want.

Suppose, for instance, a family in which there are five productive members, earning each six dollars, while the ordinary expenses of the whole are only twenty dollars a week. This leaves a margin of ten dollars, and things go on thrivingly. But if one member becomes deranged, the surplus income is reduced by the cessation of his gain to four dollars; while his board costs four dollars a week. So there is no surplus. Then the services of another productive member are required for his care, the gain of the family is turned to a steady loss, so as he is retained. The State holds out hospital accommodation and curative means, costing, say, three dollars a week; the family income can afford that, and still leave a surplus gain; the insane member is sent to the hospital early, recovers, and resumes his place, and the family continues prosperous.

If, on the other hand, the cost of hospital treatment is greater than the income of the family can afford, the invalid is kept at home, in the hope that the disease will subside. But it is more likely to persist and increase, to pass the acute stage, become chronic, and probably incurable. The family struggles on awhile until its accumulated store is exhausted. Then it borrows, mortgages; gets temporary relief; then borrows more, then has to pawn its effects; finally to give up the struggle, and throw the patient upon the public, in shape of an insane pauper to be supported for life. Perhaps, too, the overtask, the anxiety, the despair, demoralize the family. The stronger members leave; the others sink into the dependent class, and the family finally disappears. This has been set forth by others in stronger language; but it cannot be too often repeated. In this and by similar circumstances, the unproductive and dependent class is fed from the productive middle class. These undercurrents in the movement of society which should be fully studied. Sound economy therefore seconds the policy of mercy for placing within the reach of families in the middle class, the means of holding together and maintaining their strength in times of temporary destitution and distress, of disease or accident; when the disability of one member threatens to break them up and disperse them.

Against such accidents the rich can afford to be their own insurers, but the other classes cannot. Now there is a new class of public institutions which may be considered in the place of Mutual Insurance Companies against pauperism, in which all citizens are insurers and insured—all share the loss when it happens to fall upon one—and which should be styled Equitable, rather than the Charitable. These institutions, if cautiously conducted, so as not to foster the evil they aim to lessen, may equalize the burden, which, falling on one family, one, would crush it out; and they may pay from the public treasury losses to individuals in such wise as to yield a fair return to the Commonwealth, without engendering a pauper spirit among the receivers. This can only be done, however, by having a due share of the burden where by natural laws it properly belongs, to wit, upon those who have violated those laws; and by withholding from any, premiums which tend to make the abnormal condition more desirable than the normal one. This is the high statesmanship which should govern in the foundation, organization, and direction of all such institutions.

If, for instance, it falls to one family to have a child afflicted with an infirmity, like blindness, which cuts him off from the advantages of the common school—which requires a special and costly instruction—the extra burden of his education should be equalized among the citizens, and the family should have the advantages thereof, without its being called charity.

Application of these Principles to the Wards of the State.

If we knew that three thousand immigrants were about to be sent to us from Europe, and we could influence the selection, we should try to have those who had been well taught in schools, and trained up in industrious habits. But here come, marching straight towards us, three thousand young immigrants whose teaching and training are in our own hands. It is highly desirable that the whole of them should be guided and governed by one policy; and, in the opinion of this Board, that policy should be shaped in accordance with the general principles laid down above. But there are difficulties in the way. Among these, some arise from the organization of the Reform Schools, and the School Ship, which are under separate and individual Boards of Trustees. They naturally wish to build up and embellish their Institutions; and can hardly be expected to administer them in the spirit of principles which, carried out to their logical consequences, would diminish the number of inmates of the central establishments, and finally reduce them from educational institutions to mere places for receiving and detaining children until their individual dispositions could be ascertained, and they could be suitably placed out in families.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT, 1867.

The children and youth who are either directly or indirectly under the oversight of this Board, are by far the most interesting subjects with which it has to deal. The adults, whether industrials, vicious, or simply dependent, can be more or less improved in condition and conduct, but seldom essentially changed in character. As their habits have been fashioned by social and hereditary influences, and made up of long habits, so they must (for the most part) lie ; during their lifetime at least. But the young invite, and abundantly repay, efforts to turn them into the path towards virtuous and vigorous manhood. There are a few who, by their very organization and inevitable natural tendencies, will grow up to be bad, let the surrounding influences be ever so good ; there are a few who, by similar tendencies, will grow up to be good, let the surrounding influences be ever so bad ; but between these are the great multitude whose characters for life are formed by the plastic influences of education ; for it is education which forms the character, not the uncommon mind.

The whole number of children and youth under the oversight of the State, is about three thousand. Of these, three hundred and thirty-six boys are in the Reformatory at Andover ; two hundred and seventy-eight in the School for the Deaf ; one hundred and forty-five girls in the Reform School for the Deaf ; and seven hundred and fifty-seven in the three Almshouses, viz. : at Monson, five hundred and fifty ; at Tewksbury, one hundred and thirty-eight, at Bridgewater, sixty-five. If we add those apprenticed out from the Almshouses and the Schools, and still under age, we have a grand total of about three thousand. These are the rude and untaught men and women, who, a few years hence, will be active members of society ; and if the unfavorable effects of inherited tendencies and early associations can be counteracted, their influence will be for good ; if not, then for bad. Their present condition presents a most interesting spectacle to the thoughtful and thinking observer.

It is easy to see what would have been the inevitable condition of these youth, if they had not been taken in charge by the State. They have, generally, by inheritance, improplood, and vicious tendencies; and they would have had vicious associates. A very large proportion of them would therefore have inevitably led vicious lives, and given to their children intensified tendencies to pauperism, vice and crime. Their present treatment is calculated to correct all this. They are plentifully fed, warmly clad and comfortably lodged; and this tends to enrich the blood. They are carefully trained to habits of cleanliness, order and industry, and to home life; and this corrects their inherited tendency to looseness of morals, to vicious indulgences, and to vagabondage. Most of those apprenticed out are surrounded by virtuous associates, and stimulated constantly by the examples of self-devotion, social success and well rewarded thrift, which abound all around them. Here is a beautiful and hopeful attempt to supplant the rank undergrowth of society by more vigorous, healthy shoots.

The State is thus, by her moral agencies, converting what seemed not merely worthless but positively noxious social elements into beautiful products. She is making virtuous citizens out of the worst material. Full justice cannot be done to this work by comparison with material projects. It beats the transmutation of granite and of ice into gold, unless we suppose the rock were "demoralized" and the water putrid.

Let this system be perpetuated and extended. Let the State encourage the formation of juvenile reform societies, the best of which is a simple, honest family. Let two great classes be enlisted in the work of reform,—first, those who, out of their abundant means, are inclined to build up and support private training schools; second, those who, out of the abundance of their hearts, are disposed to receive the children from the schools into their homes, and train them up there.

The first should consider that, other things being equal, the sooner the child is out of their immediate charge, and in a good family, the better for him, and the better for society; because that family becomes an ally in the work of reform; and they should be willing to give such ally some material advantages, in order to enlist a better class, and to receive more valuable service.

If this is done upon a large scale, then Massachusetts not have to dread the effect of those violated laws of which have created in other countries persistent vicious paupers.

Past and Present Errors.

These are not barren speculations and vague generalities but sound principles, deduced from wide-spread facts to be seen on close examination. Take, for instance, the system so long in use, of apprenticing out boys and girls from the House of Reformation. This method is sound in theory; and has been more fruitful in good results, if the practice has been more in accordance with the theory. But it has not been administered in the spirit of the principles which underlie it. Several capital errors have prevailed in the method of apprenticing families.

First. Keeping the subject too long in the central institution.

Second. Making the conditions of apprenticeship such as to attract the poorest instead of the best kind of families.

Third. Neglect of supervision of the apprentice.

The first error was a natural, and has been almost a universal one. The very building itself proclaimed, in its structure, extent and arrangement, a belief that a great monastic establishment, in which a crowd of children and youth of both sexes, the same general disposition and acquired habits, could be confined and live a long time together, is a proper place for the reformation of character. There was the building; and once it must be filled, and kept full. There was the school-house with the desks, and boys could be kept at school there several years until well grounded in all the ordinary branches, much better than in common schools. There was the great steam engine, by means of which the boys could be warmed and potatoes and beef cooked so much cheaper than by open fire-places. There was the Chapel and the Clergyman, by which they could be made religious so much more certainly than in village churches by country ministers. There were the workshops, and the farm, by which the State could teach the boys and farming so much better than could be done by private mechanics and farmers. What was the use of having such and permanent buildings, so expensively fitted up, and of keeping a corps of officers and assistants, unless boys could be retained three, or four, or five years?

It occurred to some thinking men that possibly there had been a radical error in providing such large establishments, and arranging them with a view to permanent residence. Some people of common sense asked, if trying to correct perverse dispositions and habits in a hundred boys, by confining them all together for years in one house, instead of placing them among people of good dispositions and habits, was not like trying to correct acidity in a hundred drops of vitriol by putting them all in one bottle, instead of diffusing them in common water? But these were the minority, and therefore the idea prevailed that the boys must be kept in the House until they were reformed and well taught; and so the tender years of childhood and youth, in which the disposition and character are most malleable, were passed in the central establishment.

The second error was in making the conditions of apprenticeship such as to attract the poorest instead of the best kind of families to receive them. The master was to keep the boy until he should be twenty-one years old, clothe and board him, school him, teach him a trade, and give him, at his majority, a hundred dollars and a new suit of clothes. Here was little to attract any bidders, except such as meant to get all they could out of the apprentice, and give as little back as might be. The difficulty was not merely that too high value was placed upon the boy's service, but that the payment was so easily evaded. It ought to have been so arranged that the proper return for the apprentice's service should have been secured to him during the time that he was serving; and some special advantage should have been held out to the master to return to the State a well-taught and trained citizen at his majority, and some forfeiture incurred if he failed to do so. It would have been better to pay the master fifty dollars on proof, in the person and character of the apprentice, that he had done his duty by him.

Instead of this, it was so arranged that the master gave reward out of the apprentice every day; while the prior payment was deferred till the lad should be of age. There was a strong temptation to avoid paying that hundred dollars for a new suit of clothes. The marvellous effect was to prevent the apprentice ever becoming of age. They grew and thrived finely till nearly twenty, but few ever attained to twenty-one. Many were induced in some way to disappear—to run away; and were never pursued. There was a standing reward of one hundred dollars to every master who got rid of his apprentice six months before his majority. It became necessary that this method should be so modified as to limit the term, in some cases to eighteen; but the importance of other modifications was not felt, principally on account of

The third error—neglect of proper supervision by the authorities who bound out the apprentice. In most cases there was no supervision at all. The boy was committed to the tender mercies of the world, even without any special care or attention having been given to the character and capacity of the person who ought to have stood in the place of a father, and who, but too often, was a hard task-master.

This Board has endeavored to modify the method of apprenticeship in all the establishments; but has no immediate control of the matter except in the case of the Monson Almshouse, and in that only since it has been converted into a Primary School. One of our first cares there was to gain knowledge of the actual condition of the children who had been bound out, with a view to improve the method of apprenticeship and to secure regular and thorough supervision. We appointed a Visiting Agent, and have appended to his Report of the first year's experience. The Board recommend it to the attention of the Legislature. If read in the light of considerations and suggestions respecting the advantage of family treatment made above, it will be very interesting and instructive. It will show what an abundance of material exists within the Commonwealth for carrying out in practice, and keeping in harmonious working, a general and well devised system of public charity, not only without build-any more special institutions, but without any increase of appropriations at all proportionate to the increase of the population and of the work to be done. The natural reformatory institutions exist in abundance ; we have only to select the best ones ; to offer the proper inducements to have our wards received within them, and afterwards to keep them under active supervision.

Mr. Fisk says :—

“ I commenced visiting the children placed out in families from the State Almshouse at Monson. At that time the records of the institution showed that the number of children placed out since its opening in 1854, was 912, but as some of these had been indentured several times, the actual number was found to be 821. * * * *

“ A large number had not been heard from since leaving the institution, and it was not known how they were faring or what had become of them. The authorities of the Almshouse had placed them out, requiring a yearly report of their condition, but these reports were seldom made. * * * *

“ In visiting the children, your Agent has endeavored to make them feel that he is their friend—that he has their interest at heart, and desires to benefit them. He has been happily surprised to find how readily they have confided in him, and made known their various wants. They have been anxious to learn about their brothers, sisters and other friends, information of whom has been communicated by letter as soon as it could be ascertained. * * * *

“ That neglect and abuses were frequent under this system is not surprising. The State had for twelve years been providing homes for its orphan and friendless children, without causing them to be looked after, or correcting the wrongs that had grown up among them. To your Board belongs the credit of investigating this department of the State's charity, and inaugurating a safeguard for the children. * * * *

“ It may be inquired why these children have not appealed to the authorities at the Almshouse for protection and justice, and the reply comes back that they have usually shunned the Almshouse as if it were a hideous monster, revolting to their pride and finer feelings, and suffered hardships and wrongs rather than ask assistance from that quarter. With the State Primary School pupils it will no doubt be different.

“ But the cases of injustice and abuse are the exception, not the general rule. Aside from slight neglects, which are now being corrected, the majority of the children are doing well, and have pretty homes. Some of them take the names of the families in which they are placed, and are treated in all respects as children of those families."

This is a most pleasing and important feature of the system of family apprenticeship, and shows how the best interests of the child and of the family may both be promoted by the relationship between them.

Another remark of the Agent shows the force of the objection urged by the Board to retaining boys so long in the Reformatories.

"Twenty boys placed out from the Reform School at Westborough have also been visited. These boys are of a different class from those put out from Monson. They are older when placed out, and do grow up with the families, to become attached to them."

The Agent refers to another part of his duty which is of growing importance.

"Another feature of the Agency is the finding of homes for children. One hundred and forty-seven families have been found who promise to take children. Many of these have already visited the institution and made their selections. To others, children have been sent, and among them, several boys from Westborough."

The Agent has been most kindly and cordially received by the families, who were glad to counsel with him, to listen to his suggestions, and correct faults which he pointed out.

It is hard to conceive how persons can so utterly neglect their own duties, and then urge, as an objection to the system of early apprenticeship, that families will not fulfil their obligations to the apprentices.

The Agent closes with the important remarks that—

"The field of labor widens and increases in importance as the system progresses. The children will more and more rely upon the Visiting Agent as their friend—looking to him as a protector in times of difficulty, and the pacificator of all their difficulties; and he will find it easier and more pleasant to prevent wrongs and abuses among them, than to correct those which have been so long accumulating."

OTHER WARDS OF THE STATE.

proper system of visiting, (part of which could be carried better by women than by men,) will cure the evils commenced or apprehended, and secure not only the interest of Wards, but what this Board most earnestly desires, the operation of numerous families in the work of training and forming youth, to the advantage of both parties, and therefore the Commonwealth.

akin to these juvenile Wards of the Commonwealth are those who have never emerged from childhood because their mental faculties were never fully developed; and those who have reverted to it because those faculties have become deranged.

The Insane (including the class of idiots,) within the Commonwealth, may be fairly estimated at four thousand, and they are all dependent upon the community for support, protection and guidance.

There are at State charge nearly one thousand; at the charge of towns upwards of one thousand; and the rest are at private charge. For the care and treatment of this great class of dependents, the State has adopted the policy of creating and maintaining several establishments which are too costly for individual enterprise. It has, indeed, discouraged the creation of private establishments, and allowed their existence only under certain conditions and restrictions.

The three great public Hospitals for the Insane were erected without the disadvantages of great aggregations of persons in a crowded condition had either not been sufficiently considered, or were disregarded by considerations of convenience and economy in the administration.

The condition of those Hospitals and the general subject of insanity will be considered in the next divisions of this Report.

II.—THE CONDITION OF THE STATE INSTITUTIONS.

General Remarks.

It may be said, in general terms, that these establishments have improved their condition during the past year. Their number remains the same as a year ago, the Hospital at Rainsford Island being still closed; but the two new institutions, the State Primary School, and the State Workhouse, have developed so far as to become the more important departments of the establishments at Monson and Bridgewater respectively. Very considerable alterations have been made in the buildings at these two establishments; long-needed changes have taken place in their management; and their present condition is better than it has ever been. The same is true of most of the other establishments, which, however, may be still further improved.

The Institutions aided by the State have changed but little in their character or modes of action within the year. We would refer to the Annual Reports of all these establishments, whether owned or aided by the State, and to the annual Report of our Secretary for details of their financial and general condition during the year ending September 30, 1867. Our own remarks will apply to the calendar year 1867.

SPECIAL OBSERVATIONS.

1. The Lunatic Hospitals.

The Board may speak unhesitatingly in terms of commendation respecting the condition and management of the public Hospitals during the past year. They have been fully and ably conducted in the spirit of their original organization and plan. The Superintendents are gentlemen of integrity, ability and professional attainments. They have, by their personal character and natural affinities, gathered about them a large corps of intelligent and faithful assistants, nurses, and domestics such as could be found with difficulty in any other community, for the comparatively low wages which they receive.

It would be wrong, however, to look merely at the favorable aspects which these Institutions present; or to disguise the fact that evils exist, and abuses occur. They always have, and always will occur, in establishments founded upon principles not altogether sound.

The evils and abuses that made Madhouses so obnoxious in former days, the memory of which clings to the present

d, and gives rise to popular prejudice, have been almost not quite rooted out from our establishments—such as abuse by being made places of confinement for persons insane, but restrained of their freedom solely for the wicked poses of other persons. The Board thinks that it demonstrated pretty clearly in a former Report that such an occurrence is hardly possible in our public Hospitals, as they are organized and administered. But we feel bound to allude in a general way to other circumstances and conditions which prevent those Institutions from doing so much good as they might otherwise do.

Defects of our Hospitals.

The principal evils and disadvantage of these establishments are mainly out of the very nature of their organization and material arrangement; and are more or less apparent and painful according to the care and skill displayed in administration.

They are, first, monotony—lack of variety in the modes of—in objects of living interest—in the daily routine.

Second, confinement and restraint of many patients who might enjoy personal freedom without harm to themselves or others, and therefore have a right to do so.

Third, lack of real occupation and employment useful to ourselves and to others.

Variety is the spice of life. It is in virtue of variety in natural dispositions, the result of differences of race; of variety in talents and taste, the result of inherited qualities and of education; of variety in capacity, the result of training, that all the earth, and part of the waters thereof, are covered with inhabitants who prefer each his own part, to all the rest. So men vary with callings, occupations and pleasures. Men vary according as they have been shaped by external circumstances; while all have a general resemblance, each has his own individual tastes, and views, and habits, and each his own idiosyncrasy, which makes him differ from every other man. Enjoyment of his individuality is freedom, which to a certain degree is essential to his happiness; while suppression of his individuality causes him unhappiness.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT, 1867.

The great, open, free world—the macrocosm—alone presents that variety of social relations and affections, of occupations, of objects of interest, of wants, of desires, of hopes and fears, which keep all men busy and interested; and nourish the instinctive attachment to life, which preserves the race.

Now insanity seldom effaces individuality; but often effaces it. Men carry with them into insanity the peculiar tastes, inclination, habits and capacities which distinguish them when sane. If we must gather them into a Hospital, it should, as far as is possible, be a microcosm, in which the variety of the outward world is reproduced.

But, how far short of this do our hospitals fall! Men of all ages, from boyhood to threescore; differing in religion, in culture, in tastes, in habits, in capacities, in occupations are all brought within the same inclosures, and, by necessity, at least, shut up within the same four walls; subjected to the same general discipline; the same diet; the same dull monotony of lying down; getting up; eating; walking; in a word, the same dreary monotony of life.

It is impossible, from the very nature and unity of the human organism, that there should be the desirable variety in objects of interest and of occupation. Even if the structure of the Hospital, and the arrangement of the premises admitted the eightfold division required by doctrine, still this classification, founded on the natural, but on the morbid condition of the patient, is utterly insufficient to meet the demands for variety which are caused by the diversity that exists among them.

This disadvantage cannot be overcome; and the pernicious consequences flowing out of it cannot be evaded, in institutions having the material unity of ours. It can be remedied to some extent in those which admit division into wards, and accommodations more nearly resembling those of ordinary human families, living in ordinary habitations.

The second evil is, confinement and restraint of patients who might enjoy a much greater degree of personal freedom without danger to themselves or others.

The theory of non-restraint prevails in certain Hospitals; but in all large ones there is a certain class of lunatics who are virtually subjected to restraint in some form, and to ceaseless and vigilant watching. The condition of these patients; the difficulty of making effectual classification, and of application of different kinds of discipline and treatment in different departments; together with other causes, seem to require a degree of personal restraint and supervision of all patients which makes our Hospitals so like respectable prisons, and the attendants so like gentlemanly turnkeys.

The restraint supposed to be necessary for some, acts unfavorably upon others not needing it, who get more morbid in consequence of it, and then require more restraint and supervision; and so the establishment falls into a vicious circle.

It is certain that many of the chronic and supposed incurable cases are harmless; that they desire, and would enjoy more personal freedom than they now have; and that therefore their confinement involves a wrong to them. It is useless to argue against this; and to plead the kind motives which suggest their confinement. That confinement is to them virtual imprisonment. It differs essentially from the restraint to which they could be subjected in families. The difference may be seen in the fact that all wards and rooms of the Hospitals are, like those in prisons, locked upon all patients from the outside, while those of ordinary families are locked upon the inside. It is easy to see how this slight difference, carried out in other particulars, makes hospital life differ from family life.

It would be easy to set forth individual cases where the confinement, although inflicted with the kindest motives, really resembles like cruel imprisonment; causes bitter suffering; and makes the Hospital a "prison-house of sighs." But such appeals to sentiment and feeling would not be in place here. Besides, the suffering to the patient is tempered with mercy by the Superintendent. The degree and the irksomeness of the confinement will depend somewhat upon his character and conduct; but in our Hospitals, as a general rule, the confinement of no class of patients is stricter than is required by the application of the principles upon which the Institutions are founded and administered. It can only be materially lessened by some important change in the general system of congregating and treating lunatics.

The third difficulty is lack of real occupation and amusement, useful to the patients and to others.

The duty of visiting our Lunatic Hospitals is never an pleasant one ; but to most persons it is sorrowful beyond expression. A walk in the church-yard is comparatively cheerful ; at least, is peace and rest from suffering. And yet the sight of a collection of insane persons, may be a pleasant one ; occasionally in our hospitals, where some pressing occupation, as hay-making, or some prepared amusement, rouses and amuses the majority of patients ; it is so usually in establishments where patients are employed busily out of doors, in agriculture.

One cause of the sadness felt in visiting our hospitals is the sight of so many persons of each sex, in the prime or maturity of life, sitting or lying about, moping idly and listlessly in the debilitating atmosphere of the wards, and sinking gradually into a torpor, like that of living corpses.

With many, this torpor seems the necessary result of their condition ; and it constitutes one of the greatest if not the greatest difficulty, with which Superintendents have to contend. It is more easy to pacify than to animate. The difference between the excited patient challenges and must receive attention, and the torpid one may be, and too often is, neglected. The torpor is moreover sometimes a necessary condition. The mind often shrinks from any kind of work. A sore brain requires rest as much as a sore limb ; and even after the acute stage of disease has passed, the torpor may remain.

With a large class, however, there is a morbid action of the mind, which, for want of professional lore, we may designate by the popular term of nervous excitability ; and this, instead of being worked off daily through a natural channel ; is accumulated until it becomes unendurable, and drives otherwise sane patients to lay violent hands upon themselves or upon others.

Violence, suicides and murders, are to be expected from the maniacs, and from a certain class of the merely insane. It is not from such a fearfully great proportion of the chronic insane. So great is this proportion, indeed, that notwithstanding atic withdrawal of means and appliances for self-destruction. Constant and unceasing watchfulness alone prevent such accidents and fatal disasters.

It is certain that in none of our Hospitals are the patients generally and usefully employed at real work as they are in the foreign establishments, especially in the English; making allowance for the difference of their previous habits. The occupations should be real, and, so far as possible, adapted to utilize the knowledge and the habits the patient has acquired when sane. Bowling-alleys, billiard tables, and the like, may possibly be advantageous to a few, but seem very ill-adapted to the majority of our patients.

Abundant recommendations of useful and out-door occupations for the patients are found upon the records of the Trustees of our Hospitals; but they are seldom carried into persistent effect, although, of late years, more has been done in this direction.

As we have mentioned elsewhere, it is probable, to say the least, that the increase of the insane comes mainly from the indigent class, which has the greatest need of out-door labor.

A Plan proposed for treating the Chronic Insane.

In view of all these facts and considerations, we commend to the attention of the Legislature the suggestions in the Report of the General Agent, that a certain number of the chronic harmless insane now in the State Hospitals, and the Asylum at Tewksbury, be sent to their respective homes, and that full allowance of money be made to their families for their support.

Besides the relief to the central establishments, and comfort to the patient and his friends, this plan coincides with the policy so often urged by this Board, of doing everything possible to preserve the unity and integrity of families when threatened by poverty and by the misfortune of one member.

The number who can be so placed out from Tewksbury is, however, very small, partly because the families are already broken up, partly because, oftentimes, it is not desirable that an insane member should rejoin his family. It may well be that the mental condition of the insane man makes old and associations undesirable. He needs the comfort of home and of a family, ay, doubtless more needs them than we ourselves do, but it must not be home and the old family. It often happens that all its have those peculiarities of temper or obliquities of those mental squints, and humps, and limps, which them odd and remarkable, though not unendurable; but being intensified in him, make him unendurable, and out of the category of the sane. Now the daily contact of minds is undesirable, because, as steel sharpeneth begets a clashing which keeps the temper always sharp.

We are strongly inclined to the opinion that the selecting a certain number of the chronic and harmless and placing them in families, should be adopted as public State policy, and we recommend that the Trustees of Lunatic Hospitals try the experiment.

If the principle should be adopted, it would bring many cases, although the allowance made to families should be less than the present actual cost to the State. Some would be able to afford to receive back and support their lost ones by means of the aid of the State; there are others who would gladly have their relative removed from the Hospital, and would eke out, from their own scanty means, the amount allowed by the State, so as to increase the inducement for some one to take him as a boarder.

There are in the remote parts of the State many cases whose material condition is such as to make some arrangement of this kind desirable, both for the sake of having an honest and useful occupation, and for the profit it would bring. There are cases that might decide the doubt as to whether the insane could be kept together, and the old homestead preserved. But it would be useless to set forth at length the material advantages that would follow a successful trial of this plan. Besides the relief to the Hospitals, and the increase of their remedial powers over recent cases, which the removal of part of the chronic cases would bring; besides the benefit to the patients not too demented to be sighing for more freedom.

plan is not a new one. Its feasibility under certain circumstances and conditions has been demonstrated. It has ried upon a small scale in various countries; and upon a scale in Belgium. There is virtue enough in it to have he community, or Colony of insane, at Gheel, alive and hing more than seven centuries, in spite of the numerous of patients, brought about by the superstition, cupidity, d evil passions of those families to whose care they were tted. And now that the establishment has been adopted, laced under wise regulations by the government, and ouses corrected, and about a thousand patients placed ordinary families, while less than a score are confined in pposition, will prevent the principle on which it is based aving a fair trial.

eed, it is now having a trial which is more interesting to ause made in a country more closely resembling ours in d climate, and among a people more like ours in race, ge, religion and social condition. The Scotch Board nacy some years ago adopted the practice of placing a part of their chronic and harmless insane in private board. At first they did this very cautiously.

The Legislature granted the necessary powers, and of Lunacy removed over seventeen hundred patients to public establishments, and placed them, one by one, in families.

Then the restriction of having but one patient in a family was removed by the Legislature, and the Board began placing two, three or, at most, four patients together in private dwelling. This interesting experiment is now in progress.

Generally the patients' names are retained upon the records of the Asylum, so that they may be regarded as only on leave; and to be taken back if necessary. A very small percentage, however, of the whole number are sent back.

The following remarks by Dr. Mitchell, one of the Commissioners, are as pertinent and important to us, in Massachusetts, as they are to the people of Scotland:—

“The total cost of paupers to the country is great, and increases every year. It is important to bear in mind that this increase is entirely confined to the maintenance of those in asylums, as well as by the following Table:—

Cost of Pauper Lunatics.

Y E A R S .	In private dwellings.	In public and private Asylums, and lunatic wards of Poorhouses.
1858, . . .	£14,280	£66,422
1859, . . .	15,504	78,091
1860, . . .	14,666	78,348
1861, . . .	14,855	82,992

“To prevent any great further increase of the burden of lunacy lays upon the country, providing this can be done without doing harm to the insane poor themselves, would be a laudable aim. But it is impossible long to do this unless some channel be found into which the accumulation of chronic and incurable cases can be diverted.

THE EXPERIENCE OF SCOTLAND.

own the number of patients unnecessarily maintained at high asylums, and avoid, what is otherwise sure to happen, a continuing need of an increase of asylum accommodation. It is to me, as I think it must do to all who have followed me, that the obstacle for this overflow cannot be more easily or properly found in a transference of such patients to private dwellings, and I add it for those two good reasons:—

It is the best thing for these patients.

It is the best thing for the country."

Mitchell goes on to say,—

The experiment has been attended with a more decided success than we have been fairly anticipated—in its outset at least—and enough has already been seen and done to demonstrate the propriety and the value of giving to this plan of providing for one class of the pauper much wider extension.

Without exception the patients thus disposed of are found to be contented and happy, and to exhibit an improvement in their physical condition. They are treated as members of the family, occupy the same room, and eat at the same table. They are clothed as the paupers generally are, and most of them go regularly to church."

The matter seems to the Board so interesting and important that although we will not here enlarge upon the advantages of the plan of removing the chronic and harmless insane from the hospitals, keeping them still under general medical superintendence, without treating them in private dwellings,—we will try on a subsequent page to meet some of the objections which will be arrayed against it.

2. The Three State Almshouses.

The three establishments, originally built on a uniform plan, and filled with the same class of dependents; and conducted on a uniform system which had no other object than to maintain the paupers decently and with as little cost as might be, have gradually changed in character by this Board until they no longer resemble each other; and one alone, that at Tewkesbury, retains strictly the features of an almshouse.

They were originally filled with paupers of all kinds, having about the same proportion of the different classes. We have attempted to bring about a proper classification, and have succeeded, at least to a considerable extent.

Nearly all the insane and idiots have been removed to Monson and Bridgewater and comfortably provided with an asylum built expressly for them at Tewksbury.

The two first establishments are therefore relieved of the care of this class, who required and now have special accommodations and attention.

A large proportion of the chronic invalids, old and infirm persons, followed, and were provided for at the same place at Tewksbury.

Then all children likely to remain long under the care of the State, were gathered from Tewksbury and Bridgewater and provided for at Monson, which, like Bridgewater, was largely drained by these transitions. The Monson almshouse was thus transformed in fact, as it had already in law, into a State Primary School, being filled mainly with children; while the Bridgewater almshouse became the establishment designated as the State Workhouse.

Thus we have one State Almshouse, destined for orphan dependents; one State Primary School, for the children; and one State Workhouse.

Some almshouse inmates remain at the two latter establishments, but this is only because the process is incomplete.

The State Almshouse at Tewksbury contained, on the 1st of January, eight hundred and twenty-eight inmates. Of these are the insane and idiotic, the chronic invalids, men and women, and other permanent cases, amounting perhaps to three-fifths of the whole number. The insane and idiotic alone number more than two hundred and fifty. There are also at Tewksbury, at this season of the year, to a less extent, at all seasons, many transient inmates, and is the one great State Almshouse to which the dependents of the Commonwealth repair before they are classified. The number now there nearly a hundred and fifty are of whom will be sent to Monson ; many are acute cases of sickness, which will terminate there, either by death or recovery, within a short time ; some are vicious persons, who will be sentenced to the Workhouse ; and some are the honest poor, who have taken temporary refuge in an almshouse.

For details of the establishment at Tewksbury we would refer the Legislature to the Reports of our Secretary and General Agent. It has never had a stronger claim on the attention and charity of the Commonwealth than at present, and has been better managed, in our opinion, than at the present time.

The appropriation of twenty-six hundred dollars for the purchase of land has been judiciously expended during the past year, but no extensive changes or additions have been made in the buildings.

At Monson and Bridgewater considerable sums have been expended for such changes and additions. At Bridgewater repairs were rendered necessary by the transformation of the almshouse into a Workhouse, and were carried on under the authority given to our Board. At Monson a new Hospital has been built and new accommodations have been provided for patients and play-rooms, the work being carried on after consultation with our Board by the local authorities, but not in conformity with our recommendations. In consequence of this, as we believe, while the expenditures for construction at Bridgewater have not exceeded the estimates, and those for heating have been very little in excess, the money laid out at Monson, on the other hand, has been nearly double the sum appropriated. We shall refer to this subject again in speaking of the Primary School.

3. The State Primary School at Monson.

The year just closed has been the first full year of this new institution, which, considering all the disadvantages under which it has labored, has more than satisfied our expectations. It is doing, as it did, in the shadow of an Almshouse, and under the management of persons who had little faith in the new order of things, it has gone steadily forward amidst obstacles which would have thwarted any experiment not based on the principles. These obstacles have gradually been removed. The government of the establishment has been changed. A new year opens with harmony in the management, and the co-operation of the local authorities in the plans of the Board. The resignation of Dr. Brewster, as Superintendent, has been a way clear for the appointment of a successor who will be able to do the Primary School in fact, what it is in principle. The Visitation is now, and must continue to be, a great aid to its work; and, so long as this is kept up, and a high degree of personal qualifications is maintained among the visitors, the School, its results will continue to be more and more improving with every passing year.

The number of pupils in the School on the first of January 1868, was four hundred and sixteen, of whom upwards of three hundred and seventy were in attendance on the several classes taught by as many instructors. At the same time, there were in the Almshouse department nearly three hundred and fifty, this was an unusually large proportion. The Principal of the School, who, with the co-operation of the Superintendent, directs the education of the pupils, is the Reverend Mr. Foster, in whom all who know him have great confidence. He is devoting himself with a missionary spirit to the elevating the poor children under his instruction.

The Act establishing the Primary School appropriated five thousand dollars for the necessary alterations and repairs to which the buildings and grounds might require. The last Legislature added the sum of forty-five hundred dollars for a new Hospital and for improving the buildings and grounds. The late Superintendent and the Inspectors, under the direction of the Board, have expended between ten and twelve thousand dollars, of which some four or five thousand is still unpaid. It will come in as a deficiency in the present year. I am bound in duty to say that this unauthorized expenditure was wholly wrong. The last Legislature, in appropriating a new Hospital, and for other purposes, granted more than originally asked for by the Inspectors, and, doubtless, could have granted still more, had it been necessary. But the appropriation once made should not have been exceeded, nor could it have been, had the language of the law and the urgent recommendations of this Board been heeded by the local authorities. To the incapacity and negligence of the late Superintendent, and to the want of energy on the part of the Inspectors, in our opinion, is due the excess of expenditure for buildings at Monson, against which this Board protested at every step, and still protests.

Undoubtedly the buildings at Monson needed, and still need, extensive repairs and additions to fit them for their new uses. The money for this purpose should be expressly voted over and over again by the Legislature, in accordance with law and precedent, and this Board cannot sanction any other mode of effecting the most desirable changes.

The new Hospital will furnish the means of providing for classifying the sick better than has ever been done at any of the State Almshouses, and the arrangement of school-rooms, dormitories, grounds, etc., when completed, will be a great improvement on what formerly existed. We would therefore recommend the Legislature to grant the money necessary to carry out and to complete these changes; but without sanctioning the improper action of the past year or two.

. 4. The State Workhouse.

We need do little more than call the attention of the Legislature to the statements of the Secretary and the General Agent in regard to this establishment, which has reached a degree of success in the past year beyond our highest expectations. It is intended to be a useful adjunct to our penal institutions, and is serviceable in checking and regulating public pauperism.

The number of sentenced persons present on the first of January was two hundred and forty-one; the number in the Workhouse Department at the same time being one hundred and fifty, many of whom were the infant children of sentenced men. There is no doubt that the lives of these infants have,

in many cases, been preserved by retaining their mo-sentence.

5. The State Reformatories and State Prisons.

We shall also add little concerning the Reform-Prisons. The number of pupils in the three Sta-tories has increased in the past year, until there operation of the Conditional Pardon Act of 1867.

0,000 in these Institutions, and by the towns and cities for support of their poor, about $680,000 more. Since the first October some changes worth noting have taken place in the financial condition of the Institutions. The debt of the Northampton Hospital has been paid, and both there and at Taunton weekly board paid by the State is considered ample to meet cost of support.

Schedule A. will show, so far as we have been able to ascertain, the summary cost to the State of these charities for the calendar year 1867. It must be understood, however, that the sum of Appropriations does not include the sums last year appropriated for deficiencies in 1866, (upwards of $40,000;) that the column of Expenses only gives the sums already expended upon the appropriation for 1867. Besides these, there are $8,000 omitted from Schedule B., which sum is known to be due, but has not been claimed. Taking account of this, the surplus on Schedule B. would be changed to a deficiency of $5,000, while the total Expenditure on both Schedules would not be far from $650,000. From this should be deducted sums paid in by the State Prison and other institutions, amounting to nearly $150,000, and leaving a net expenditure of more than half a million of dollars for current expenses.

We have not included in either Schedule the outlay for construction, and for the purchase of land at Bridgewater, Monson, Northampton, Tewksbury and the State Prison. The appropriations for these purposes were $50,000 at the State Prison, of which $37,906.84 have been expended; $27,113.35 at Bridgewater, (besides the surplus of $19,402.70 left over from the appropriation of 1867,) of which $31,305.31 have been expended; $4,500 at Monson, where the expenditure has been $3,350.52; $3,000 at Northampton, and $2,600 at Tewksbury. The sum of these appropriations is $77,213.35; the sum of expenditures is $83,161.67, of which, however, $4,849.24 is nominally paid for the labor of convicts on the Prison extension, and $3,350.52 remains unpaid, being the amount of the capital deficiency at Monson.

Adding these aggregates to the town pauper expenses, and adding also the net cost of the County and City Prisons, amounting to about $270,000 for the year, and we have a grand total of above a million and a half of dollars ($1,500,000) annually expended for charities and correction by the State and the municipalities.

Besides the sums given in Schedule A., there have been expended for construction, about $33,000 at the State Prison, and $30,000 at the State Pauper Establishments, and $3,000 at the Northampton Hospital; the total expenditure of this kind being not far from $70,000. We have reckoned $15,000 appropriated last year for the Worcester Hospital among the deficiency appropriations for 1866, which, as stated, amount to over $40,000. Adding this sum to the Expenses of 1866, they amount, on Schedule A., $30,000 more than the expense incurred in 1867.

In respect to the large sums expended for construction and repairs at the State Prison and the State Workhouse, together amounting to nearly $70,000, a few remarks should be made. Less than half this amount has been expended at Bridgewater for buildings and alterations which were absolutely necessary to fit the Workhouse for its proper place of imprisonment, and for heating both departments of the establishment with steam. The latter measure was also necessary as a precaution against conflagration and to facilitate the needful separation between the different sexes and criminals. The money appropriated, which was taken from a special grant of 1866, partly from the unexpended balance of the Bridgewater appropriations of 1866 and partly from a special grant of 1867, has been paid and is now due for these alterations and additions, and for the purchase of land. Its outlay has been regulated with great economy and excellent judgment by Mr. Goodspeed, Superintendent, and the result is worth far more to the State than the money expended. By means of the work done, we have an additional prison in the State, sufficient, with the already existing, to meet the increase of crime for the next ten years at least.

In the enlargement of the State Prison, good economy has also been exercised, but there was by no means such an opportunity for the work done. The Prison was already as large as a prison ever ought to be; it was not full, and the increase of crime consequent on the close of the war had been small. Moreover, the proposed amendment of the Conditional Pardon Law seemed to open a door for the discharge of many of a better class of convicts. Under these circumstances, it did not seem to have been necessary to enlarge the Prison.

it has been done, however, we are glad to learn that it enable the Warden to classify and provide for his prisoners as was before possible.

I.—SPECIAL CONSIDERATIONS CONCERNING EXCEPTIONAL CLASSES.

1. The Insane.

We pass now to the further consideration of those wards of the Commonwealth who are infirm and dependent by lack of, or impairment of, self-guiding faculties.

The State makes no special provision for treating disease of this kind, except that of the brain; and this exception seems to be made because while other disorders do not necessarily impair self-guiding powers, nor make men burdensome, disorder of the brain does both, and sometimes makes them dangerous to others.

As a child drowning in the water or lost in the woods, appeals irresistibly to public sympathy, and receives instant aid, so does a man reduced to childhood and made helpless by insanity. Other dependents may be disregarded; other sick may be neglected; but the insane must be attended to, and provided for. If his friends fail to do it, the public steps in and takes charge of him.

Insanity is always disease. In a person born sane it is manifested by derangement of the internal machinery manifested outwardly by deranged conduct. It can hardly be purely accidental; and seldom the result of individual misconduct alone. One man's mind becomes deranged more readily than another's because he inherits cerebral machinery which is less endowed with power of harmonious and persistent action; perhaps has a predisposing tendency to early derangement. Of twenty born at the same time, the brain of one which is sound from the germ, and unharmed in youth, will carry any conceivable load of work, stand a great amount of abuse, and still function on vigorously, fourscore years; while that of another will reel under the extra jar, and be upset in early life. These are the extreme cases; between them are the ordinary ones whose reasoning power and whose persistent health depend upon outward influences. These influences, social, political, commercial, are with us, unfavorable; insanity abounds; and if it does not positively increase in proportion to the whole population, it does increase in that class from which the dependent class is mainly supplied. In many cases only feebleness of intellect, but liability to insanity and imbecility are the result of a train of circumstances which have reduced certain families to a precarious condition; the occurrence of positive derangement in one member brings ruin to the whole family to want.

It therefore behooves the State, (or the public,) to exert preventive or curative influences within the reach of the class of the population most liable to insanity, so far as can be done without violating other sound principles of charity. Without going into details we may assume that as far as the class of dependents is concerned, what is stated by an eminent authority of Scotland, is true of Massachusetts, to wit: "THAT MORE PERSONS ARE ANNUALLY ADDED TO THE GREAT GENERAL LIST OF THE INSANE, THAN ARE REMOVED FROM IT BY DEATH, RECOVERY, OR ANY OTHER CAUSE, AND THERE IS THUS AN ACCUMULATION."

The same authority suggests that this is in some measure due to "the longer duration of life which more humane treatment secures." There are other causes besides this at work here; and the increase will doubtless go on with us for some time, but not indefinitely; because there exist, in our country at least, the elements of correctional agencies which, when fully developed, will not only arrest the increase, but will effect about a decrease. That time, however, is not near at hand, and we have to face three facts:

First, that insanity is on the increase in the class most liable to become dependent;

Second, that more public provision will soon be needed;

Third, that such provision ought not to be made by erecting up more great hospitals, or aggregating the insane in mass

After a general notice of the several State Institutions for the Insane, the Board has already suggested a change in the present mode of taking care of certain classes of these unfortunate do not need constant medical treatment, which will not only be at the central establishments, but carry out still farther the plan of enlisting private families in the public work of hygiene.

A proposal for such an innovation upon the old established system is sure to meet much opposition ; some honest, some envenomed.

It implies opinions which will be condemned at the outset as radically heterodox.

It is unprofessional and therefore not respectable.

It boldly calls in question some mere dogmas, which, having been adopted in times past, possessing the gravity of age, and being enacted into laws and long established Institutions, are regarded as fixed principles.

It is, therefore, likely to be opposed and condemned by the principal members of the medical profession, who are apt to be the loudest and noisiest, though not the most numerous.

The subdivision of any profession into special branches, which intensifies knowledge and power, increases also the exclusiveness of craft, and engenders professional pride and dogmatism. The subdivision of our medical profession proves that even the most intelligent, humane class known as Superintendents of the Asylums, do not escape the action of this general principle. They are in the consciousness of personal integrity and intelligence ; skilled in what is supposed to be a mysterious art ; respected by the community ; holding places of profit and honor ; exercising large appointing powers ; virtually controlling and expending the expenditure of millions ; they naturally coalesce into a powerful craft, and are liable to engender the pride and dogmatism characteristic of such bodies.

It will be much to the credit of this body if the majority could lend assent to this experiment. It will be strange if they do not earnestly oppose it. According to them, Lunatic Asylums and Asylums must be multiplied, enlarged, richly equipped and improved by every appliance which kindness can suggest, art invent, or money procure ; but not a stone of their foundation must be touched. They were hewn on principles sanctioned by the elders and wise men ; they are solid with age ; they must not be loosened or impaired, and no rivalment must be built up to test their usefulness.

Against this, common sense will continually rise. "The aggregation of persons in morbid condition of rotten stone in your foundation. The principle is most of your daily work is to counteract the evils flowing from it. It should be followed no farther than is absolutely necessary. Diffuse, not aggregate your morbid material. Influence the insane by sane, not by insane social influences."

Again, mercy will second the appeal of common sense. That harmless insane men and women ought not to be deprived of their personal freedom. Sorely smitten, they ought not to be further afflicted by segregation into a class and tenderly taken into the bosom of society.

The great liability to abuse will be strongly urged against this method. The Board is perfectly aware of the cruelties, and crimes even, engendered by the old system of boarding out paupers; especially those of feeble or deranged minds. Letting them to the lowest bidder was often sending them to the lowest and most sordid families, and causing them to be treated as mere brutes. In all countries, the condition of the insane has exposed them to abuse. The history of this class in Massachusetts would furnish many instances savoring of total depravity.*

With a full knowledge of such old abuses, and of the danger to their recurrence, the Board is not deterred from recommending further trial of the system of boarding out into families.

If abuses brought condemnation of systems, what stand? Surely not the present Asylum treatment; but with the working of those Institutions know that occur, and must by the very nature of things occur, be most carefully and conscientiously administered. They may direct "non-restraint," but officers will use it; quiet troublesome patients by sedative drugs, or subdue by douches, by muffs, camisoles, and straps; attendants vent spite by pinches, petty punishments, or by words rather than blows; nay, will make their patients victims of their passions. A knowledge of but a small portion of ill-treatment can break through the privacy of these establishments, but it is continually leaking out—especially in Continental Asylums. Even in Great Britain, where ordinary precautions are taken against abuse, the records contain recent instances of attendants of well-regulated public asylums being convicted and punished, by severe sentences, for brutally ill-treating insane patients. Insane and the young women of erotic tendencies, placed in such asylums by parish authorities expressly to guard them against having become pregnant there.

* The attention of many humane people to the condition of the insane, some years ago, was awakened by a case related by a reliable person of some standing. In visiting a house in the country, he saw a woman come out with a dish of victuals—principally the raw heads and tails of fish—which she set on the ground, at the same time uttering a peculiar cluck; whereupon a creature of human shape, in tattered garments made of old carpet, rushed greedily seized upon the food with his hands, tore off the flesh from the bones with his teeth, and devoured it voraciously. It was an idiot, put under the control of the town authorities.

ABUSES IN HOSPITALS, ETC.

Things will occur, so long as men are what they are; rarely, we trust, but still they will occur, even in our lunatic asylums.

Moreover, patients in such asylums, here as elsewhere, do occasionally commit suicide, or make deadly assaults upon each other or upon attendants.

We should not condemn the system of keeping a certain number of patients permanently in such asylums, on account of the abuses, any more than we should condemn the system of keeping another class in families, for similar reasons.

It would be almost a waste of words to show that the evils of the method of boarding out town paupers could hardly by any possibility be reproduced under a new and well-regulated system.

The times and the circumstances are quite different. People are wiser than they were, and with wisdom has come more tender mercy, especially in regard to the insane. They are nowhere regarded as they were fifty years ago. The method was neither well digested into a system, nor supervised at all. Besides, the insane would not be let out to the lowest bidder, but to the higher ones; to those whose character would give assurance of worth.

In this, as in every other market, we should get what we are ready to pay for. If, besides maintaining the State's life by food and shelter, we demand for them kindness, and moral and religious influences, we must offer compensation.

The strongest argument that has been brought against this project is, that families cannot be found to take charge of the harmless and chronic insane. We do not believe this to be true if an earnest effort is made. There is no element of social good which is not to be found in the community.

Some may think to decry this plan by asking "Who will take a crazy man into his family?" Not so; they thoughtlessly divide their fellows into entirely distinct classes, and think of mad men instead of men mad—of lunatics, of men insane; who think that a man who becomes odd, whimsical, infirm in some faculty, deranged in certain opinions, insane on certain topics, even to the extent of believing himself to be Jupiter or Cræsus, thereby ceases to be a man, and for any ordinary house, and forfeits all right to such a home as he might safely enjoy.

But there are those who will reason more wisely, and act more kindly.

If Massachusetts makes a call for suitable families to take charge of the chronic and harmless insane, it will be met from the abundance of her moral resources, as was a sudden and unexpected call for a vast army from her physical resources.

2. Deaf-Mutes.

- This Board is happy to be able to announce that the State has provided means of instruction for our deaf-mutes, and that the borders of their native State has at last been made known to them in earnest; and that the experiment of teaching articulation to all admit to be most desirable when possible, is being conducted auspiciously.

THE EDUCATION OF DEAF-MUTES.

ing aside considerations of convenience of access, as not and principles required that where the main object of ity upon the subjects thereof, and to prevent its disturbeir character; to make them, so far as possible, like ordinen, and to fit and prepare them for ordinary social life, ught, during all the tender years of childhood and youth, trained, and taught, and associated with ordinary persons, live in ordinary society as much as possible; and they not to be segregated, set apart in a class, and associated y with each other, any more than was absolutely necessary, e peculiarities growing out of their infirmity should be ified by such association, and by imitation.

Methods of Instruction.

o same general principles seemed to demand that where ess prevented children from acquiring our speech by the e should not select for them another form of language, t about teaching them speech in some other way.
ech being the only form of language natural to man, and e signs being only supplementary to speech, we ought to that when possible, rather than try to make the supple-the principal. Deafness was the obstacle in the pathway r language. Doubt and timidity said, get around it by the mute another form of language; boldness and faith overcome it.

ese general considerations, urged by thinking men, were ly seconded by the simple and natural promptings of parental breast. The father and the mother who had renounced all hope that their little child could ever hear voices, and sadly concluded that it must ever be mute, d, as the next best thing, that its infirmity should leave arks upon its character; and that it might grow up as much like other children as special pains and tra make it.

Now the general policy adopted in this country for the and training of mutes runs counter to this reasoning and instincts. Mutes were selected out from other children, segregated together in large numbers; kept together through the most impressible years of life; withdrawn from the hourly influences of home and of neighborhood; from friendships with hearing children; subjected to the influence and the example of others of like infirmity; taught, in part, by other mutes. These objectionable features were overlooked or disregarded in the organization of institutions for deaf-mutes; and the administration of them had the practical effect of intensifying the undesirable effects of deafness, and making the subjects of it more distinct.

But Institutions once started without duly considering the importance of keeping them small, grew with the rapidity characteristic of the country. Already one establishment on the banks of the Hudson gathers more than four hundred within its walls, and that on the banks of the Connecticut two hundred, and both have been rapidly increasing in numbers. Instead of regarding the aggregations of mutes in establishments as undesirable in themselves, made necessary by considerations of economy, and therefore to be kept small, was consistent with it, their managers seemed to view it as another in efforts to get the most pupils. It led them to maintain the creation of new Institutions in their own States and even to thwart plans for their creation in other States from which they hoped to draw pupils. Funds for the general government for the common cause of the education of mutes, were used to prevent the establishment of other schools possibly become rival schools; though doubtless with the delusion that the parent school had attained perfect

The same general causes prevented an earnest, persistent attempt to impart (what all admitted to be desirable, if it were attainable,) the power of articulation.

to those pupils who were not born deaf. The efforts were reluctantly made in consequence of outside pressure, were not only futile, but seemed ludicrous to think-ers. The attempt to teach articulation to a small class at an establishment, where ninety-five-hundredths of all the influences, of all means of intercourse, and of all language were of the deaf-mute character; where the universal language was that of visible signs; where the instruction was in those signs; and where even part of the instructors were themselves deaf-mutes, was like trying to make a penny whistle in a gale of wind.

The general aspect of these great establishments was not pleasant. In them several hundred persons, laboring under the same infirmity were congregated and kept during the ten years of childhood and youth. They were cut off from the influences of family affections; from the varied social relations of sex and of age; from the friendships of neighbors; from the daily intercourse with ordinary boys and girls, were subjected to a sort of monastic life. All this seemed calculated to fashion and train them into ordinary men and women, in whom the effects of their infirmity should be as little distinguishable as possible.

They were kindly treated and zealously taught; but what was learned was at great cost in other advantages; so that a man has been continually asking, Cannot it be had at less cost? Massachusetts has at last practically answered, We will German Schools for Deaf-Mutes.

Strongly contrasted with those great establishments are some small German institutions visited during the year by our Commissioner. A large but ordinary dwelling-house, arranged and furnished exactly like the neighboring houses, in a large and pleasant garden, was the whole establishment. The Superintendent and his wife were father and mother, teacher, companion and friend to a dozen or fifteen deaf-mute children. They made together one large family; had one dining-room and one sitting-room; they lived together as ordinary families and they did the household work; they cultivated the garden; they visited their neighbors, and were visited in a neighborly way; they went to the neighboring churches, and other families do.* Moreover they conversed together in articulate speech; they did not sign at each other—thus communicating with each other. All other mode of communication was proscribed, dictated, discouraged, and, to a great extent, banished. Signs were to them what they always should be—speech, not substitutes for speech.

If Massachusetts is to copy any model, we trust it will copy such an one, rather than the great congregations in France, England and the United States.

The Experiments of Dr. Blanchet.

Dr. Blanchet, physician to the French Imperial School for Deaf-Mutes, a gifted and zealous man, urged upon the government such strong considerations in favor of providing for deaf-mutes in common schools, that measures were taken to test the feasibility of the plan. But very few persons vigorously seconded the good doctor; so the experiments in schools languished even during his life; and when he unfortunately deceased, they will probably be abandoned.

Our Chairman visited several of these schools, and found that deaf-mutes were taught; but found them in an unsatisfactory condition. Some of the fundamental principles of the French system were disregarded. Articulation was made a secondary, not a primary method, of communication. The system that requires not only earnest and persistent effort, but determined efforts to suppress, for the time, all other means of conversation. Silence must be interdicted as well as sign talk is interdicted in other classes. None of the teachers were impressed with the importance of this. Indeed, no one was found who seemed to have any peculiar fitness for the task.

Then the mute scholars were put into a class by themselves, and no efficient measures were taken to encourage their associating with ordinary scholars, and to discourage their associating with each other.

* This school was near Basle.

SCHOOLS IN PARIS.

all there were certain manifest advantages. The children at their own homes, came daily to school, and were associated to some extent with ordinary children. It encouraged in other ways these social relations between them; while the ordinary French method, which has been copied in this country, tends in the opposite direction. For instance, it is the custom in Paris to have competitions for prizes by classes or recitations from the different public schools; and if those schools have deaf-mutes among their scholars, they share whatever advantages there may be in the practice of competition between home and school. The school in the Rue d'Argenteuil has on an average twelve mutes among its day scholars, who study and go just as the others do. The teachers thought that there were decided advantages from the mutes being thrown into closer relations with ordinary youth by the existing arrangements, imperfect as they are, and cited the share and interest which they have in these competitions, as a proof. Practical persons will see the great importance of these advantages; and we trust that practical persons will make an effort to secure them for the deaf-mutes of our large cities and towns. The mutes of Boston ought to be able to receive education as their more favored fellows do; in primary, intermediate, and grammar schools. They ought not to be obliged to wait until the years of childhood are passed, and they can be taken from the mother's care to a distant Institution. Indeed, they ought not to be obliged to leave home at all to obtain their education. On the contrary, they, even more than ordinary children, ought to enjoy every possible advantage for strengthening the links which bind families, and bind society together, which they lack the most important of them. We trust that this interesting experiment may be tried in our capital; and that it may not languish for want of zealous advocates who have faith in it; nor die for want of persistent effort, as it is likely to do in the French Capital.

The Clarke Institution.

The first organized School for Mutes in Massachusetts was opened at Northampton on the first of October, 1867, by Miss

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT, 1867.

Harriet B. Rogers, who had already conducted a private school with considerable success at Chelmsford.

It is under charge of a chartered corporation, and is endowed with fifty thousand dollars by Mr. John C. Davis, an Act of the Legislature, mute children of Massachusetts are placed in the School at the State's expense, provided the cost be not greater than that of the Asylum at Hartford. It is a condition that this condition will be removed by the Legislature when the payment ought to be in consideration of the value received, and not in consideration of the fact that a neighboring State will receive them cheaper than ours can afford to do. The Institution, by reason of possessing funds which were not intended to promote the education of the mutes of all States, cannot keep pupils at less than cost, and to underbid other States, and so retard their development.

At least, our citizens, who may prefer to have their children educated in a Massachusetts School, should not be prevented from doing it by the fact that a cheaper one exists in Connecticut.

The distinguishing feature of the School at Northampton is the prominence given to teaching articulation. In teaching the pupil an arbitrary language of visible signs, addressed to the eye of the hearer, he is taught to articulate natural speech as closely as possible by addressing visible signs to the ear of the hearer; and he is taught to understand the visible signs of the audible sounds, which are addressed by others; that is, to read their words upon their lips. The fundamental idea is, that as everything in nature differs from every other thing, so the positions and motions of the organs of speech differ in every different word and syllable; and the eye and the brain can be trained to rapid perception and understanding of these differences, and catch the speaker's meaning as the words fall from his lips.

Mr. Gallaudet's Report.

It is useless longer to deny the possibility of doing this in Germany, where the method of teaching mutes to speak has been carried on with the most persistent zeal g evidences of it abound. The opponents of the method, once denied that it is possible to teach mutes to articulate, merely deny its value, and say it is a thing to be marvelled not imitated.

Thousands of volumes have been written upon the subject, several commissioners have been sent from this country to examine the German Schools; and their reports are before the public.

The latest, that of Mr. Gallaudet, is nearly an exhaustive report of the condition of the European Institutions, but by no means of the whole subject, because it is not, by the condition of the schools, nor by the proficiency of the pupils, nor by the degree of power which they have to articulate and to read upon the lips, that the practical value of the method of articulation can be tested. It is well known that many mutes who excel in the exercises at our Institutions, who construct good sentences, write clearly and rapidly upon the blackboard, and attract crowds of visitors by the rapidity with which they converse with their teacher in signs, do nevertheless fail to make any knowledge of practical use in life. They struggle on awhile against the difficulty of making others converse with them by sign and pencil, but finally give up the effort; fall back upon manual signs; and at last lapse into total isolation from society, and confine themselves to the company of other mutes.

Is this likely to be the case with mutes who learn to converse by articulation?

Investigations of Dr. Howe.

Our Chairman has endeavored to get evidence about this, not from books merely, nor from the Institutions, but from real life. He has visited several German, Swiss and Italian towns the excellent method prevails of teaching the deaf-mutes their trades, not in a special institution, but in ordinary workshops, in which they spend from three to five hours a day.

A number of these mute apprentices were visited, and seen in their intercourse with their employers, which was by articulation. Of course there was a good deal of mouthing; but the fact was apparent, the familiar intercourse was by speech.

A still more interesting question remained. Do those who have left the Institutions entirely, and gone into the world, continue to use articulation, or do they gradually drop it, and of articulate words, and rely upon visible signs and gestures? These questions are not answered in books and reports, and therefore Dr. Howe sought them in actual life.

Intelligent and reliable persons connected with the Institutions testified that in almost all cases the pupils carried into manhood the use of articulate speech which they had acquired in youth. In order to verify this, he sought out several graduates of the Schools who were working at various trades, and followed them into the shops of tailors, shoemakers and mill-makers. They were found at their work, and generally conversed with hearing persons. They could understand his questions, pronounced slowly and distinctly; and answered in intelligible spoken sentences. He saw that their communication with their employers and fellow-workmen was carried on mainly by articulate speech. The degree to which they substituted for themselves of signs and gestures to eke out their meaning varied with different individuals, and was, upon the whole greater among ordinary persons; but their main reliance was upon articulate speech.

Some of the most experienced talkers made very little use of articulate speech, indeed, seemed to utter many visible signs of words, without any audible vocal utterance. The mute could not hear them, and therefore they spared it, or only whispered, relying upon the eye detecting by the eye the sign of the words upon their mouth.

The German System not Equally applicable Everywhere

It may properly be remarked here, that the facility of making the most desirable provision for the special classes who need public assistance, depends very much upon social conditions; and certain provisions can be easily made in this country which seem impossible in others. This shows the importance, in making arrangements for the care and support of dependent classes, of securing the co-operation of a wide circle of individuals and families; and of gradually accustoming the public with the work. To illustrate: the ts of the Campine District in Belgium have been accustomed during many centuries to receive chronic insane persons in their families as boarders. Consequently, when a lunatic is taken there, his friends find a large market, and their difficulty is to learn which is best among the numerous competitors for the new comer. But here in Massachusetts we meet the opposite difficulty; not many families have had experience in the care of insane persons; it will not be easy at first to induce persons to undertake it.

It is beginning to be somewhat in Germany, with regard to deaf-mute apprentices, as in Belgium, with regard to the insane. Our Chairman reports that he found several persons who had long been in the habit of receiving mute apprentices in their families; who had become specially interested in them, and preferred them to ordinary boys.

Then the method of carrying on work is specially favorable to this arrangement. In small towns the tailor's shop is a room in his own house; and his wife or daughter assists him. They, with the apprentice, make one family; if he be a mute, his intercourse is by the method of articulate speech, which has been taught in the School, and which he continues to use with them.

The advantages of this method over that adopted in our Reform Schools and in Deaf-Mute Asylums where the boys learn their trade in the workshop of the establishment, are manifest and manifold. For a certain class in our Reform Schools it would be an excellent substitute for the present method. In the case of mutes the advantages are equally great. It familiarizes them with ordinary life, ordinary workshops, and the ordinary ways of doing business. They begin to learn how to live in that society of which they are to become members, and commence that part of their education the object of which should be to counteract the tendency of their infirmity to isolate them from their fellows.

The Deaf-Mute Controversy.

To return to our immediate subject. What is called the Deaf-Mute question," that is, whether the French method or the German method is best, has been sharply agitated in European countries for more than half a century ; and much has been written and spoken here. It is a deeper question than it is usually supposed to be ; and its real merits are generally overlooked.

Those who argue (or dispute, rather,) about the comparative merits of teaching articulation after the method of the Germans ; or of teaching a language made up of natural signs and arbitrary signs, after the method of the French ; as if this were a crucial test of the merits of the general system for the deaf-mutes followed in the two countries, take a very narrow view of the matter.

It is not a mere question of teaching articulation, but of teaching it, but a broad question to be settled upon liberal and humane views :

In considering it we should look to the general tendency of the whole system of education for the deaf-mutes in Germany ; in the countries which have adopted it, as Switzerland, France, Belgium ; and the general tendency and effects in France, in those countries which have adopted its system, as England, the United States. In which countries are the abnormal effects of deafness most effectually counteracted by education ? Where are the deaf-mutes as a whole most effectually saved from individual segregation into a class apart ; and where are individuals most effectually saved from individual isolation ? This is the real question ; and those who have looked over the whole subject will answer, " In Germany, most decidedly." There, everywhere, the general effects of the whole method of training and educating are, to assimilate and fuse the deaf-mutes in ordinary society. This is owing, partly to the fact that the method of articulation itself brings the deaf-mutes more constantly face to face, and eye to eye, but partly to the general social influences.

The Germans, as a people, are strongly democratic in their tendencies, and perhaps their method of dealing with the deaf-mutes may be considered more democratic, inasmuch as it effectually abolishes the distinction between those who hear and those who do not hear, requires a common language.

EUROPEAN AND AMERICAN SCHOOLS.

a France and England, on the contrary, the tendency to al distinctions, to segregation into classes, is stronger; and more marked feature of society. In both countries the ration of the dependents from general society, and their division into classes, is more marked. They are often ormed, or wear badges; and therefore the segregation of es into a special class seems natural. The adoption of the nch method in the organization of the first institution in United States, is well known to have been the result rather ccident than of deliberate choice.

esides, the general results of the intrinsic tendencies of the systems had not been so clearly seen fifty years ago as they be now. The method adopted in the Institutions after- ds erected in the United States was not chosen by knowl- e gained from the wide experience of Europe, but was ed from the one hastily adopted at Hartford. The writings r. Gallaudet do not show that he had carefully studied the its of the two systems at their fountain heads, and deliber- y adopted the French as the best one. We believe he did understand German; and certainly he did not visit the man Schools. On the contrary, as has been said, he oted the French method hastily and almost accidentally. roved, however, in the hands of that able, zealous and ener- c man, a powerful instrument for good. The fire of his et, and the strength of his arm, gave to it a potency which rs supposed to be inherent in the system itself, and they efore copied it. The same vigor and enthusiasm appear ay in the labors of his son, Mr. Gallaudet of Washington. has returned from Europe an advocate for teaching ulation to all deaf-mutes. The result of his inquiries ad is, on the whole, unfavorable to the present exclusive od of the American schools, and it is very likely that this will be much modified, just as the French system is undergoing essential modifications in France.

Massachusetts has the great advantage of opposing profit by the experience of other countries; and her people beginning to feel, more strongly than formerly, the duty towards the unfortunate class of deaf-mutes. The number of this class is shown by the researches of our Secretaries to be nearly twice as great as had been supposed; for there is all probability, nearly a thousand deaf-mutes in the Commonwealth. The number of children requiring an education by some method is not less than two hundred and fifty. Whether Massachusetts does or does not decide that instruction in articulation shall be the leading feature in her deaf-mute instruction, (although we believe she has positively decided,) she will, we trust, avoid building large institutions, or aggregating large numbers of mutes together. She will temper her whole system by a constant effort to maintain distinction between mutes and ordinary persons. This is her plain duty; for wherever the direct influence of the State is upon any social conditions, it should be carefully exercised as to lessen, rather than increase, the inequality of advantages arising from causes for which men are not responsible.

3. Idiots.

The existence of Idiots as a class in any country is the result of the imperfect physical condition of a people; and the number varies with the varying condition thereof.

Idiots properly belong in the great class of insane, and therefore all those considerations in favor of the public provision for the Insane apply to them.

Most of them are unsound or infirm of mind from birth; they are born with such imperfect, or such feeble, organs, that mental powers cannot be developed sufficiently for self-control and self-guidance; or else the vital force of the system is insufficient to carry on the mental development under ordinary exposure. They therefore never emerge from childhood. In savage life they would perish from exposure, or be wild beasts, as soon as the protection called for by maternal instincts should be withdrawn.

Civilized people protect and rear them; and those at public expense are cared for in Hospitals or Asylums for the Insane. The most advanced people have recently adopted measures for clothing and training young idiots and feeble-minded children, in a view of developing their bodily and mental power to its maximum, and reducing their dependence to its minimum.

In France, where special schools for Idiots originated and were carried on for some time with characteristic enthusiasm, have not been steadily developed, but have rather deteriorated. The Schools for Idiots in the Hospitals of Salpêtrière and Bicêtre, are not up even to the low level of excellence attained in the other departments of those vast establishments.

In England, on the other hand, although the subject was not introduced with any flourish of scientific trumpets, and no idiot was paraded as a wild man caught in the woods and subjected to philosophical treatment, the care of this class of persons was taken up by people of common sense, and treated in a common-sense way. Schools and Asylums for young idiots have there been multiplied; and they return abundant fruit in the improvement and elevation of the numerous pupils committed to them. The subject was taken up almost simultaneously in this country and in England; and the first public Institution for Idiots was established in Massachusetts.

Next, the State authorities of New York called upon the Superintendent of this Institution for light and assistance, and afterwards employed the Superintendent of an excellent private Institution in Massachusetts, to establish a School in Albany, which was removed to Syracuse in a few years. It is conducted with marked ability and success, in an appropriate building, erected by the State, at a cost of about a hundred thousand dollars, and maintained by an annual appropriation of about twenty-five thousand dollars.

Pennsylvania followed, and erected a magnificent building at Harrisburg, which is carried on at an annual expense of upwards of fifty thousand dollars, of which the State pays about twenty thousand.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT, 1867.

Other Institutions have been established in Ohio, Connecticut; and some other States send beneficiaries to establishments; so that it may be regarded as the settled policy of our leading States, that special provision shall be made for instructing and training idiots, and youth too feeble to be taught in the common schools.

Such is a brief outline of the history of Schools for Idiots. They are founded upon the principle that all human beings are improvable; that each has a right to the means of improvement; and that his right implies a duty on the part of others to furnish such means. As we improve the feeble child in order that he may become a better man than he otherwise be, so we must improve the imbecile child in order that, even if he does not rise above idiocy, he may be no more an idiot. We may not bury even his poor talent in the earth of sloth.

The results as seen in our School for Idiots prove the correctness of the theory; and also that the performance of duty brings its reward. The idiot child whose feeble mental faculties are strengthened by exercise; who is trained to cleanliness, decency, order and industry, may remain feeble and dependent; but he is more docile, more happy, more capable, and therefore a less offensive and more useful member of society than he would otherwise have been.

The whole amount of good, however, which is accomplished by teaching and training, cannot be seen in what he learns to do, but in what he becomes, without considering also what they prevent. The lack of conscience and the restraining faculties is such as to distinguish the ordinary child by parental care and oversight; and as his powers are withdrawn as his own powers of self-government and self-control are developed. But no such powers are ever developed in the idiot, while his bodily powers are increased and his appetites and passions are developed into their full strength, and he is apt to become offensive to the decency, and dangerous to the peace of society. There are many idiots in our country who have grown to the stature and strength of manhood, but they all continue docile and childlike, and are easily controlled and guided by the teachers and attendants, who are

THE MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL FOR IDIOTS.

There are many others who have gone out from the school, and of them continue to show the effects of the years which passed in habits of cleanliness, decorum and industry. Some continue to be utterly incapable of any degree of self-support; but others become industrious and useful. This is especially so with the girls, who become useful in household work. Exactly the opposite takes place in regard to the blind; men find employment and means of support more easily than the women.

Our Secretary repeats his recommendation that the Institution be removed into the country, but the Board are by no means unanimous in urging the adoption of it. The arguments used by the Director of the School to show that simple manual employments are better adapted to idiotic persons, than the more varied pursuits of agriculture, which call for judgment and choice of action at every varying hour, have not, to our knowledge, been satisfactorily answered, although they have been questioned by some experienced persons. Nor does the manual employment of the pupils of some Idiot Schools upon farms answer them; because, first, such employment and instruction have as yet been very limited, and the results questionable; and, secondly, because the conditions of admission to some of these schools are more comprehensive than ours are. We admit no epileptics; and those who seem to have faculty enough to do chores upon a farm, are not considered proper candidates. Boys who, like those upon our experimental farm, were easily taught to carry milk in cans and potatoes in wheelbarrows, from the barn to the house, but could not see (without the aid of punishment) that they might not innocently lighten their load by pouring part of it on the ground, would hardly be considered as assistants by farmers.

The Board, however, are unanimous in recommending the continuance of Legislative support to this Institution for Idiots; and at least as the present policy of the State towards the blind and dependent classes is continued.

IV.—PROCEEDINGS AND EXPENSES OF THE BOARD IN Votes and General Proceedings.

The work undertaken by this Board being very extensive in its character, and being in part performed by the General Agent and the Secretary under general powers by the Board, the formal votes will be found to cover but a small portion of it. Within the year the number of votes officially by the Board to State Institutions has been ten; the number of business meetings has been twenty-one.

The following are the more important votes passed in cases without dissent by the members present :

(Jan. 2, 1867.) A vote authorizing the Secretary and General Agent to arrange the work of their department, to employ clerks according to their plans, that day signed, and continuing the Visiting Agent, Mr. Fisk, in his office.

(Feb. 6, 1867.) Votes respecting alterations and repairs at the Bridgewater Almshouse, and recommending that the State Workhouse be heated by steam; and the following

“That the Board consider the removal and fitting up of the building at Monson as of more pressing importance than the building of a play-room for the boys, and that the latter could be deferred to the present.”

“That the Visiting Agent be instructed to visit the children in the families from the State Reform School and the State Industrial School, and that he obtain a list of such children at those institutions.”

(March 6, 1867.) The following Vote :—

“That the General Agent be instructed to report to this Board at the monthly meetings, the names and cases of all persons sent to the State Workhouse during the previous month, with a list of those previously sentenced, and such remarks as may be necessary to them.”

Also the following Votes at the dates mentioned :—

(April 3, 1867.) “That the Governor be recommended to appoint an additional State Constable at Bridgewater, for duty at house there, provided the same can be done without expense to commonwealth."

April 27, 1867.) "That the Superintendent be directed to erect a building between the return wing and the stone building at the water almshouse, as indicated in the plan and specifications, and be requested to consider the expediency of placing the boilers engine-room outside the building, in order to avoid the risk of fire to the inmates of the building."

May 9, 1867.) "That the new law concerning the Records and Reports of the Overseers of the Poor be referred to the Executive Committee with instructions to report to the Board, at its next meeting, on any alterations in the present schedules of questions as they may deem proper." (Report adopted, June 7.)

That in view of the resignation of the Superintendent of the State Normal School, and the lack of suitable arrangements at the State Primary School, no pupils be recommended to the Governor for transfer from Westborough to Monson for the present."

July 3, 1867.) The following Votes:—

That the Board advise the appointment of an additional watchman at the Westbury State Almshouse, in consideration of the increased number of the insane residing there."

That this Board will consider infant children deserted by their parents as coming within the class of persons whose health would be endangered by removal to a State Almshouse; and that the General Board is hereby instructed to approve reasonable bills for the care and support of such children at the Massachusetts Infant Asylum, when recommended by Overseers of the Poor, and properly vouched for."

July 11, 1867.) The following Vote:—

That this Board approve the location, general plan and dimensions of the proposed new Hospital at the Primary School; but would not recommend to the Superintendent and Inspectors such simplifications of construction as will reduce the cost considerably below the amount appropriated, and leave something for what the Legislature has appropriated—the removal and fitting up of the boys' play-house."

Oct. 17, 1867.) A ballot electing Dr. S. G. Howe Chairman of the Board.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT, 1867.

And a Vote instructing the General Agent to co-operate with the agent of the Inspectors of the State Almshouse, in obtaining information concerning the children who are sent out from that institution.

(Nov. 6, 1867.) A Vote to hold a hearing on Wednesday of December, to consider the condition of the reformatories, and the expediency of committing offenders thereto, under sentence of law; and a Vote to request the Secretary to print the Annual Report of the General Agent.

(Dec. 18, 1867.) The following Votes:—

“That the subjoined list of towns, dates and forfeitures be presented to the General Agent, with instructions to take the measures necessary to cause to be deducted the amount of forfeiture from the taxes of delinquent towns for the support of State paupers.”

“That this Board will hold sessions twice in the year at the State Workhouse in Bridgewater, for the purpose of examining persons sentenced there, and of discharging such as ought to be discharged; and that the first session shall be held on the 1st of January next.”

Besides the above Votes, a great many have been passed, relating to admitting to, or discharging from, the Primary School, the applications for discharge from the State Workhouse, and the consideration and investigation, and much work involving the supervision and consultation by the Board, has been done. Much of the latter has been assigned to an Executive Committee, consisting of the Chairman, Secretary and General Agent. Full records of all our proceedings are kept, and these are open to the inspection of the Legislature.

It is due from the other members of the Board to the Chairman to say, that Dr. Howe, while visiting the State Workhouse for another purpose during the past year, devoted some of his time to an examination of charitable establishments in France, Belgium, Germany, Switzerland, and Italy, and thereby extended thereby our general knowledge of the state of the Continent of Europe. His observations concerning Insanity and Education, some of which are embodied in this Report, are particularly worthy of attention.

EXPENSES OF THE BOARD IN 1867 AND PREVIOUSLY.

Appropriations, Agents and Expenditures.

For the calendar year 1867, the appropriations to be expended under the direction of this Board or its officers were as follows:—

the Board as a whole,	$3,600 00
the Secretary's Department,	7,500 00
the General Agent,	23,200 00
Total,	$34,300 00

Notwithstanding this large addition to the usual appropriations for the Board, the expenditures have been but little more than usual.

The officers and agents employed, with their compensation, and the other expenses of the Board have been as follows:—

EXPENSES AND RECEIPTS OF THE BOARD.

During the four years and three months, since the establishment of the Board, its total expenses have been $88,178.92, as follows:—

the fifteen months ending Dec. 31, 1864, .	$20,038 90
the year 1865,	20,079 85
the year 1866,	22,690 95
the year 1867,	25,369 72
Total,	$88,178 92

Receipts of the Board, 1867.

The money collected and received by this Board, all passes through the hands of the General Agent, and is by him paid to the State Treasury; the receipts from Head-money, For-res, etc., once in three months, and the receipts from Towns, Individuals, etc., once a year.

total amount of these receipts for the calendar year 1867 is	$29,361 82 which there was received,—
Head-money, etc.,	$22,406 00
Cities and Towns,	4,496 61
Individuals,	2,459 21

The total expenses of the Board and all its departments for calendar year 1867, having been $25,369.72, there remains a surplus of $3,992.10, which represents the amount secured by the Board, over and above all the expenses of the Board. Since the month of October, 1863, the amount thus received has been $161.65, and the excess of receipts over expenses, $8,982.73. This amount has been received during the successive years as follows:—

year 1865,	21,274 21
1866,	30,684 30
1867,	29,361 82
Total,	$97,161 65

It thus appears that the Board has paid all its expenses for its establishment, and has paid besides, a balance of $9,000 into the Treasury. But the money saved by the action of the Board in the removal of persons from the almshouse, and the reduction of expenses at certain Institutions, and the amount which cannot be estimated at less than $100,000, and probably much exceeds that amount.

V.—RECOMMENDATIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

In accordance with law and custom we will now state the suggestions and definite recommendations which the Board is prepared to submit to the Legislature. Of these have been previously made.

1. Commitments to Private Reformatories

We would recommend the passage of a general law imposing stringent provisions against abuse of the power granted to commit juvenile offenders may be, under certain conditions, sentenced to such private Reformatories as the State may certify are proper to receive them. Our recommendations have already been stated.

2. The Enfranchisement of the Indians

We would recommend the present Legislature to appoint a special Committee, with instructions to prepare a bill for enfranchising the Indians of the tribes, under such conditions as may seem just and expedient.

3. Reports from Private Charitable Societies

The public good demands the passage of a law requiring all charitable societies, and the trustees of funds for charitable objects, to report annually to the State the condition of the funds, and the manner of expending the yearly income. The same law should provide for a uniform method of reporting from the public institutions of charity, reform and correction. For the publication of these reports in a more convenient and economical form than is now used. The arguments in favor of this recommendation were set forth in our Third Report.

RECOMMENDATIONS TO THE LEGISLATURE.

4. The Care of the Harmless Insane.

We would recommend the policy of placing a portion of the harmless insane in private dwellings, at the expense of the State, instead of permitting them to accumulate in Hospitals and Asylums, to the exclusion of more recent and curable cases. Under careful supervision, we believe that a considerable number of this class of the indigent insane could thus be provided for, with comfort to themselves and economy to the State, since the plan would not involve the building of costly new cheap structures for their reception. Patients of this class might be sent out from the Hospitals, or permitted to reside in the country, where many of them now are, or soon will be, in their own homes, or some other more suitable place outside the Hospitals. Provisions have already been offered in support of this plan.

5. The Inspection and Discipline of Prisons.

We would repeat our recommendation of last year in regard to this subject, with some remarks on that portion of it which relates particularly to the prisons. The Board suggested a year ago,—

“That steps should be taken to revise and codify our penal statutes, those relating to the discipline of prisons, and the duties of the police and constabulary forces; and as a preliminary, that an Inspector of Prisons for the whole State, should be appointed.”

This preliminary step, the systematic inspection of all our prisons by a person, or a board, having authority to secure uniformity and economy in their management, has been urged by the Board in nearly all its Reports, and has been insisted upon by our Secretary. It is worth considering as a measure of economy alone, because the actual cost of inspection by the numerous persons now delegated for the purpose cannot be less than four thousand dollars, and may be greater, while the most important results of inspection are not secured by the present method.

In regard to Prison Discipline, in general, a few suggestions may be offered; with some remarks on the profits at present derived from the labor of convicts.

These two general principles should underlie the system of imprisonment, and be understood by officers and convicts.

I.—That society does not claim the right to inflict punishment with any vengeful or even punitive purpose; but for the protection of its own security, and for the improvement of its members convicted of crime.

II.—That, so far as his material condition is concerned, a prisoner has no rightful claim during his imprisonment for anything beyond such food, clothing, and quarters as will keep him alive and healthy; he may not even claim such luxuries as savor, nor bed for softness. Whatever comfort may be added to the necessities of life; whatever luxury may be added to its comforts; whatever degree of freedom may be secured for close confinement; whatever reduction of the duration of confinement may be accorded, the convict must earn it by his torious conduct. Not even this, however, absolutely; if he misbehaves, he may justly be remanded to close confinement, and be deprived of bed, chair, and meat, and be restricted to a bare floor, a warm blanket, and coarse bread, during the remainder of his period of his original sentence.

In the organization and administration of prisons, the following things should be kept in view.

First, the Health of the prisoner. He has no right to a long life; neither has society a right to lessen his chances of escape by duration, by crowding him up with others, and by withholding supply of nourishing food, and of fresh air.

Second, Security against escape. This should be secured by making it as to deter the prisoner from attempts to break or escape, and to it should be added knowledge that provision will be made to recapture him, even if he overcomes all obstacles to escape.

Third, wise but strict Economy in administration. A feeble-bodied man, confined for more than six months, should be made to support himself at least; all should be required to work industriously; and the expenses of every department should be as low as is consistent with the fulfilment of the purposes of imprisonment.

Fourth, ample means of Classification should be provided. There should be promotion from one class to another.

PRISON DISCIPLINE.

degradation for demerit. The basis of this should be a full and systematic method of marking, free from the influence of partiality by officers. A certain number of marks should entitle the prisoner to a conditional discharge before expiration of his sentence; but not free him from supervision, accountability, and liability to be remanded for misconduct to prison; there to serve out his original sentence, and in its severest conditions. The Conditional Pardon Act of 1875, gives the opportunity of testing this principle in practice. Fifth, such salaries, and such conditions of service, as will attract for officers men of high character and sufficient mental and moral qualifications. Among them should be those charged with the special duty of imparting secular and religious instruction; and this duty should be carefully attended to.

Imprisonment implies two parties, the rights of which it must not infringe,—offended society, and its offending member.

All the material arrangements, and the whole spirit of the discipline, should be in view of the rights of these two parties. They must carry out the sentence of the law without abating a jot or tittle thereof; but they must not infringe any forfeited right of the convict.

His whole nature, his capacity for good as well as his power of evil, must not be unstrung and let down, by too great or too long isolation from varied human relations.

His spiritual faculties must not be dwarfed by disuse; his mental faculties must not be rusted by inaction; his bodily powers must not be impaired by idleness or by overwork.

Diminished respect, lessened confidence, and even attainder of blood, are the consequences attached to conviction of crime, by the Divine laws which we cannot stay; but none of them should be increased by any action, or lack of action, on our part.

If imprisonment draws upon the convict any consequences not contemplated by any law, human or divine, as when it curtails his means of living by honest industry, we must aid him at his fresh start in the race of life by our sympathy and moral support, and material aid. This is the special duty of the Society for Aid of Discharged Convicts, with its aid, employed by the State; but it is the duty, moreover, of every member of that general society which has unsuperadded grievous penalties to those imposed by the Without considering the question whether society has not the right to increase the punishment of one man in view to deter others from crime, we may assume that the element of doubt which we eliminate from the consequence of crime, makes imprisonment, as one of those consequences, formidable and deterrent. There is a sort of fascination in some minds in defying the law, and braving its terror.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT, 1867.

“If the path be dangerous known,
The danger’s self is lure alone;”

But danger has the element of doubt—the chance of escape which likens it to gambling, and gives to it spice and interest.

Man’s ignorance of the nature of God’s laws makes suppose there is some doubt about the penalties of crime, the chance of escaping them; and therefore fools gamble for fate, without any possibility of gain. Now if we carry out the plan of Divine retribution for sin, we shall make the prescribed penalties of crime inevitable and unpropitiable.
In administering imprisonment the prescribed minimum penalty must be exacted, let the convict’s conduct be good. Nothing but some proof of his innocence, some proof of his conviction, should ever be allowed to remit that, or hold out a hope of any remission. Caution, delay, in mercy, before sentence, but only stern justice after it.

By steadfastly and persistently administering imprisonment upon these conditions we shall add to its severity, and make it more deterrent, without even seeming to harm one man we may do good to another.

Profits on the Labor of Convicts.

It is manifest that the labor of adult prisoners on the penitentiaries is, in this country, so valuable, that it can not only cover the whole prison expenses, but give a large profit. To make it do so implies lack of foresight, or of absolute honesty. During the past seven years the State has been paying largely to maintain the Charlestown Prison,

PRISON LABOR.

actors were enriching themselves by the labor of the ners.

the State held the restive animal by the horns, and fed it, kept it in high condition, while the contractors quietly ed it.

Independently of the loss, or misdirection of the money, the effect of this upon the prisoners was bad. The shrewd understood perfectly well that their work was worth from to six dollars a day, of which their own families got not a though they might be starving; that the State got only cents; and that the contractors got fivefold more. They well have felt like Samson, bound, and grinding for hated stines.

Now that the older contracts have expired, the prisoners' ings pay the whole cost of the prison, and give a surplus twenty thousand dollars. This surplus will doubtless ase largely in ensuing years, and may approach fifty and dollars. The question how it shall be appropriated ves delicate and difficult considerations; but it ought to ttled in view of the general principles which underlie our m of imprisonment—security to society, and improvement e prisoner.

There are strong reasons why it should not go directly for enefit of the public treasury. It will be regarded by some e nature of blood-money. It is one of those temptations sen the burden of taxation into which the people should e led.

entire confidence on the part of the convict in the justice disinterestedness of the State, is essential to the success of moral and religious agencies which she employs for his ovement and reformation; and this will weaken it. Besides eneral feeling that more work is extorted from all than will he whole prison expenses, many cases will unavoidably where manifest and grievous wrong is done; as when a is imprisoned several years for an offence involving a niary loss of a few hundred dollars, and earns for the State al thousand, conscious all the while that the fire is going n his household hearth, and his children are being scattered d, for lack of a little money.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT, 1867.

Society has a perfect right to exact of the convict enough to pay the full cost of his imprisonment, per to his share of the interest upon the principal invested in prison; but can hardly convince him at least that it is his right to do more, and to average, upon the convicts the loss occasioned by the unconvicted criminal class.

At any rate, where there is a steady and reliable gain from the labor of the convicts, there should be liberality in all the means for improving the discipline of the prison, and the moral and religious character of each convict, and for increasing the provision for his employment and welfare after his discharge.

When needful, salaries of officers might be raised to secure the best kind of service. No man should be employed who lacks a sympathetic heart, or a capacity to comprehend the high nature of the calling; or the desire to make the position of turnkey truly useful and respectable.

To subject a convict to the presence and domination of an officer of coarse nature, is an aggravation of his punishment, and so it would be to restrict him to cheap instruction, and force him to hear cheap preaching.

There are few congregations in the Commonwealth capable of measuring the mental power, penetrating the qualities, and feeling the spiritual worth of a preacher. The one which assembles every Sabbath in the Chapel of the State Prison; and if there be a man more capable than others of awakening the moral sense, quickening the religious spirit, and so promoting the temporal and eternal welfare of those unfortunate convicts, he should be had at any cost from the surplus fund of the Prison.

If after the utmost liberality warranted by prudent considerations of this kind, and in means of aiding convicts to their discharge, there still remains a surplus, then we should fully consider other questions; as whether, when the family of a convict is in danger of being broken up by his absence, they may not properly be relieved.

In view of these and other considerations which have been urged, the Board commend to the careful attention of

ure the question of the best disposition to be made of the plus earned by the convicts over and above all the expenses the Prison.

6. A Revision of the Laws of Settlement.

he opinion of this Board in relation to the Settlement s, has often been expressed, but may well be repeated. A ification of those laws is urgently demanded.

among the earliest discoveries made by the Board in its estigations of our system of charities, was the inadequacy he laws of settlement to meet the present condition of ety. Though judiciously adapted to the needs of a former eration, they utterly fail to satisfy the changed conditions osed by a large immigration and the improved facilities of rnal communication. The constant removal of the youth he old families leaves vacancies which are filled by aliens, by strangers from other States. Called from place to e by the ever varying demand for labor, few of these new-ers are able to comply with the stringent requisitions for ing a settlement, at least before their children have attained r majority.

he inevitable consequence is, a decrease of the settled, and increase of the unsettled portion of our community. If growing disproportion be not obviated by wise legislation, State must soon assume the support of the great mass of dependent classes. Since this result would be subversive the declared policy of this Board enunciated in previous orts, and so fully set forth in the preceding pages, prompt asures were taken to initiate a change.

Representations made to the late Governor Andrew by mem-s of this Board, induced him to recommend, in his message 1865, certain specific changes. These propositions have been eated by His Excellency Governor Bullock, in a more pree and extended form, in the inaugural address of the sent year. With these suggestions, in the main, this Board rtily concurs.

f the principle be conceded that public service shall entitle public relief, the right should surely be shared by all inhabitants who have rendered that service, without limit of race or color, sex or citizenship. And it seems unkind to debar entirely from its acquisition, the industrious class of single women and widows, who are entitled to our sympathy and consideration, as being of natural protectors.

And further, this Board deems it a harsh and exceeding, that a person having a well-defined maternal right in the Commonwealth, should be consigned to an Almshouse, merely because it cannot be clearly shown that he has acquired no similar right through his father. Or, at least, the legal stipulations have been fulfilled. To excuse, then, for a repudiation of the contract.

The proposition to grant local relief to worthy paupers deserves most careful attention; and the policy might, in the judgment of this Board, be at once adopted, on higher considerations than the all-sufficient ground of a true policy of economy, if a method of supervision could be devised which would secure the State from imposition.

Aware that the intricacy of the subject demands a thorough examination and the fullest discussion, we cannot but hope that even if the suggestions made are deemed objectionable, the necessity for some modification of our laws of settlement may become apparent to the Legislature.

7. Powers of the Board of Charities.

If the general principles set forth in this and the previous Reports of the Board be sound, then the administration of the Charities of the State ought to conform with them. It has been shown, however, that in some respects the present mode of administering our Institutions, runs counter to them. In the course of its remarks the Board has directly recommended certain changes of administration; and indirectly recommended certain changes of policy; such as to reduce the time during which inmates of the Reformatory shall be retained in the central establishments; To encourage apprenticeship, with greater inducements to good conduct; to receive apprentices; and more strict supervision of the by the officers of the central establishment ; To make more in the Lunatic Hospitals for the care and cure of recent and, at the same time, give more freedom and happiness to curable and harmless lunatics, by boarding the latter in their families. But with such recommendations, the power of the Board ends ; it can do little or nothing.

A deep sense of the importance of these and other matters which involve a change in the policy of some of the Institutions, a consciousness of our inability to exert any direct influence in such change ; and the plain requirement of the Legislature which calls upon this Board to make recommendations to the Legislature, have determined us to ask, That additional powers be granted to the Board of State Charities.

A feeling of delicacy might prevent our doing this, were it not for two considerations. First, in important matters affecting the interest and happiness of whole classes of men, a sense of duty must outweigh scruples of delicacy ; and Second, the members of the present Board will vacate their places during the current year, either by expiration of term, or by resignation already tendered.

A little thought will probably show candid and disinterested persons, that there ought to exist somewhere a greater central authority to adopt and carry out a uniform policy in the administration of the State Charities.

Centralization is conformable to the spirit of our political institutions, and to the genius of our people. It is important to the life and efficiency of local charitable institutions ; and desirable for the sake of distributing the duties of charity throughout the community, and so bringing them home to the hearts and hands of the people.

But, on the other hand, centralization of some kind is absolutely necessary for accomplishing the objects aimed at by the establishment of the separate Institutions.

The subjects of the charity of the State admit of being classified according to ages, general conditions and wants ; therefore we have an Asylum for children of the tender age, Reformatories for youth, Hospitals for the insane or diseased, Special institutions for special classes, as the blind, the mute, and the like. To a certain extent the special wants of different classes can be best met by separate establishments in different parts of the Commonwealth, and under separate Boards of Directors, who should have the powers to carry out the special ends of their Institution.

But all these establishments have certain general ends, and certain common ends; and they should be directed by a general policy. A vague and ill-defined sense of the importance of this was among the influences which operated on the Board of State Charities. Certain important duties were assigned to the Board, and those it has been able to perform. But some direct and a great deal of indirect responsibility was imposed upon it, for the general policy to be adopted, and the general results to be obtained; which was like a large pile of bricks with a very little straw, because it did not have the Board full power, and in most cases no power to direct the administration of the special institutions. It has been in the situation of a general required to carry out a campaign with twelve different corps, but without power to direct the march of any one of them to a common point.

The three State Lunatic Hospitals have their independent and separate functions, which can be performed independently of each other, and even without knowledge of each other's duty. But they have certain common ends, which can be better promoted by a common method of conduct, by a common knowledge of each others' affairs, and a certain co-operation.

So of the three State Almshouses; they have common ends, and should have a mutual understanding, and a common policy for promoting the common ends. They have, moreover, relations with the three State Hospitals, and also with the State Reform Schools.

These schools have a common end, and there should be some general policy by which that can be promoted, and by which one policy should be adopted by another, and that policy should be adopted by another. In this instance, it should be settled whether it is desirable to employ the inmates for the purposes of instruction, and for the improvement of their characters by education in the establishment, ally, all the State Institutions are filled with human who, whether old or young, sane or insane, innocent or sound or infirm, have certain common wants, and e a certain common method in their treatment; and wants can be better supplied by a certain unity in principle of administration, and by a co-ordination of the forces several Institutions, than without them. But no such power of co-ordination exists, except in the Governor council, who, amid the pressure of other duties, seldom e it.

twelve different Institutions are under ten different s of Trustees or local Inspectors, who constitute so many ndent and separate organizations, in which are lodged most part, the appointment of officers and the general on of their several establishments.

ould be easy to show, by general considerations, how oral and social purposes of the State could be better d than they now are, by a central power which should e the management of these Institutions, without abolishe local authorities. It can, however, be more readily y showing the importance of such regulation in the al interests of the establishments.

y all need fuel, flour, furniture, groceries, and other s of common consumption, which, for the most part, be purchased in a central market and at wholesale, by gent, more advantageously than at the several establish-ere were power in a competent central Board, it could arrangements for procuring the great staples from first and supplying the several Institutions in suitable quantities and qualities, at less cost and less waste, through one agency, than can possibly be done by the present d of purchasing and supplying through twelve separate dependent agencies,

In fact, the officers or agents of these twelve Institutions are continually going to Boston to purchase supplies, and s indirectly competing with each other.

Another step would be to establish a General Diet for those whom the State has to feed. This should be grounded upon established scientific principles ; and on material points, the nature of food and the proportions of its elements, should be adapted to the age and wants of those who are to consume it. The application of general hygienic principles, would be varied in the various establishments. The adults in the State Prison, of course, require different proportions of nitrogenous food from the children at Moorfields. One class of adults requires more vegetable, another more animal food. One class needs food in which the heat-producing elements abound ; another, that in which the muscle-making elements predominate ; a third, that fullest of cerebral-nourishing elements, and the like ; and the proportions of these may be advantageously varied at different seasons of the year. At present, however, there is not much thought given to the matter, and there is no general system adopted.

A striking instance of the same state of things is seen in the use of medicines and of alcohol at the Lunatic Asylum in this Commonwealth.

We have taken pains to institute a comparison between different establishments, and to show, so far as can be ascertained from documents at hand, how much they differ in these important particulars,—the amount of drugs and medicines administered, and the amount of alcohol consumed in the form of spirits, wines, &c.

These Hospitals, being under the direction of so careful men, may not need that improvement in Diet which most of the Institutions certainly do. But a close examination shows that, even in them, there is a lack of uniformity.

* The scientific experiments tried in European institutions, and in the Scotch prisons, show the great importance of dietaries established on hygienic principles. Changes, apparently slight, in the proportion of the elementary principles of food, were followed by important results ; and when men were subjected to the same general external influences, and free from disturbing agencies, the inference was all but inevitable that the same causes caused the result. As, for instance, when prisoners lost two pounds in weight, and correspondingly in muscular strength, after so simple a diet as taking with their porridge molasses, which does not make much use of fresh milk, which does.

 THE USE OF ALCOHOL AND DRUGS AT HOSPITALS.

method of treatment, in certain matters about which, in the progress of the world, men ought to have arrived at some general conclusions. Thus, insanity in its general forms, (not merely symptomatic of special diseases,) is a disease amenable to medication, or it is not. But the varying practice in our Hospitals, and the enormous difference in the cost of drugs consumed, show that, even making allowance for the present proportion of recent cases, there is no uniform conclusion respecting this matter. In one Hospital the cost per patient for drugs and medicines is twelve times greater than in another; and even comparing those which have about the same proportion of recent cases, the difference is as four to one. If we compare the cost of medical supplies, the difference is even more remarkable.

Again, the Insane—acute and chronic—are, as a class, affected either favorably or unfavorably by the use of alcohol, whether on the basis of drinks, or of medicines.

One excellent Superintendent of a Massachusetts Lunatic Hospital says, what all the rest will probably admit:—

"Pathological investigations show that the brain, stomach, and other organs, are changed from a healthy to a diseased state by the action of alcohol."

And yet in all the Hospitals and Asylums, except that at Andover, alcohol is used; and in some to such a considerable extent as to indicate that it is considered an important remedial agent.

According to the best estimate we can make, a patient at Andover takes none at all; one at Worcester or Northampton about two gills; one at Taunton about three gills; at South Boston, nearly seven gills; at Somerville, between two and three quarts.* But since many of the patients take little or none, others must take much more than this.

It should be considered that some patients at the McLean Asylum are permanent boarders, who pay a high price. They have always been accustomed to use wine, and are allowed the privilege in the Hospital, paying for it.

It is hard to understand how swallowing a quantity of liquid, even in divided doses, can fail to have a power. If it be for good, then all should use it in about the same proportions, other things being equal; if for evil, then all should avoid it.

The facts shown in regard to this matter by Statistics appended to this Report, will serve to illustrate the uniformity alluded to.

Many more examples might be given of the benefits of greater centralization in the management of our charities. This centralization could now be effected by enlarging the powers of the Board of Charities in some other way.

CONCLUSION.

In concluding this Report, we would acknowledge our imperfections and apologize therefor. To the learned, it is apt to abound in truisms; to the critical, in vague generalities and crude theories and useless suggestions. Nor should we be wondered at, in a Report upon such a vast and varied subject drawn up by those who do not pretend to be masters of the subject, who are burdened by other cares and duties. The Reports of the Secretary and the General Agent, closely packed and arranged in concise Tables, show what those officers have accomplished by care and laborious effort; that of the Board rather what we believe, aim at, and desire.

We believe that the great object of Public Charity is to equalize the condition of men by lifting the lowly and strengthening the weak. We should lessen the causes which produce the root and corrupt the stock of the tree of life, and not bring forth so much of what dies in the bud, falls in the bud, or corrupts in the growth.

We aim to co-ordinate and direct all public charities, institutions and agencies, in such wise as to help in the development of physical powers and the outward condition of the poor and feeble; and thus check the formation of classes of the ignorant and the vicious, who will inherit tendencies to crime and crime, just as certainly as more fortunate classes inherit tendencies to prosperity and virtue.

CONCLUSION.

we desire, moreover, that this great work may be done, not only, nor even mainly, by delegating it to special establishments and to agents set apart for it; but, so far as possible, by the people themselves in their families. In other words, that by multiplying or enlarging Public Charitable Institutions, many may be built up all over the State, in common homesteads, and many private charitable institutions, and that there may be as many Sisters of Charity, and Brothers of Mercy, as are needed in a Commonwealth where it is held that duty to God is best performed by love to man. The end is high; the way to it long; but it is brought nearer by short and feeble steps; and these are all that the Board has been able to take.

By the vote of a majority of the Board, the following recommendation of the Executive Committee is appended to this Report:—

Board of State Charities:

In the opinion of the Executive Committee of this Board, it has been a question of practical moment, whether a greater share in the administration of some of our public charities should not be given to women. Already they are engaged in many positions of trust and responsibility, but none of them act as Trustees of public establishments. In the case of charitable institutions, on the contrary, they are frequently at the head, and three or four of those which are aided by the State are conducted by women of talent and humanity. We would recommend that the Industrial School at Lancaster, the inmates of which are all girls, be placed, in part, at least, under the oversight of women, who might hold the office of Trustee.

This recommendation has been suggested by our practical experience in the working of such institutions, and is respectfully submitted by

The precise period covered by these statistics varies a little at the different institutions. At South Boston the period is the calendar years 1866 and 1867; at Worcester, Taunton and Tewksbury, the continuous period ending October 1, 1867; at Northampton the average number and the cost and quantity of liquors, with the computations therefrom, are for the calendar years; while the other items are for the years ending October 1. The data furnished by the McLean Asylum were incomplete; the quantity of alcohol there used has been estimated from the proportion between cost and quantity elsewhere, which proportion should be modified to suit the higher prices of liquors used in that institution. The great apparent difference in cost and quantity in different years, at several of the institutions, arises from purchases upon credit, by which the articles consumed in a given year are in part paid and accounted for in the following year.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SECRETARY
OF THE

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

PRELIMINARY.

to the Board of State Charities.

GENTLEMEN:—In submitting to you my Fourth Annual Report, permit me to follow the usual custom and give a summary of the work done and the expenses incurred in my department during the year just ended.

BUSINESS OF THE OFFICE.

The clerical labor required of the Secretary and his clerks increases materially every year, and has become much greater than usual in the past year, chiefly on account of the opening of two new establishments,—the State Primary School and the State Workhouse,—the successful efforts of our citizens to institute a school for deaf mutes and an asylum for deserted women, and the developing of the Visiting Agency, which was first established by your Board. Each of these enterprises has called for extended records or active labors in investigating facts and cases; but it is believed that the results even now justify the time and labor devoted to these objects.

There have also been much employed in analyzing the Prison and Pauper Registers kept in this office, and the returns made in regard to crime and pauperism. Some of the results of this analysis will appear in the subsequent pages of this Report, but the work is not yet completed. By the direction of your Board, I have made some inquiries into the numbers and condition of the Indians residing in the Commonwealth, and of the deaf mutes, who form such an interesting class among us. These investigations, with what has already been mentioned, include the usual office work in the preparation of the Annual Report, the carrying on of a large correspondence, the keeping of numerous registers, and, finally, personal conference with a great number of those having business with your Board, these tasks combined have fully occupied the time of me and my clerks.

VISITS OF THE SECRETARY.

During the year, I have made 100 visits to various institutions and places, as indicated below :—

To State Institutions,	38 v
Prisons within the State,	18
Towns and Town Almshouses,	16
Private and municipal Institutions,	5
Prisons, Hospitals, etc., in other States,	23
In all,	100 v

In performing this part of my duties, I have travelled 6 miles, at an expense of $259.65. I have inspected, more or less thoroughly, prisons in New Hampshire, Vermont, New York, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Canada; and Reformatories in New Hampshire, Vermont, New York and Illinois. These establishments contained no less than 4,000 convicts and 800 pupils.

EXPENSES OF THE SECRETARY'S DEPARTMENT.

My expenditures for the year ending September 30, 1901, have been $7,966.92, classified as follows :—

Salary of the Secretary,	$2,100.00
Clerk hire,	4,600.00
Printing,	73.00
Office expenses,	52.92
Total,	$7,966.92

The total expenses of this Department during the four years since the Board was organized, have been $29,104.73, or an average of $7,276.18 in each year.

The travelling expenses of the Secretary are paid out of the appropriation for the Board. These have amounted in the to $828.95, or an average of $207.24 in each year. If this is added to the expenses paid out of the appropriation for the Secretary's Department, the aggregate is $29,933.68 for two years, or an average of $7,498.42 for each year. The appropriation for the Secretary's Department in the year ending October 1, may be calculated as $7,897, which is less than the sum expended by $69.92; but the unexpended balance of the appropriation for the calendar year 1867, is more than sufficient to meet this excess of expenditure, as well as all the other expenses of the current quarter. The apparent deficit arises from the fact that the printing for two years has nearly been paid for since October 1, 1866. In making up the statement of the expenditures during the calendar year 1867, the bills of only one year will be included, and a small portion of the appropriation will doubtless remain unexpended.

GENERAL INTEREST IN THE SUBJECTS INVESTIGATED.

Since the establishment of this office has witnessed a more general and an interest in the great questions proper for investigation in this department, as the present year. In Massachusetts the causes and remedies of Pauperism, Crime, and Insanity, have been widely discussed, and new efforts have been at work to make known these causes and these remedies. In our sister States a movement is taking place in the same direction, new methods are devised for carrying on the work of public charity, and a stricter regulation and supervision are demanded. Rhode Island has taken the first steps toward a State system similar to ours, and New York and Ohio have established Boards of State Charities. In Michigan and other States the same measure is proposed, and seems likely to be ultimately adopted. In New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Illinois the Prison System has been thoroughly investigated, and, in the last named State, essentially reformed. In Indiana a State Reformatory has been opened, and in Vermont that recently opened has become successfully managed. In Illinois the necessary laws for such an institution have been passed, with the exception of the appropriation of money which failed through some disagreement between the two branches of the Legislature. In Maine and in Connecticut measures have been taken to provide Reformatories for girls.

Additional provision for the Insane has also been made in several of the States, by the erection of new Hospitals and Asylums. The number of this class, however, has increased much beyond the existing means for properly disposing of them.

The continued and increasing activity of the American Science Association, the New York Prison Association and other societies organized for the study of important questions is another indication of the spirit of the times. The press has never been more ready to consider these topics than now, and much has been added to our knowledge during the past year by the discussions of social questions in the newspapers. This public sympathy with the studies and labors of those devoted to these inquiries, is one of the best omens for the improvement of our social condition.

With these preliminary observations, I may now pass to DIVISIONS OF THIS REPORT.

By a vote of your Board, I was instructed some months ago to submit information and suggestions under each of the following heads:—

I.—RECENT LEGISLATION AND ITS EFFECTS.

II.—THE CONDITION OF THE INDIANS OF MASSACHUSETTS.

III.—PRISONS AND REFORMATORIES.

IV.—THE STATE INSTITUTIONS.

V.—THE PAUPER RETURNS.

VI.—PAUPERISM, CRIME, DISEASE AND INSANITY.

The subsequent portion of this Report will accordingly be found arranged in six parts as above given, with an Appendix into which the tabular work will be mainly thrown.

RECENT LEGISLATION.

CHAPTER I.—THE LEGISLATION OF 1867.

me first submit some statements respecting the laws at the last session of the Legislature. Several quesof much consequence then came up for examination, and of them were disposed of by the passage of laws.

1. THE NEW STATE AID LAW.

of the first measures introduced in the Legislature of was a bill for the modification of the very faulty State law of 1866. The principal features of this law having set forth in my last year's Report, need not here be tulated. Some of its defects have been corrected by er 136 of the Acts of 1867, the two most important ns of which are here given:—

CT concerning State Aid for Disabled Soldiers and Sailors and their Families, and for the Families of the Slain.

acted, &c., as follows:

1. No person shall be entitled to receive state aid under the ons of section one of chapter one hundred and seventy-two of the the year eighteen hundred and sixty-six, except upon satisfactory that the person so applying for aid is in the receipt of a pension the United States; and the full amount of said aid shall only be persons in the receipt of a pension equal to the full pension which ved to a person of the same rank or grade, and to every other per-applying for aid, a proportionate part of said aid shall be paid, determined by the proportion which the pension received by him bears full pension which is allowed to a person of the same rank or provided, however, that any person obtaining a pension from the States after this act shall take effect, shall, upon application, be entitled to receive the same amount of aid that he would have entitled to receive had said pension been obtained prior to the time this act shall take effect; and provided, further, that town and authorities shall withhold the aid when, in their judgment, any person is in receipt of a pension from the United States is not sufficiently disabled to prevent him from pursuing his ordinary and usual vocation.

SECT. 2. No person shall be entitled to receive aid under the provisions of section two of said chapter one hundred and seventy-two on reason of being dependent upon any person named or described in said section, unless the person upon whom he was dependent was killed or has died by reason of wounds or disease incurred in the service described in said section, or is or at the time of his death was in the receipt of a pension from the United States, equal in amount to one-half of the pension which is allowed to a person of the same rank or grade; provided, however, that if the person upon whom the applicant was dependent shall obtain a pension from the United States after this act shall take effect, said applicant shall be entitled to receive the same amount that he would have been entitled to receive had said pension been obtained prior to the time when this act shall take effect; and provided, further, that when any person who has heretofore received state aid is precluded therefrom by the provisions of this act, and the authorities of the cities or towns are satisfied that justice and necessity require a continuance of the aid to prevent actual suffering, they are hereby authorized in such cases to continue the payment thereof; and upon reporting the facts in each specific case, and showing by evidence satisfactory to the commissioners the necessity of such payments, the sums so paid shall be re-imbursed to such cities and towns out of the treasury of the Commonwealth.

In these sections the most noteworthy provisions have been indicated by Italics. It is further enacted in section 6, that aid may be given to the wife or family of an officer, soldier or sailor, instead of to the man himself, who might squander it. By other sections the scope of Chapter 172 of the Acts of 1880 is much restricted, and Chapter 282 of that year is repealed entirely.

The effect of these restrictions has been to diminish the general amount of money given as State Aid, and to secure the better use of what is still given. Probably no less than half a million dollars a year is thus saved to the State, with no material increase of suffering on the part of the poor. But between a half a million and a million of dollars must still be paid annually under the law as it stands, and while much of this is needful and goes to relieve suffering, there is reason to believe that much also yet goes to the undeserving and to those who misuse it. It should be noticed that the law chiefly provides for those families already in the receipt of a pension, thus fulfilling the Scripture saying, "To him that hath shall be given," but probably allowing the claims of many unpensioned persons to be made in vain. A farther scrutiny and another amendment of the law is manifestly to be desired, and may, perhaps, be secured from the next Legislature.

2. THE EDUCATION OF POOR AND NEGLECTED CHILDREN.

The legislation of the year 1866 in regard to the employment of children in factories and their schooling when thus employed, has not been allowed to stand without change. Probably it was thought to require more time in school than could well be given by children working for their support; at any rate, the period of six months' previous schooling and as many months each year of their employment, has been reduced to three months. At the same time, the number of hours per week which children under fourteen are allowed to work, is increased from forty-eight to sixty hours; but the limit of age is extended to fifteen years. The means of enforcing the new law are better than were provided in 1866; and, altogether, though the Act of 1867 (Chap. 285,) may seem a step backward, it will probably be found, in practice, as effective for the education of poor children as Chapter 273 of the Acts of 1866, the place of which it takes. Its terms are as follows:—

AN ACT in relation to the Schooling and Hours of Labor of Children employed in Manufacturing and Mechanical Establishments.

As it enacted, &c., as follows:

SECT. 1. No child under the age of ten years shall be employed in any manufacturing or mechanical establishment within this Commonwealth, and no child between the age of ten and fifteen years shall be employed, unless he has attended some public or private day school under teachers approved by the school committee of the place in which such school is kept, at least three months during the year next preceding such employment: provided, said child shall have lived within the Commonwealth during the preceding six months; nor shall such employment continue unless such child shall attend school at least three months in each and every year; and provided, that tuition of three hours a day in a public or private day school approved by the school committee of the place in which such day school is kept, during a term of three months, shall be deemed the equivalent of three months' attendance at a school kept in accordance with the customary hours of tuition; and time less than sixty days of actual schooling shall be accounted as three months, and no time less than one hundred and twenty half days of actual schooling shall be deemed an equivalent of three months.

SECT. 2. No child under the age of fifteen years shall be employed in any manufacturing or mechanical establishment more than sixty hours in one week.

SECT. 3. Any owner, agent, superintendent or overseer of any manufacturing or mechanical establishment who shall knowingly employ or permit to be employed any child in violation of the preceding section, and any parent or guardian who allows or consents to such employment, shall, for such offence, forfeit the sum of fifty dollars.

SECT. 4. It shall be the duty of the constable of the Commonwealth to specially detail one of his deputies, to see that the provisions of this act, and all other laws regulating the employment of children or minors in manufacturing or mechanical establishments, are complied with, and to prosecute offences against the same; and he shall report annually to the governor all proceedings under this act; and nothing in this section shall be so construed as to prohibit any person from prosecuting such offences.

SECT. 5. Chapter two hundred and seventy-three of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and sixty-six is hereby repealed: provided, that the repeal shall not affect any proceedings now pending.

SECT. 6. This act shall take effect sixty days from its passage. [Approved May 29, 1867.

Besides the remodelling of the Factory Act of 1866, so many amendments have been made in the Act of the same year relating to neglected children. The most important of them is the repeal of the clause which makes the Truant Law (Chap. 207, 1862,) of no effect in Boston. But I cannot learn that the Act in question (Chap. 283, 1866,) has yet been enforced in any part of the State; nor is any such law like be strictly enforced until we have a much greater number of receptacles for juvenile delinquents. These might be provided by the County Commissioners, according to the law of 1865, (Chap. 208,) but no county, so far as I know, has yet established such a House of Reformation as the last named Act contemplates. It might be well to pass a law making it obligatory on counties which have a population of more than 75,000 to open at least one such reformatory.

3. THE EDUCATION OF DEAF MUTES.

The two Acts of the last Legislature concerning the instruction of deaf mutes, are likely to do more to advance the interests of the class for whose benefit they were enacted, than has yet been done or attempted in any part of the world. Nowhere else, so far as we are informed, has it been made a part of the regular system of education to give early and continuous instruction to the deaf and dumb.* But by Chapter 311 of the Acts of 1867, the children of this class are placed almost exactly on the same footing, with respect to education, as hearing children. They are allowed to enter school at the public expense, as early as five years, and to continue ten years at school without cost to the parents, except as they may choose to pay for their instruction, which, like that of ordinary children, is placed under the oversight of the Board of Education.

The means of commencing their instruction so early as five years old, have been provided under another Act, (Chapter 334,) which, though later in number on the list of laws, was, in fact, of the same date, and, logically, antecedent to Chapter 311. We shall, therefore, give the two Acts in the natural position which they occupy with respect to each other, the Act of Incorporation coming first:—

[CHAP. 334.]

AN ACT to incorporate the Clarke Institution for Deaf Mutes.

As it enacted, &c., as follows:

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP.

B. Congdon, Thomas Talbot, their associates and successors, are hereby made a corporation by the name of the Clarke Institution for Deaf-Mutes, in the town of Northampton, with authority to establish classes of instruction for deaf persons and deaf mutes in two other suitable localities in this Commonwealth; with all the powers and privileges, and subject to all the duties, restrictions and liabilities set forth in all general laws which now are or hereafter may be in force in relation to such corporations.

SECT. 2. Said corporation may hold for the purposes aforesaid, real and personal estate not exceeding in value two hundred thousand dollars.

SECT. 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage. [Approved June 1, 1867.]

[CHAP. 311.]

AN ACT concerning the Education of Deaf-Mutes.

Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

SECT. 1. The governor, with the approval of the board of education is hereby authorized to send such deaf-mutes or deaf children between five and ten years of age, as he may deem fit subjects for instruction at the expense of the Commonwealth, to the Clarke Institution for Deaf-Mutes at Northampton, or to such schools or classes as now are or may hereafter be established for the education of deaf-mutes in this Commonwealth.

SECT. 2. The governor is hereby authorized to draw his warrant for such sums as may be necessary to provide for the instruction and support of the pupils named in the preceding section, not exceeding each pupil the amount which is now or may hereafter be paid by the Commonwealth for the education and support of deaf-mutes at the American Asylum at Hartford.

SECT. 3. The education of all deaf-mutes who are now receiving instruction may hereafter receive instruction at the expense of the Commonwealth shall be subject to the direction and supervision of the board of education; and said board shall set forth in their annual report the number of pupils so instructed, the cost of their instruction and support, the value in which the money appropriated by the Commonwealth has been expended, and such other information as said board may deem important to be laid before the legislature.

SECT. 4. The governor is hereby authorized to extend to ten years the term of instruction now granted to deaf-mutes educated at the expense of the Commonwealth.

THE MASSACHUSETTS INFANT ASYLUM.

SECT. 5. The sum of three thousand dollars is hereby appropriated for the education of deaf-mutes, in addition to the amount heretofore appropriated, to be paid from the treasury of the Commonwealth.

SECT. 6. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

SECT. 7. This act shall take effect upon its passage. [Approved March 1, 1867.]

Under these Acts a school has been organized, endowed by Mr. John Clarke, of Northampton, with the sum of $50,000, and opened at Northampton by Miss H. B. Rogers, whose small school at Chelmsford was noticed in my last Report. At present the number of her pupils is twenty, of whom about two-thirds are Massachusetts children. The method of instruction is by articulation and reading the lips. I shall have occasion elsewhere to notice the unexpectedly large number of deaf-mutes found to be residing in the State, and attesting the necessity of an additional school for the children, such as has not been established.

4. THE PRESERVATION OF INFANT LIFE.

The Legislature of 1867 also granted an Act of incorporation for another institution of much importance, although as yet no considerable results have been obtained from it. By Chapter 230 of the Acts, a charter is given to the Massachusetts Infant Asylum, and, by the closing section, this Asylum is empowered to receive, at the public expense, infant children deserted by their parents, under certain restrictions. The following is the chapter referred to:—

[CHAP. 230.]

AN ACT to incorporate the Massachusetts Infant Asylum.

As enacted, &c., as follows:

SECT. 1. Martin Brimmer, Thomas C. Amory, Mary J. Quincy, and their associates and successors, are hereby made a corporation by the name of the Massachusetts Infant Asylum, for the purpose of assisting and providing for deserted and destitute infant children; with all the powers and privileges, and subject to all the duties, restrictions and liabilities set forth in the sixty-eighth chapter of the General Statutes, and in all general laws which now are or hereafter may be in force relating to such corporations.

SECT. 2. Said corporation may hold for the purposes aforesaid and personal estate not exceeding in value one hundred and twenty thousand dollars.

SECT. 3. The overseers of the poor of any city or town in the Commonwealth, and the superintendents and inspectors of the almshouses, may place deserted and destitute infants in the care of the corporation under the laws for the relief of the poor, and such sum may be paid for the temporary support of such infants as may be agreed upon between the parties: provided, that said overseers and the Board of state charities shall use all reasonable care to collect the cost of the temporary support from parties justly chargeable with the same, whenever they can be ascertained, and to remove those not born or having a settlement in this state. [Approved May 15, 1867.]

The necessary organization has been made under this Act, and the Board of Directors of the Asylum are now seeking a place in which to open their institution. Probably before the Report is submitted to you in print the Asylum will have begun its work on a small scale.

5. THE TICKET-OF-LEAVE SYSTEM.

The old Statutes of this Commonwealth on the subject of Conditional Pardons were cited in my last Report. I am happy to say that they have since been modified by the General Court in such a way that we have at present the Ticket-of-Leave System by law established in Massachusetts. The following is the new law in regard to the matter, (Chap. 301):—

AN ACT relating to Conditional Pardons.

Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

SECT. 1. When a convict sentenced to confinement in the state prison, or any jail or house of correction, is pardoned, or his punishment is remitted by the governor with the advice of the council, on condition that he shall be by the convict observed and performed, and it comes to the knowledge of the warden of the state prison, or keeper of the jail or house of correction, where the convict was confined, that he is abroad in violation of the conditions of his pardon or remission of punishment, the warden or keeper shall forthwith cause him to be arrested and detained until the case can be examined by the governor and council; and the officer so arresting him shall forthwith give notice in writing to the governor and council that such convict is arrested and detained.

TICKET-OF-LEAVE SYSTEM.

SECT. 2. The governor and council shall, upon receiving such notice, examine the case of such convict, and if it shall appear by his own admission or by evidence that the convict has violated the conditions of pardon or remission of punishment, the governor, with the advice of the council, shall order the convict to be remanded and confined for the unexpired term of his sentence. In computing the period of his confinement, the time between the conditional pardon and subsequent arrest shall be taken to be part of the term of sentence. If it appears to the governor and council that the convict has not broken the conditions of conditional pardon or remission, he shall be discharged.

SECT. 3. Sections thirteen, fourteen, fifteen and sixteen of chapter one hundred and seventy-seven of the General Statutes are hereby repealed.

SECT. 4. This act shall take effect upon his passage. [Approved May 31, 1867.]

Little has yet been done to put this enactment in force, but it will, no doubt, be executed in due time, and the only wonder will be that we did not earlier adopt so wise a plan.

6. MISCELLANEOUS ENACTMENTS.

Several Acts of the present year relating to the other topics of this Report will be considered hereafter; but it is proper to refer to others which have no special bearing on these topics. Such are the Act Defining the Duties of the Auditor, (Chapter 178,) and the Act to change the name of the Nautical Branch of the Reform School, (Chapter 260.)

The former Act has removed certain obstacles in the way of speedy settlement of the accounts of the State Institutions; the latter enables us to avoid a tedious circumlocution in speaking of the School Ships.

CHAPTER II.—THE LEGISLATION OF PREVIOUS YEARS.

1. THE STATE WORKHOUSE LAW.

At the time of writing my last Report the effect of the laws creating a State Workhouse and a State Primary School had not been sufficiently observed to enable us to judge whether they would be as beneficial in practice as they are sound in theory. The year just ended has shown that they were needed, and that their results have been good.

The Workhouse at Bridgewater has served to restrain employ a large number of persons who, in the Almshouses could not well be managed.

The long sentences awarded to many of these persons, though at variance with the practice in the criminal courts of the State, have proved to be very useful, both as affording an opportunity to unlearn, by disuse, those vagrant and dissolute habits which occasioned the sentence, and as deterring others from similar courses, at least of that class within the scope of the Workhouse Law. There can be no doubt that many of the class alluded to have, during the past year, either betaken themselves to some honest calling or left the State; while others have contented themselves with avoiding the State Almshouses, in which they were liable to sentence, and seeking refuge in those of other towns, or in the police stations of cities, where large numbers of such persons find lodgings. The faithful execution of the law for a few years will, in a great degree, rid our community of these vagrants, especially if the overseers of the poor and the police are careful to enforce the laws against vagrancy within their jurisdiction.

Another excellent effect of these sentences has been seen in the case of women with young children who have been committed to the Almshouse, and those whose children were born in the institutions. These women, under the former laws, were very much in the habit of destroying or deserting their offspring, which, under a sentence of from six months to three years in the State Workhouse, they have been unable to do. In any way, there can be no doubt, the lives of at least thirty infants have been preserved during the past year.

It will be well to consider whether the power of original commitment to the State Workhouse may not be given to the ordinary Trial Justices and to the Superior Court, with the provision that all persons thus sentenced, and having a settlement in any town, shall be supported by that town. The cost of support will be less than in most of the Houses of Correction, and the wider execution of the law will still farther show good results.

THE MONSON ESTABLISHMENT.

2. THE STATE PRIMARY SCHOOL ACT.

The operation of the Act establishing a State Primary School Monson, presents features still more agreeable to contemplate. has been the means of placing in good families, at a more suitable age than formerly, a much larger number of poor children than has hitherto been the custom. Within the thirteen and a half years that the institution at Monson has been in operation, 977 children are reported as "indentured, adopted, and placed in families," the actual number being probably somewhat less by reason of counting the same person two or more times. This would give an average of only about one in a year, whereas the number this year reported is 156, or more than twice as great. There can be no doubt, too, that those children recently sent out have a much better prospect of finding good homes than those formerly indentured. The establishment of a Visiting Agency by your Board, in connection with the opening of the Primary School, has entirely changed the actual relation of these children to the State, as the General Court had already changed their legal relation. They are no longer turned out to shift for themselves, with no one to see whether they fare well or ill, but they are followed and protected by the same care that provided for their well-being in the institution. The Report of Mr. Fisk, the Visiting Agent, which is appended to this Report, will show how useful this new charity has been.

Not only have the children been placed more rapidly in good families in consequence of the Primary School Act, but they have been better treated within the institution. Formerly there were complaints, in some cases too well founded, of neglect, severity and privation experienced by these poor children at the hands of those in charge of them. But the urgent representations of your Board have not been without effect in correcting these evils, though the remedy has been sometimes slowly and reluctantly applied by those in authority at Monson. Something of the old Almshouse flavor is still perceptible in the management and discipline of the Primary School children, but much less than a year ago.

8. THE STATE POLICE ACT.

By Chapter 249, 1865, an entirely new class of police officers was created in Massachusetts—the State Police or State Constabulary. Sufficient time has now passed to enable us to judge whether there was any real need for such an additional force of police, and what results, either for good or bad, have followed the action of this force. It is probable that recent events, showing an uneasiness in the public mind under existing laws and regulations not wholly reasonable, will induce many persons to favor a return to the old system of local police; but a little reflection ought to convince them that it is possible to have the advantage of a State police, without all the attending circumstances which have naturally given offence. There was a time when the activity and independence of the State Constabulary were praised everywhere but among those who had reason to fear or to be jealous of them. It is difficult, if not quite impossible, especially in large cities, to have a local police which is not too much controlled by the sentiment of the locality to execute justice impartially; while a State police, owing to its distance from municipal favor or class interests, will be far less trammelled and corrupted by those influences which are always at work to impair the efficiency of such a body of men. And I have no doubt that, in spite of some unworthy appointments, and some partial and ill-judged regulations, the administration of justice was materially aided by the efforts of the State police. It may be found, I think, that more unmistakable criminals have been arrested and more convicted, because of those efforts; that crime has been checked in many places, and been rendered more unsafe everywhere, than before the Act of 1865 was passed.

In a matter of this kind it is not easy to furnish satisfactory statistics; but a few facts should be borne in mind. The Act of 1865 was passed in the middle of May, just about the time when, on account of the sudden close of the civil war, a general impulse was given to vice and crime in our community. The increase of crime was so marked and so great as to cause a serious alarm to society, and to fill our prisons with prisoners with great rapidity. But scarcely had the new police force become fa ganized than this growth of crime seemed to be checked. The winter of 1865-6 saw its highest point ; from which time it slowly but steadily decreased. Doubtless this is owing to several causes, but I cannot help thinking that something was due to the energy and determination of the State Constables. And, if we inquire to-day who those are who clamor for the repeal of the State Police Act, we shall find many respectable persons, to be sure, but also the whole array of criminal and disreputable persons.

Some modification, rather than a complete repeal of the law, would therefore seem to be the wiser course.

Any further comments upon recent legislation will be deferred to a succeeding page.

THE MASSACHUSETTS INDIANS.

CHAPTER I.—THEIR DESCENT, NUMBERS AND CONDITION.

1. SOURCES OF INFORMATION.

By an Order of the House of Representatives, passed in last, your Board were requested to inquire into the condition of the Indians in this Commonwealth, with a view to some legislation in regard to their civil disabilities. Under your instructions, I have devoted such time as could be spared from my other duties to this inquiry; but I regret to say it has been far less thorough than I could wish. I should lament this the more were it not that the Reports of Messrs. Bird, Griswold and Weekes in 1849, (House Doc. No. 46,) and of Mr. John M. Earle in 1861, (Senate Doc. No. 96, 1861, and House Doc. No. 215, 1862,) give such full and complete statements respecting the subject in hand. The seven years that have passed since Mr. Earle, (a special Commissioner under the Act of April 1859,) made his detailed Report, have seen little change in the general facts of the case; and whatever change has occurred seems to have fortified the conclusions then reached by the Commissioner. I shall, therefore, cite freely from his present Report, and also refer to the earlier Report of Mr. Bird, who has been himself the persistent advocate of justice to the humble Indians about to be described.

A still earlier Report, made by the Hon. Josiah J. Fisher, Governor Lincoln in 1833, (Senate Doc. 1834, No. 14,) relating only to the Indians of Marshpee, is worth consulting, though far less valuable than those which have been more recently written.

WHO AND WHERE THE INDIANS ARE.

I have been able to visit but a few of the Indians, and these only on Martha's Vineyard, but I have derived much information from residents there and in Barnstable County, and particularly from Richard L. Pease, Esq., the Clerk of the Courts of Dukes County, a gentleman very familiar both with the present and the past condition of his native island, which has been for two centuries the home of these Indian wards of the State.

2. THE TRIBES AND THEIR LOCATION.

Mr. Earle says, in pages 10, 11, of his Report:—

“The distinct bands, communities or tribes, having funds or reservations, or which have had them and are recognized as wards of the State, are the Chappaquiddick, the Christiantown, the Gay Head, the Marshpee, the Herring Pond, the Natick, the Punkapog, the Troy or Fall River, the Hassanamisco, and the Dudley. The Indians and descendants of Indians, of whom there are considerable numbers in any one locality, whose descent can be distinctly traced, but who do not stand in the same relation to the State, are those of Dartmouth and Yarmouth. There are, in addition, considerable numbers, belonging originally to some of the tribes before named, as the Gay Head, Marshpee, etc., but who, having left them to reside elsewhere, have lost their original rights as members of the tribes, and are not acknowledged as belonging to them; and some others, residing either in neighborhoods or scattered abroad in the community, who originated from other sources or whose descent is not precisely known, but of whose identity as Indians there is no doubt. “Of all these, it is safe to assume that there is not one person of unmixed Indian blood. There are a few who claim it, but their claims do not seem to have any satisfactory basis. When it is considered that the intermixture, both with the whites and the blacks, commenced more than two hundred years ago, and that, in the course of ten or twelve generations, there has been an opportunity, from intermarriages among themselves, for the foreign blood, early introduced, to permeate the whole mass; and when it is considered that the intermixture has been constantly kept up from the outside, also, down to the present time, it would be a marvel, indeed, if any Indian of the pure native race remained. Of the publications of colored persons entered on the early records of Dartmouth, by far the larger portion are those of negro men and Indian women. In Yarmouth, a large portion of those of Indian descent have intermarried with the whites, till their progeny has become white; their social relations are with those of that color, and they mingled with the general community, having lost their identity distinct class.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHA

"The same has happened with a portion of the Hassanamisco and it would have been a fortunate thing for all the tribes if it had so with them all. But the mixture in most of the tribes has been with the negro race than with the white, till that blood probably predominates, though there are still a considerable number who have prominent characteristics of the Indians—the lank, glossy, black the high cheek bones, the bright dark eye, and other features peculiar to the race."

8. THEIR NUMBER.

From the census of the several tribes and scattered families of Indians, and the descendants of Indians in the State, taken by Mr. Earle in 1860, we obtain the following aggregate for the whole State:—

Whole number of persons,	1
Families,
Males,	775
Females,	829
Unknown,	6
Natives,	1,438
Foreigners or unascertained,	172
Under 5 years of age,	188
From 5 to 10 years of age,	165
10 to 21 years of age,	379
21 to 50 years of age,	686
50 to 70 years of age,	174
Of 70 and over,	55

This aggregate is nearly twice as great as that obtained by Mr. Bird in 1848. Exclusive of the Natick Indians, (about a dozen only,) Mr. Bird counted but 847. But the number is approximate more closely if we consider only the tribes having reservations or plantations.

THE PLANTATION TRIBES.

The aggregates of the Plantation Tribes, according to Mr. Earle, are as follows:—

Whole number of persons,	1,241
Families,	291
Males,	588
Females,	650
Unknown,	3
	1,241
Natives,	1,126
Foreigners,	115
	1,241

But these Plantation Tribes may be again divided, as appears the following classification of Mr. Earle:—

"1. Those Indians and descendants of Indians, who, with their ancestors, have never been under the special guardianship of the State, who have no reservations, and who are either scattered and mingled with the other population or reside in neighborhoods without any distinct organization.

"2. Those tribes having reservations on which most of them reside, with little or no intermixture of whites amongst them, and who are or have been under guardianship—including the Chappaquiddick, Christown, Gay Head, Marshpee and Herring Pond tribes.

"3. The tribes which have reservations or have had them, and are or have been under guardianship; but of which the smaller portion only, none at all of them, now remain on the reservations. These include the Fall River, Punkapog, Natick, Dudley and Hassanamisco tribes; and to these may be added those of the second division, who have left their reservation and reside elsewhere.

"The second class is the most interesting of the three, both on account of its greater numbers—comprising eight hundred and fifty persons, or more than one-half of the whole,—and of the anomalies which their case presents."

A hundred years ago the members of these Plantation Tribes were much more numerous. Judge Davis, in a note to Nathaniel Morton's Memorial, estimates the whole number of "praying Indians" then at 3,600, namely:—

PART II.]

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHA

In Massachusetts Proper, In Plymouth Colony,
On Nantucket,
On Martha's Vineyard,
Total,

It is probable that this estimate was exaggerated, for we learn from another source that the Marshpee tribe has not diminished since 1764, but rather increased its numbers.

It appears by a statement made before a committee of the legislature in 1884, by Mr. B. F. Hallett, counsel for the tribe, that their population in 1767 was 292; in 1771 it was 322, of whom fourteen were negroes, married to Indians; in 1800 it was 315, of whom sixteen were negroes. It was 305 in 1810, of whom twenty-six were foreigners, all negroes or mulattoes. In 1859 the tribe numbered 403, including thirty-two foreigners, all married to natives of the tribe, all negroes or mulattoes, or various mixtures of negro, Indian or white blood, none of them being pure whites. Sixty-six out of the whole number of the tribe, at the time of the enumeration, were not residents of the district; but fifty-two of them were considered as retaining their rights in the tribe.

But there can be no doubt that some of the tribes have been greatly decreased, and in all, the pure Indian blood has become greatly mixed with that of the negro.

4. THE CONDITION OF SPECIAL TRIBES.

The Gay Head Tribe.

The western end of Martha's Vineyard is made up of three peninsulas, Nashaquitsa, Squipnocket and Gay Head. They are nearly cut off from the main land of the Island by Menemsha Pond, an extension of the Menemsha Bight, which comes from the north by a narrow and shallow strait, and stretches across to within a few rods of the south side, leaving an isthmus where the road runs to Nashaquitsa, and thence to Gay Head. For Nashaquitsa connects with Gay Head by another narrow isthmus. Gay Head is of nearly equal length and breadth between a circle and a square in form, and contains about 2,400 acres of land. A portion of this is held in severalty, and is divided and occupied by the several owners; the remainder is owned by the tribe in common.

The population here appears to be gradually increasing, and the increase would be more apparent but for the emigration which has taken place. The whole population of the plantation, including a few in the vicinity who are recognized as having rights as members of the tribe, was 204 in 1860, and cannot now be less.

The inhabitants of Gay Head, like all whose legal condition is that of Indians, are the involuntary wards of the State. When the State has taken their property into its own keeping, they cannot make no sale of their land or improvements out of their tribe, and so there are few or no purchasers. They cannot make no valid contract, and can neither sue nor be sued in the courts. "They are, therefore," says Mr. Earle, "bound to the plantation by the act of the State, with all its disadvantages and their own disabilities; or if they leave it, it must be at the sacrifice and loss of the income of all their rights there."

The position of the tribe, as a tribe, is thus spoken of by the Commissioners of 1849:—

"By the Act of June 25, 1811, the Governor was authorized to appoint 'three proper persons to be guardians to the Indian, mulatto and negro proprietors of Gay Head;' which guardians, in addition to the usual powers given to guardians in such cases, were empowered to take into their possession the lands of said Indians, &c., and allot to the several Indians, &c., such part of said lands as should be sufficient for their improvement, from time to time; and the Act further provides for the discontinuance or removal of the guardians, at the discretion of the Governor and council.

"Under this Act three guardians were appointed, and in 1814 a new appointment was made; since that time no new appointment has been made.

"The Indians became dissatisfied with their guardians, who resigned, and the guardianship has disappeared. The Act of 1828 provided, that whenever the Indians and people of color of Gay Head shall, by a town meeting, accept this Act, and shall transmit to his excellency the governor an attested copy of said vote, then his excellency may authorize said guardian to act as guardian, &c., at Gay Head, and may, on their request, appoint suitable persons to divide their lands. The Indians, cherishing no very favorable recollections of the guardian system, have never accepted the Act. For about thirty years they have been without any guardian, and the division of their lands, and in the whole arrangement of their affairs, except of the school-masters, has been left to themselves."

Concerning this Act of 1828, Mr. Earle further says:—

"The provision for the appointment of a guardian was not the objectionable feature of the Act of 1828. The guardian was empowered 'to punish, by fine not exceeding twenty dollars, or by solitary imprisonment not exceeding twenty days, any trespasses, batteries, injuries, under five dollars; gross lewdness and lascivious behavior, disorderly and riotous conduct, and for the sale of spirituous liquors within the territory, or on the lands of said Indians and people of color, and said guardian, or other justice of the peace, may issue his warrant directed to the constable of said Indians and people of color, or to any proper officer, to arrest and bring before him any offender against the provisions of this Act; and, after judgment, he may order execution to be done by said constable or other proper officer; and if said guardian or other justice of the peace, shall adjudge any offender to solitary imprisonment, such offender shall not, during the term of said imprisonment, be visited by or allowed to speak with any person other than the jailer, or said guardian or justice of the peace, or such other persons as said guardian or justice of the peace shall specially authorize the offender to converse with; nor shall such offender be allowed any food or drink other than bread and water, unless sickness shall, in the opinion of a physician, render other sustenance necessary.' With such a provision in the law, making a discrimination so odious and unjust, between themselves and other prisoners, the Indians would have been greatly wanting in respect had they accepted it. It is a provision disgraceful to the statute-book of the State, and discreditable to the civilization of the age. The two tribes, the Chappaquiddick and the Christiantown, were made subject to the provisions of this law, without the power to accept or reject it, and are governed by it to this day."

THE INDIANS ON MARTHA'S VINEYARD.

The municipal organization of Gay Head* consists, mainly, of three overseers, a clerk, treasurer, school committee, and committee on public lands. The school committee performs the duties incident to such committees in the towns, and those of the prudential committee also. The school is kept usually about seven months in the year, and is well attended; but its value is greatly impaired by the inability of the parents to procure suitable books, stationery, &c.

The support of the poor is a severe tax upon the people, absorbing the entire revenue of the public lands—the largest, best, and most valuable portion of the property of the tribe.

I visited Gay Head in the early part of August, and observed, as well as time would permit, the condition of the tribe. They are poor, and they are by no means all industrious, or skilful in the tillage of their valuable lands. But they seem to be improving in all respects, and to be much attached to their own organization, without any very strong desire to become a political member of the State.

Other Indians in Dukes County.

The Chappaquiddick Indians occupy a part of the island of that name, lying on the east of Martha's Vineyard, from which it is separated by Mattakeeset Bay, forming Edgartown Harbor. The Strait at the northerly part of Edgartown Village is very narrow, not more than an eighth of a mile wide, and there is a ferry between the two islands. The whole population of the tribe, including one family in New Bedford and one in Edgartown, was 74 in 1860. In 1848 it was 85, and is now probably not more than 60.

The hamlet of Christiantown is situated among hills, by the shores of the Vineyard Sound, on the north-west side of Martha's Vineyard, in the town of Tisbury. The whole number of inhabitants belonging to the tribe was 53 in 1840.

The Marshpee Tribe.

The District of Marshpee, the residence of the largest distinct body of the so-called Indians now remaining in Massachusetts, Created by Chap. 184, 1862, which also allowed Indians not connected with plantation to become citizens.

lies on Cape Cod, in the westerly part of Barnstable County and is bounded on the north by Sandwich and Barnstable, on the east by Barnstable, on the west by Falmouth, and on the south by the waters of the Vineyard Sound. The number of the tribe, as has been said, was 403 in 1860.

They occupy an area of over sixteen thousand acres, prising, in 1860, according to Mr. Earle,—

Indian lands held in severalty, acres,	10,
in common,	3,
Total Indian lands,	13,
Aggregate area of four ponds,	1,
Land held by whites, estimated at Roads, rivers and small ponds,
Whole area, acres,	16,

The public property was valued by Mr. Earle at $14,702, private property at $70,653. It has probably since increased in value, but not greatly.

The District of Marshpee has had a town organization since 1834, when, by a sort of insurrection, the attention of the Legislature had been directed to the complaints of the Indians there. The organization is similar to that at Gay Head; there is here a Treasurer, a white citizen, appointed by the Governor, whose business it is to manage the funds of the tribe annually expended for the Marshpee tribe.

None of the other tribes have any town government.

5. EXPENDITURES IN BEHALF OF THE INDIANS.

We have no statement of the sums annually paid on account of the Indians before 1843.

Between 1843 and 1849, the total amount was $10,059.25, an average of $1,676.54 in each year. For the ten years ending Dec. 31, 1859, the amount was $29,964.37, an average of nearly $3,000 a year. From 1860 to 1867, about $30,000* been expended, making a total, in a quarter of a century, $70,000, and upward.

* Including an estimated expenditure for 1867 of $4,000.

of late years, the expenses have increased, being in 1865, $4,382.13, of which $584 was for schools, and in 1866, $78.56, of which $733 was for schools.

Reduced to a gold basis, however, the expenditures since 1862 have scarcely been larger than in former years; but we may safely count upon a yearly claim on the State for from $1,000 to $5,000 to be expended in behalf of the Indians.

CHAPTER II.—THE CLAIMS OF THE INDIANS TO SPECIAL LEGISLATION.

1. THEIR DISABILITIES.

It is evident that when any class of persons in this Commonwealth has been placed under special disabilities, special legislation will be necessary to secure them from oppression. I need only refer to our whole complex system of laws for the protection of married women, minor children, persons under guardianship, etc., to attest the truth of this statement. What, then, are the special disabilities of the Indians and their descendants in Massachusetts?

Speaking more particularly of the Plantation Tribes, Mr. [unclear] says:—

Here are five communities, within the State, but not of it; subject to its laws, but having no part in their enactment; within the limits of several municipalities, yet not subject to their jurisdiction; and holding real estate in their own right, yet not suffered to dispose of it, except to a trustee. In the five, without any good reason for the difference, very measurably diverse legal conditions prevail. Chappequiddick and Mattapoisett tribes are under guardianship,* and no person belonging to either of them, however capable or shrewd he may be, can make any contract, either to buy or sell, which shall be valid in law, without the written consent of the guardian; and, for sundry petty offences, the guardian is authorized to inflict punishment unusual and cruel, and such as are not permitted in any other case, nor to any other offender, under the laws of the State. The law provides a semi-municipal organization for these tribes, but the provision is held in abeyance, and the law, in

* See Act of 1827.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. II.

that respect, is not carried into effect. In Marshpee, a municipal organization is established,* with authority to assess taxes, yet without any power to enforce their collection; with authority for the management of the public lands and fisheries, for the establishment and maintenance of schools and the support of the poor; in brief, with the powers of a town, but not entrusted with the charge of their own funds, which are held by a Treasurer, appointed by the Governor and Council. The people of Gay Head were authorized to accept the provisions of the Act of 1827, relating to Chappaquiddick and Christiantown, and it was provided that, whenever they should do it, the Governor might authorize the Guardian of those tribes to act as the Guardian of Gay Head also.

"But never having chosen to avail themselves of this privileges, this tribe, whose territory is not included within the limits of any town or municipality of the Commonwealth, have no legal organization whatever."

This last defect was partially remedied in 1862, but the general statements of Mr. Earle are still true in respect to all these communities. The individuals composing them cannot, without forsaking their homes and friends, become citizens of the State, nor acquire the same right to hold and transfer property that a citizen possesses.†

2. THE ORIGIN OF THESE DISABILITIES.

How did this condition of things originate? So far as Massachusetts can be said to have been owned at all, it was formerly owned by the ancestors of these disfranchised persons. How did they pass from the condition of sovereigns to that of vassals and dependents?

There can be little doubt that the aborigines of America, as a general rule, do not readily adapt themselves to the habits of a civilized community. At first they waged fitful and unexpected wars, in return for real or fancied injuries, and it was this condition of warfare which first forced upon our ancestors the precautions which they took in respect to the trade and habits of life of the Indians. Our present Indians are chiefly descended, however, from those who were either conquered or won over to a friendly relation with the whites,—and the disabilities imposed were such as, it was believed, would make them is likely again to become hostile. After all there is something anomalous in their present position, and only to be justified, justified at all, by the inability which they have shown to accept the duties of civilized life. The Commissioners of 1848 all said, quoting the language of Mr. Hallett in 1834,—

* See Act of 1827.

“The Indians are not aliens. They are not a domestic nation, as the Cherokee are declared to be, by the Supreme Court of the United States. They have no rights secured by treaty, and no other rights than those of property and person, applying to them, as to all other citizens.

“They are not vassals, slaves, or servants. They were not conquered by our fathers, but were the friends of the whites, before the war of the Revolution, and, in that war, fought on our side, for which some of them now receive pensions.

“Are they paupers? They cannot come under this head, for they are all freeholders in common, and the law permitting them to take the debtor's oath, makes an express exception of their landed property.

“Are they incapacitated? Not naturally. They are not non compos mentis. How then are they incapacitated? To justify the placing of the property and person of the citizen under guardianship, he must, individually, be incapacitated. Every individual of the Marshpee tribe must then be proved to be incapacitated, to justify taking away his rights of person and property, and they must be placed under the general laws of guardianship. You cannot declare a whole community to be incapacitated from the exercise of individual rights. As it regards the Marshpee Indians as a community, it is false reasoning, to take it for granted, that they are incapable of self-government; because they have never had a fair opportunity of testing their capacity, and because they are now as well informed and as temperate as many of the plantations were, when originally incorporated into towns. On what principle, then, is it, that there has always been a distinction between the laws made for governing the Indians, and those made for the whole people, when the constitution declares that ‘all shall be governed by the same laws for the common good?’”

Probably the distinction was made because the Indians were believed to be in some degree at least, incapable of civilization, and therefore might be, as a class, placed under a general guardianship, just as the individuals incapable of civil rights and duties, were placed under special guardianship. This, at least, is the inference to be drawn from the language of that distinguished judge, Chief Justice Parker, many years ago, in deciding the well known pauper case of Andover versus Canton.* Judge Parker said,—

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. II.

“Probably the legislature will consider the remaining tribes and parts of tribes of aboriginals, which yet remain within the confines of this Commonwealth, as the unfortunate children of the public, entitled to protection and support, when their means of subsistence fail, and when it shall be found that they are incapable of civilization, so far as to be admitted as citizens.”

3. HOW LONG OUGHT THESE DISABILITIES TO CONTINUE?

Unless, therefore, we have discovered by sufficiently long trial that the so-called Indians are “incapable of civilization so far as to be admitted as citizens,” we ought to look forward to a time when the existing disabilities should cease, and this portion of our people should enjoy, what has been granted to persons of African descent, equality of civil rights. I might say, “to other persons of African descent,” for it is well known that among the so-called Indians there is a majority of persons with some infusion of African blood, while some of their chief men have little or no Indian blood at all. Has the time now come when these persons can properly be admitted as citizens?

So far as the general public is concerned there would probably be but one answer to this question, and the Indians might be at once enfranchised. But there is an unwillingness among the Indians themselves to assume the burdens of citizenship, and a feeling among their white neighbors that they are not to be desired as townsmen, though they might not be objectionable as citizens of the Commonwealth.

It is feared by the Indians themselves that taxation, military duty, etc., will be more than an equivalent for any advantage they may receive from the privilege of citizenship; while, on the other hand, their white neighbors fear that an increased cost of supporting the poor, and other inconveniences would arise from the annexation of an Indian tribe to their township.

* See Mass. Reports, vol. xiii. p. 547.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

Under these circumstances it does not seem necessary to force enfranchisement upon the Plantation Indians, but it is very desirable that all measures should be taken to promote this enfranchisement as soon as possible. If these local objections can be removed on both sides, there will remain no sufficient reason for the condition, habits or character of the Indians to forbid their becoming citizens on equal terms with the other inhabitants of the State. And it is on every account desirable that all special and anomalous legislation of the nature above specified should cease as soon as it can be dispensed with. I would, therefore, suggest that your Board urge the Legislature to appoint a special Committee at the next session, with instructions so to revise and modify all the existing laws that at some future time the guardianship of the Indians may terminate, and they be incorporated in the body politic, under such provisions with regard to lands, the support of the poor, etc., as may be just to all parties. This work can be done at the next session as well as at any time, and there will be no necessity for any commission other than of the Legislature to arrange the details.

Whatever action may be taken, it should be carefully seen to the proper authorities that the Indians are hereafter included in all the census and registration reports of the State; a matter which has generally been neglected.

PART THIRD.

PRISONS AND REFORMATORIES.

CHAPTER I.—THE MASSACHUSETTS PRISONS.

I.—MUNICIPAL AND COUNTY PRISONS.

There is little to report in respect to the municipal prisons in the State, inasmuch as they do not come closely under the inspection of your Board or of any State officer. From the general information which can be gathered, I judge that the number of Guard-Houses, and of persons confined in them, increases year by year, while the small number of town and city Workhouses is every year growing smaller, and receiving a less number of convicts. I do not include in this statement the Boston House of Industry, which, for all essentials, may be reckoned in the class of County Prisons.

The County Prisons during the year ending on the 30th of September, 1867, have been diminished in number, the Jail at Concord, the oldest prison building in the State, having been closed in consequence of the removal of the Courts from that town, under the authority given the County Commissioners of Middlesex in Chapter 220 of the Acts of 1867. The aggregate average number of prisoners in the jails and Houses of Correction has been somewhat larger than last year, though the number of persons committed has been less. The earnings of the prisoners are greater than in any previous year, and the net cost of these prisons is a trifle less than last year, although the number of prisoners is greater. The number committed for the non-payment of fines and costs has greatly diminished since last year, being now but 8,668, against 4,628 the year before. The number who paid fines and costs in prison is less by 158, the amount paid is but a trifle less, ($19,232.17 against 64.62 in 1866.) By this I understand that there were fine and cost cases, or that more of them were settled in it. It has been the general testimony of magistrates that were never so readily paid as in the past year.

THE COUNTY PRISONS.

The number of volumes in the prison libraries has changed little since last year, that it is scarcely necessary to repeat the table in which they are mentioned. The following Table (Table I.) shows the nature and amount of expenditures in the County prisons, the cash earnings, the earnings not in cash, and other matters of interest.

The Boston House of Industry is not included in this Table, its statistics will be found in the Prison Summary on a subsequent page. As spoken of in the Reports of the Board of Directors, annually printed by the city government, this institution includes the Prison and Almshouse; but I have endeavored to separate the prison expenses, so far as possible. It is to be regretted that so many distinct classes of inmates could be included in one great establishment.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

On the preceding Table some remarks may be made similar to those made a year ago.

In the first place, the aggregate of the sums under the different headings previous to "Total Amount Expended," will often be more than the sum under that head, for the reason that some expenses are returned more than once. The salary of Physicians is included under "Medicine and Medical Attendance" as well as under "Salaries;" and the Salary of Chaplains is often, but not always, included under "Instruction of Prisoners." In regard to this last heading, it should be observed that it seldom seems to include anything else than the pay of Chaplains, and that the instruction given is always of a religious nature. No money is paid by the public in Massachusetts to give instruction to prisoners in reading, writing, or the other branches of a school education, although a majority of the prisoners are grossly ignorant.

The "Total Amount Expended" is intended to cover not only what appears on the prison books as the cost of the prison before deductions are made for labor, &c., but such other sums as should be added to give the true cost of the prison, whether entered on the books or not. For example, the salary of the Chaplain in the Boston Jail is not paid by the County, but by the City of Boston; but I have included it, although not set down in the return of Sheriff Clark. I have not also included a portion of the salary of the City Physician, who looks after the sick at this jail, because the value of his services may fairly be offset by that portion of the Chaplain's time which is not occupied at the jail.

Again, in some of the returns the salaries of the Overseers of the House of Correction are not given, but these have been added to the total. If it were possible to ascertain the exact value of the services of the County Commissioners which are performed for the Prisons, we should have an additional sum of, perhaps, $2,000,—making the total of salaries amount to $75,000.

The "Balance against the Prison" is intended to represent its actual cost to the community, after deducting the cash receipts for labor. The cost of a prison to the county is often than this, because there are receipts of money for the food of prisoners which go to reduce the balance against the county. It is to be desired that all the particulars of the prison accounts should be reported annually ; but no law at present requires a return of the amount of board received.

The cash receipts for the labor of prisoners are the only ones which can be used to diminish the apparent cost of the prisons, although it frequently happens that this sum does not justly represent the labor that has been performed. This is particularly the case at Fitchburg and Ipswich, and wherever else considerable repairs are made, on which the prisoners are employed as laborers. The total estimated value of the prison labor of all kinds, according to the Table, is over $93,000, or about one-third of the whole expense. Were our prisons consolidated, I believe it would be easy to double the amount. At the same time the amount paid for salaries could be considerably reduced. The list of officers whose salaries are given above, for each prison, will be found in the Supplement.

It is a gratifying fact that the " Balance against the Prisons " for this year less by some $5,000 than last year, although the average number of prisoners has been larger. This is not because the expenditures have been less, for these have increased some $20,000 ; but on account of the considerable increase in the revenue from the labor of the prisoners ; the cash receipts from this source being greater by $26,000 than in 1866. This is a gain of more than fifty per cent. on the earnings of last year ; but I have no doubt it is possible to gain a hundred per cent. next year, if the most economical method of managing this industry could be adopted. This statement is not made by conjecture, but from a close observation of two prisons of the same class in other States,—the Albany Penitentiary and the Detroit House of Correction. The former was spoken of at length in my Special Report of 1865, (Sen. Doc. No. 74,) and need only be alluded to here. Within the last year a history of its operations during the past twenty years has been published,—a work which the managers of our county prisons generally could read with great profit.

PART III.]

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

The Detroit House of Correction is a new prison, similar to ours of the same name, and opened in 1862. Since January, 1868, the earnings, derived chiefly from the labor of county prisoners committed for an average of only about one hundred days, have amounted to nearly $30,000 above all expenses, or an average of $7,500 a year from less than two hundred prisoners.

Mr. Brockway, the Warden, estimates that his prison will, this year, not only support itself, but pay an income of at least $20,000 into the city treasury. This result is due to measures a little uncommon, but Mr. Brockway believes that the same economy could be practised in any of the Massachusetts Prisons, after a sufficient time has been allowed to make the needful arrangements. If this could be done, our county prisons, instead of costing upwards of $200,000 a year, would be reduced to an expense of less than $75,000.

Other Statistics of the County Prisons.

I have given, in the Appendix, a Table showing the average yearly cost of some of the more important items of expenditure in the county prisons; and also the average weekly cost for all expenses of each prisoner. It will be noticed that the highest average cost is less than that of last year, while the general average by the week is less also.

Certain other facts communicated in the Sheriffs' Returns may here be exhibited, as showing the movement of the prison population, and the amount of fines and costs collected in the County Prisons. How far the law in respect to vaccination is complied with, will also appear from Table II.

From this Table it appears that the number in confinement on the 1st of October, 1867, was somewhat greater than a year before, and that the increase was wholly of sentenced persons in the Houses of Correction; the number in the jails having diminished from 447 to 391, while the House of Correction prisoners have increased from 1,068 to 1,140. The average number in the Houses of Correction has been 1,100. A very slight increase has taken place in the State Prison and the Boston House of Industry, which receive only sentenced persons, as the following figures will show.

THE CHARLESTOWN PRISON.

II.—THE STATE PRISONS.

We have now two prisons in Massachusetts managed by the State, namely, that at Charlestown and the State Workhouse at Bridgewater. The former will be first considered.

1. The Charlestown State Prison.Its Statistics.

For the first time within many years, this establishment has turned a handsome sum over and above the cost of maintaining

According to the statement of the Warden, the total current expenses for the year ending Sept. 30, 1867, have been $5,664.94;* the amount received from the labor of prisoners has been $105,221.81; while the earnings from other sources have been $12,789.29. This gives an excess of earnings amounting to nearly $21,000, or more than has been earned above expenditures in all the self-supporting years since 1836. These earnings are partly due to the high average number of convicts, (537,) but quite as much to changes made in the contract prices, which in some instances have gone up from 50 cents $1.07 a day for each convict. The latter price not being excessive, it follows that the smaller one was much too low. It to be hoped that the prices will now be kept up.

It is quite probable that the average number of convicts will decrease. At present it is falling away, and seems likely to continue so, even without the operation of the Conditional Pardon Act of last session. Should this be put in active operation, the average number of convicts at Charlestown would be greatly diminished. The number committed during the past year has been 128, scarcely more than half as many as in 1866.

The whole number of commitments to this prison since its opening is 7,236, according to the records, which may not be exactly correct. Since the opening of the prison on the Auburn plan, (October 7, 1828,) the number of commitments has been 335; but the actual number of different persons committed

* To this should be added $1,374.34; being the amount of additional salaries paid from the State Treasury in the last quarter of 1866; making a total of $7,039.28. Exclusive of $4,849.24 paid for work done on the prison extension, the contractors have paid $100,872.57 for the labor of convicts.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

only 4,723, of whom 385 were committed twice and no more; 75 three times and no more; 19 four times and no more; three five times and no more, and one (an American) six times; the whole number of those committed more than once being 484, or 10.25 per cent. of all committed. 190 of these 4,723 persons have died or committed suicide, the number of the latter being five. This is an average mortality of about five in a year, the constant average number of convicts being about 375. Probably about fifty persons have become insane; of these, 35 were sent to Insane Hospitals and never returned to the prison. The escapes have been, perhaps, as many, but all save 23 of the escaped men have been recaptured.

Out of the 5,335 commitments 673 were terminated by a pardon, that is, a little less than one in seven of those discharged in all ways; the whole number of discharges being 4,801, of which 3,845, or 80 per cent., took place at the expiration of the sentence.

196 of these commitments were for life; of this number, 97 or just about half were pardoned out; 29 have died in prison; 19 have been discharged in other ways, and 51 now remain. The average time served by the 145 who have been discharged is between seven and eight years. The average length of sentence named in the 5,139 other commitments was 3 years and 9 months. The largest number at any one time in prison was 556; the largest number during the past year, 549. The number of cells, including those built the past year, is 652, exclusive of 14 Hospital rooms and 14 ancient cells below the Hospital.

During the twenty years ending with the 1st of October, 1867, the whole number of commitments was 3,117, of which 406 were recommitments; the whole number of recommitments since 1828 being 612.* In the years 1847-1857, there were 1,622 commitments, 230 recommitments; in the ten years, 1857-1867, 1,495 commitments, 176 recommitments.

* The commitments since 1828 have been as above stated, 5,335; there were, therefore, in the nineteen years, 1828-1847, 2,218 commitments, and 206 recommitments, a percentage of 9.3 on commitments. From 1847-1867 the percentage was 14.2; from 1857-1867 the percentage was 11.8; that is to say, a medium between the two former periods. But from 1857-1864 it was 13.7.

PRISON LABOR.

Dividing the last ten years into three periods, we find in the—

YEARS.	Commitments.	Recommitments.
-1860,	505	69
-1867,	504	40

During the last year there have been 128 commitments, 12 which were recommitments; and of the 534 now in prison, or about one in nine, are recommitted convicts. Of the 3,117 commitments from 1847-1867, 415 could neither read nor write; 1,069 were born in Massachusetts, 961 in other States, and 1,096 in other countries—630 being born in Ireland. Of those born in Massachusetts, 63 could not read nor write; of those born in other States, 93; of those born in Ireland, 178; of all others, 81 could neither read nor write. Out of 236 persons committed in these twenty years, 69 could not read nor write. During the past year, 112 convicts have been discharged, of whom 7 died, one was sent to the Insane Hospital, 13 were pardoned, and 91 discharged at the expiration of sentence.

The Prison Labor.

The number in prison on the first of October being 534, the number at work for contractors was 438, of whom 331 were employed by a single firm, the Tucker Manufacturing Company. Of these men were paid for at the rate of $1.07, and 189 3 cents per day. Of the 107 remaining, 33 were paid for one dollar and 74 at 77 cents per day. These figures show that the contract labor of the prison was never so highly paid as now, the average rate being upwards of 93 cents per day. Even at this rate, there is no doubt the contractors are making large profits, nor that the State would make still larger profits now by employing the convicts directly for the benefit of the Prison. A small number have been so employed during the past summer, on the enlargement of the Prison, and have earned the sum of $1,849.24 by their labor in building.

The average price of contract labor has been increased this year more than 25 per cent., by the exchange of a single contract at 50 cents for one at $1.07 per day. It is understood that the former contractors offered only 60 cents in their first bid, but finding that they were likely to lose a most profitable business, they signified a readiness to pay at least double what the State has exacted from them for the five years previous. This is equivalent to acknowledging that they have been paying no more than half the value of the work done for them for some years past, and is a good illustration of one feature of the Contract System.

In connection with this change in the contracts, something has been said concerning the gratuities paid by some of the contractors to the families of certain convicts working for them. It is very clear that, if such gratuities are to be paid by anybody, the State should regulate and apportion them, not leaving so important an element in prison discipline to the good nature, the self-interest, or the caprice of individual contractors. I would, therefore, suggest to your Board whether it would not be well to recommend the Legislature to pass an Act regulating the gratuities, which might be given in connection with that form of the Mark System proposed by the Warden in his Report for the present year.

Discipline and Instruction at Charlestown.

As in former years, the discipline of the State Prison has been well administered by Mr. Haynes, the experienced Warden, seconded by his officers. With that desire for improvement which has always characterized his administration, Mr. Haynes has added some new regulations for the good of his prisoners. The weekly lectures begun by him last year, and continued through the winter, have been interesting to the audience, and, no doubt, useful also. They ought not, however, to take the place of systematic school instruction, but rather be made an adjunct to that, as is done in the Irish prisons, which probably furnished the first hint of such lectures. At the House of Correction in Detroit, already alluded to, Mr. Brockway has fitted up a room for school and lectures, with blackboard, maps, etc.

THE CHARLESTOWN PRISON.

would have been well if, in the recent enlargement of our State Prison, some of the space not needed for cells had been taken for such a use. Perhaps the Chaplain's room, though small, may answer, in part, for classes, and the duty of secular instruction might, for the present, be assigned to the Chaplain, who would then become, of necessity, resident in or near the prison.

The Conditional Pardon Act,* when properly carried out, will be found a great aid to the discipline within the prison walls, as well as a check on crime outside. Mr. Haynes has frequently assured me that he had from fifty to a hundred convicts who might be allowed tickets-of-leave under such a law; and I trust that their names have, ere this, been laid before the Governor and Council. It may well be that there are reasons known to the Executive why so large a number could not at once be discharged, even on strict conditions; but many of them, doubtless, will be, and the knowledge of this fact cannot fail to stimulate those who remain to good conduct. And when their conduct is measured and denoted by the method proposed by Mr. Haynes, it will be comparatively easy for them to earn the remission of sentence contemplated by the law.

In other respects, also, the new method of the Warden will be of great service. Nothing so much interferes with the proper discipline of a prison as a feeling on the part of the convicts that they are unfairly or partially treated; and nothing could more conduce to impartiality of treatment than the mode of marking recommended. In prisons where it has been long used it has given great satisfaction, and, under the judicious oversight of Mr. Haynes, it would succeed as well or better at Charlestown.

General Condition of the State Prison.

Upon the whole, there is much reason to be pleased with the condition of our State Prison,—pleased, but not satisfied,—for that would imply that it had reached perfection, or as near it as human frailty will allow. This cannot be assumed,—and yet, the praise awarded by impartial observers, such as Dr. Wines and Professor Dwight, of the New York Prison Commission, is good evidence that it stands high among prisons of its class.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

The recent enlargement of the buildings, though, in my opinion, needless, has been made with economy,* and will enable the Warden to use only such portions of the Prison as are best adapted to the number of convicts he may have. It will also serve the purposes of classification better than before.

The fact that the Prison is now self-supporting, and likely to continue so for the present, is a gratifying one. Every such establishment should be, and, with proper oversight, in ordinary years, can be. When it is not, the interests of the convict suffer even more than those of the tax-payer. The community will cheerfully aid in improving a prison which does not constantly run us in debt,—and to attempt improvements without the co-operation of the community is to impose too great a burden on a few individuals, with little hope of important results. “Pay as you go,” is a good maxim for prisons as well as for persons.

The higher concerns of prison discipline are not neglected at Charlestown. The kind and thoughtful government administered there does not foster the increase of crime, while it promotes the reformation of criminals. With the gradual introduction of all that is best in other prisons, we shall see, as we have been seeing, improved results with every passing year. And the new interest in prison discipline lately aroused in the community, will make the progress of improvement more rapid and more effective.

For further statistics and other information respecting this Prison I would refer you to the Report of the Inspectors, Warden and other officers, and to the Tables in the Appendix to my Report.

2. The State Workhouse at Bridgewater.

Its Economy.

The opening of this establishment may be reckoned as taking place on the 1st of October, 1866, although a few persons had

* The whole cost to the State is estimated at about $30,000; or, making no allowance for the earnings of the convicts employed, $35,000. These earnings being included in the total earnings of the Prison, (about $21,000), the cost to the State would be $35,000 for the extension; if estimated at $30,000, then the regular prison earnings would be but $15,000.

THE BRIDGEWATER WORKHOUSE.

ously been sentenced to it. The whole number received during the year ending October 1, 1867, has been 252, of which 77 were males and 175 females. Of this number 36 escaped or been discharged, three of whom died. The number remaining on the 30th of September was 216—55 males and 161 females. The average number during the year 1864, and the average weekly cost about $1.90, or considerably less than the average cost in the county prisons, though more than the cost at the State Prison. When the shops and work-rooms are all occupied, the earnings of the prisoners still further diminish the cost of their support, which ought not to exceed $1.50 a week, and may perhaps as prices fall, to $1. A corresponding reduction of cost in county prisons would save the people of the State at least $1000 a year.

What has been Effected in Other Respects.

It is well known that the convicts at Bridgewater are all from the class of State paupers. The whole number received under the Act of 1866 has been upwards of 300, but a portion of them have been retained under sentence at Tewksbury and Monson, as provided for by law. Of the results of the experiment, Mr. Goodspeed thus speaks in his Annual Report:—

The change in the system of classification, now commenced in conformity with the recommendation of the board of state charities, and by other officials and individuals whose knowledge of the State system gave to their opinion great weight, promises to be successful not only in point of economy, but in answering the demands of justice and humanity more perfectly.

Ever since the establishment of the State almshouses, the need of a new classification has been felt. * * * The legislature, while examining the subject-matter, became satisfied also that the State was not properly organized as it should be in relation to that class of adult inmates known as State paupers. Ever since the present system was established, this has existed, and no remedy attempted till now.

Persons of both sexes, afflicted with the most loathsome diseases, the result of vicious indulgences, have been admitted in great numbers into the almshouses, while in fact they were criminals; and as soon as sufficiently recruited to get along without the help of the physician and nurse, demanded their discharge, and nothing short of a prompt compliance with it would satisfy them, so anxious were they to return to their former evil practices. Having obtained it, in one of two ways, and the base of their supplies being soon reached, a few weeks of debauchery returned them to the almshouse. * * * Besides this evil, there existed, under the old, or no classification system, one other that demanded a change, viz.: the poor who had lived a respectable life, done no wrong to themselves or society, but in consequence of a loss of health, or pecuniary misfortune, or both, compelled as a last resort to seek a home in the almshouse, were degraded by being obliged to associate with criminals. With the almshouse at Tewksbury for the receptacle and home of all the respectable and worthy poor whose stay is supposed to be permanent, and the State Primary School at Monson, where the children of paupers are to be first educated and trained to habits of industry, and have instilled into their minds religious and moral lessons to be carried with them to their homes, in good families always to be found, it would seem that better results from our charities must be realized than heretofore."

The Inspectors, (Messrs. Ford, Mitchell and Thaxter,) coincide in this opinion. They say,—

"The evils so often complained of in our former Reports, arising from want of system in the matter of admitting and discharging criminal paupers, no longer exists, and from the evidence thus far produced from the working of the change in the system, we are unhesitatingly of the opinion that much good will be the result."

To this testimony I would cheerfully add my own, as has already been briefly done on a preceding page. In speaking of the State Almshouses there will be occasion again to refer to the subject. The Tables there given will also contain the financial statistics of the mixed establishment at Bridgewater.

New Buildings and Alterations.

By appropriations made in 1866 and 1867, the sum of $12,113.35 was set aside for adapting the Almshouse at Bridgewater to its new uses as a Workhouse. Of this sum, $9,703.51 have already been expended, and probably the whole sum will needed to complete the work. At the same time an appropriation of $15,000 was made for heating the whole establishment with steam, of which $7,618.24 have already been laid out, and the whole sum will be needed to complete the work. There has thus been established what is practically a new prison, with an expenditure for buildings of from $15,000 to $5,000, or less than $100 for each prisoner to be confined there.

In this way we have rendered unnecessary the construction of any other prisons in the State for at least ten years. To persons accustomed to see money expended by the half-million for prison buildings, these figures may seem worthy of consideration, and may serve as a partial answer to the question, "What has the Board of Charities done?"

It is true that the State Workhouse is not so strongly built as most prisons are, and that it is not arranged as a new structure would be, in many respects. But if it is found to answer the purposes intended, to separate the criminal from the honest man, and to give the former class an opportunity to forsake his vicious ways, it will, perhaps, be as useful as though constructed with all the appliances of a model prison. What it needs is, the means for more complete classification, and more direct efforts to instruct and reform the inmates.

CHAPTER II.—OTHER AMERICAN PRISONS.

In a former Report I gave a Table of the State Prisons of twenty States of the Union, besides Massachusetts, in order to exhibit some important facts in regard to them.* There were doubtless several errors in the Table, but one in particular has been pointed out to me. The State Prison Commissioner of Wisconsin, Mr. Cordier, states that the deficit of earnings in the prison at Waupun, in the year 1865, was not $30,000, but less than $10,000. The mistake arose from my misunderstanding the entries in his cash account. In order to exhibit the same facts, with greater accuracy and a year later, I have constructed the following Table relating to the same prisons, except that the Maryland Penitentiary takes the place of that in Virginia. The statistics of the Charlestown Prison are given for the year 1866, so as to be uniform with the rest, but it will have been seen by what precedes, that there is, this year, a profit instead of a loss there. The same remark would apply, no doubt, to several of the other prisons in the list. The large increase in the number of convicts since 1865, will be noticed.

* See Table V., Third Annual Report.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. II.

Few of the Southern States are included in the Table, for the reason that there are very scanty returns from their state prisons since the war. In Delaware, West Virginia and Florida there are no state prisons. That of Virginia is at Richmond; of North Carolina, at Raleigh; of South Carolina, at Columbia; of Georgia, at Milledgeville; of Alabama, at Wetumpka; of Mississippi, at Jackson; of Louisiana, at Baton Rouge; of Texas, at Houston; of Arkansas, at Little Rock; of Tennessee, at Nashville. Several of these prisons were burnt during the war,—those at Columbia, Milledgeville and Baton Rouge,—and all were much disorganized. There are at Nashville four hundred and fifty convicts, working at the rate of forty-three cents a day. At Richmond there are three hundred convicts, nearly half of them colored persons; at Little Rock there are seventy. The number seems to be fast increasing in the Southern prisons, particularly of colored convicts, of whom, before the war, there were but few, for there was little need to sentence slaves to the state prison. But now that the blacks are free, they are charged not only with their own sins, but those of their neighbors, and are sentenced without stint. In Virginia, Georgia, Tennessee, and perhaps elsewhere, efforts are making to improve the prison system. At the Kingston Penitentiary in Canada there are about nine hundred convicts, and about sixty at Halifax in Nova Scotia.

* Approximate.

Since the appearance of my last Report, much information concerning the Prisons named in this list has been published by the New York Prison Association, in a Special Report on the Prisons and Reformatories of the United States and Canada, prepared by Messrs. Wines and Dwight. No other work of such value on this subject is believed to be in existence, and I would refer your Board, and all who desire information thereupon, to its pages. The Twenty-Second Annual Report of the New York Prison Association also contains much interesting matter, relating more particularly to the prisons of the State of New York.

Since the publication of these volumes, however, some important changes have taken place in the American State Prisons, to some of which I have already alluded. In Illinois and in Michigan, the management of the Prisons has been completely changed, apparently for the better. In Pennsylvania, a Prison Commission, appointed by the State, has been investigating the whole question with a view to improve the system now in use there, though, probably, not to substitute another in the place of it. In New Hampshire, New Jersey, and in Rhode Island also, changes of some moment have occurred. In general, it may be said, that Prison Discipline is advancing in all parts of our country.

CHAPTER III.—REFORMATORIES.

I.—PUBLIC REFORMATORIES IN MASSACHUSETTS AND ELSEWHERE.

As already stated, the number of public Reformatories in the United States is increasing, and, as in Massachusetts, the number of pupils in them is likewise increasing from year to year. The average number, at our three State Reformatories, has been 752 during the past year, and, if we add the Boston House of Reformation, the number is about 980. The Vermont State Reform School, opened in 1866, has now nearly forty pupils, and the New Jersey School, about thirty. I have not learned whether that established in Indiana, by the State, is yet opened. Reformatories for girls, in Maine and in Connecticut, are decided upon, but not yet established. In AMERICAN REFORMATORIES.

New York City there is a strong feeling in favor of a School Ship, in connection with the House of Refuge on Randall's Island.

It is still true, as was stated in my earlier Reports, that the annual cost of a pupil in our Massachusetts Reformatories is considerably greater than in most such establishments in other States. This is due to various causes,—the principal of which is the comparatively small revenue derived from the labor of the pupils in Massachusetts. The 300 boys of our School Ships earn little or nothing, the girls at Lancaster earn little, and the boys at Westborough, though more industriously and profitably employed than formerly, are still far behind the pupils of some such establishments in the revenue derived from their labor. Mr. Perkins, of the Chicago Reform School, one of the most experienced and able men in the care of young delinquents that I have ever met, declares that at a boys' reformatory, well organized, the earnings ought to be half as great as the expenses of the establishment. In his school they are already a third part of the expenses.

In Vermont the labor of the pupils has been found of much value, and has materially lessened the cost of the School.

These facts and opinions are mentioned at the risk of wearying you, because economy in the management of such establishments is one of the highest and most sacred duties, and one to which we, in Massachusetts, have not always attended with sufficient care.

II.—PRIVATE REFORMATORIES.

The Legislature of 1867, by a Resolve, (Chapter 65,) directed as follows:—

"That the subject of additional provision for the care and reform of juvenile offenders be referred to the Board of State Charities, with instructions to inquire into the condition of the private charitable institutions within the Commonwealth, with special reference to the expediency of committing juvenile offenders to such institutions; and said board shall report to the next general court."

Under this Resolve, certain inquiries have been made by me, at your direction, by which the following facts have been made known:—

1. That the number of private charitable institutions able and willing to receive juvenile offenders is quite small in Massachusetts. So far as known to me they are the following:—

The House of the Angel Guardian in Roxbury, organized in 1851, and receiving 200 boys in a year.*

The Temporary Home for Discharged Female Prisoners in Dedham, organized in 1864, and receiving about fifty females in a year.

The Children's Aid Society of Boston, with two houses at West Newton. Organized in 1864, and receiving about thirty boys and girls in a year.

The Female Moral Reform Society in New Bedford.

2. Of these institutions, the managers of only one have petitioned the Legislature for authority to commit juvenile offenders thereto,—the Catholic House of the Angel Guardian, a private reformatory for the care and training, according to the Catholic form, of about 250 neglected, stubborn or vicious children. This is by far the largest private reformatory in Massachusetts, is under the supervision of the Catholic clergy of the diocese, and is, by its general character, well known to many of our citizens. It receives boys between the ages of 9 and 18, retains them an average period of a year, and discharges them to places or to their friends in this and other States. Seven out of nine of these boys are orphans, and nearly a third have been brought before the courts and bailed by Father Haskins, the Rector of the institution. About the same proportion are supported entirely by the institution; the other two-thirds pay board or provide their own clothing, or both. Nearly all the pupils are Catholics. The cost of their support is about $2.50 per week; they are in school four and one-half hours each day, but they do no work except the domestic work of the establishment. The number of officers and employees is twelve; their salaries $2,500.

The object in seeking the power of legal commitment to this institution seems to be twofold,—to hold the pupils with more authority, and to secure the countenance and aid of the State in a good work. For similar reasons, some of those concerned in the Children's Aid Society have requested the same privilege to be given to their institutions at West Newton.

* Since its opening it has received about 3,400 boys.

COMMITMENTS TO PRIVATE REFORMATORIES.

There is an obvious objection to granting this power of commitment to be exercised by and for the benefit of private individuals, associated in the management of an institution. The judicial authority of the Commonwealth ought not to protect such institutions and individuals, unless there is every guarantee on their part that they exercise their own powers for the good of the State, and not simply for a class or clique of persons. Hence the importance of subjecting all such establishments to rigid inspection by State officers, as is done in England and Ireland. If this is agreed to by the managers, then their request ought to be considered and granted, if, on the whole, seemed expedient. Under proper restrictions, I have no doubt that it would be expedient. But, as the subject comes before our Board in this present month of December, I need say nothing further about it. The facts and arguments to be laid before you will, no doubt, guide you to a wise decision.

PART FOURTH

THE STATE INSTITUTIONS.

CHAPTER I.—INSTITUTIONS OWNED BY THE STATE.

These are ten in number, exclusive of the Charlestown Prison, and not reckoning as separate establishments the new State Primary School and State Workhouse. Tables IV.-X. will show the financial condition of these ten establishments. They are derived from the Financial Statement annually made to your Board by the several Institutions, and will repay a careful examination. No special notice has been taken in these Tables of the two new Institutions, already mentioned,—the State Primary School, and the State Workhouse,—because the property and expenses of these are still in a common stock with those of the Monson and Bridgewater Almshouses respectively.

1. Valuation.—It will be seen that the total valuation of these ten establishments has reached nearly the sum of two millions. The number of acres has increased, by purchase, in the past year, to 1,320.

It must be remembered that this Valuation of Buildings does not represent with accuracy the cost of construction, etc., at the respective Institutions, which, generally speaking, is greater than the sums here given.

The Personal Estate at these establishments has, on the whole, considerably decreased during the past year, both by reason of a fall in prices, and because the supplies of some Institutions have been consumed faster than renewed by purchase.

REMARKS ON TABLES IV.—X.

Some changes have probably taken place in the Valuation of Pauper Establishments, in consequence of the sudden death of Mr. Bryant, the former appraiser, while valuing the property at Monson. The new appraisers would hardly adhere, in cases, to the standard of Mr. Bryant. At Rainsford Island it is probable that his valuation was too high; and so it may have been elsewhere. A single State Appraiser should be appointed to take charge of this work all over the State.

2. Receipts.—I have this year classified the Receipts from the State Treasury so as to show in one sum all that has been drawn during the year for current expenses. I have not included this sum, in case of the Worcester Hospital, the appropriation of $15,000 made by the last Legislature to pay off the long-standing debt of that institution. As finally ascertained by investigation, this debt was incurred by extensive repairs and alterations in the buildings at Worcester, several years ago; and the appropriation may, therefore, with propriety, go to increase the Construction Account of the Hospital. Most of the other Special Appropriations were for Construction, Repairs, and the purchase of land.

The Receipts from Loans are larger this year than it was expected would be the case. Of course they are only nominal receipts, and must be offset by heavier payments, so as to cover the interest charged. The policy of those establishments which have refused to contract loans cannot be too strongly recommended. In the case of the Reformatories, the Receipts from Towns are also only nominal, for they are paid at once into the State Treasury. These have been larger than ever the past year, although none are returned as having been received at Lancaster.

The Receipts from Labor at the Reformatories are a little greater than last year, and would have been still more but for change of plan at Lancaster, by which the productive labor of the pupils is considerably diminished.

The Receipts from the State Treasury at the three Lunatic Hospitals have largely increased over what they were a few years ago, because the rate of board has been raised, while the number of patients has also grown larger.

3. Expenditures in Detail.—These are given from the Financial Statements made by the several Superintendents, and are classified mainly according to their classification. And it is manifest, at once, that a different basis has been used in different Institutions. This is especially true in regard to Ordinary and Extraordinary Repairs, where there is room for much variance of opinion. At the Taunton Hospital, for example, the Ordinary Repairs amount to nearly $7,000, while at the Tewksbury Almshouse they are scarcely more than $2,100; yet, in reality, there was probably but little difference in the cost at the two Institutions.

That is to say, what would be called Ordinary Repairs at Taunton would be Extraordinary Repairs at Tewksbury or Monson. Again, the total cost of "Ordinary and Extraordinary Repairs" and "Buildings and Improvements" at Northampton is less than $6,700, and at Worcester, about $6,200,—in neither case equal to the "Ordinary Repairs" at Taunton. It is impossible to equalize these differences exactly, but they have their effect on the average weekly cost at the several institutions.

These remarks will show that the sum returned as the "Total Current Expenditures" may sometimes be too large. Indeed it is difficult to decide what shall be classed as current expenditures.

It is from this Table VI. that Table VIII. is computed, by means of the average number at each Institution. No deductions being made in this latter Table for increase in the appraisal, or other cause, the aggregate average cost often appears too large.

4. Different Estimates of the Annual Cost.—It has been my custom to give each year, statements of the Annual Cost of each establishment, according to several methods of computation. This is done because there are different opinions about computing it, which cannot well be reconciled one to another. For this reason I give the Total Receipts, the Receipts from the State Treasury, etc., and again, the Total Expenditures, the Actual Current Expenses, the Apparent Current Expenses, the Current Expenses as computed by the Superintendents, etc.;

REMARKS ON TABLES IV.—X.

and also the "Probable Current Expenses," which is simply an estimate of my own, from all the information accessible, of the annual cost of each establishment. I do not claim that this is absolutely correct; indeed, it is given in round numbers to show that it is but an approximation. Nor do I claim to have better means of judging than the Superintendents possess, though this may sometimes be the case: such as it is, it is offered for your examination; the grounds on which it is based having been well considered.

The extreme difficulty of arriving at the exact annual cost of a great establishment in full operation, and with a large amount of personal property on hand, can only be appreciated by those who have attempted to ascertain it. The method which seems to be correct in ordinary times, will not stand the test of such fluctuations in prices as we have known within the last five years. Hence the importance of taking long periods over which to extend the computation; and hence the value of the financial Statements required by you, and producing tolerable uniformity in these statistics from one year to another.

5. Liabilities and Resources.—As was explained last year, there is an important difference between the three Lunatic Hospitals and the other institutions, in regard to the nature of their resources. The seven other establishments named in these Tables depend directly and almost wholly upon the State Treasury for their support, while the Hospitals do not, to any extent like the same. Their Resources and Liabilities, therefore, can be calculated with some accuracy at any time, while it is only at the end of the calendar year that this can be done at the other establishments. If the balance of Liabilities is then against the institution it is disposed of by a deficiency appropriation, in each year. But at the Hospitals it is not customary to pass a deficiency bill every year, even if, as at Worcester and Northampton, there is a yearly deficiency. The Liabilities and Resources of the institutions at Tewksbury, Westborough, etc., as shown in this Table, must therefore be regarded as only an approximation to the state of the case, and it will appear on the first of January.

The appropriations have this year been so large, that there will probably be no deficiency at Tewksbury, Bridgewater, Rainsford or Westborough.

6. General Remarks on the Tables.—In consequence of the great saving of money through the closing of the Rainsford Hospital, (Dec. 31, 1866,) and the diminished numbers at Bridgewater, the current expenses have been much less at the Pauper Establishments than they were last year. This saving is balanced in part by the increased cost of supporting the sick poor in their towns, under the Sick Law of 1865, and the double cost of all burials of State Paupers. But as the total expenditure both for the sickness and the funeral expenses of State paupers will not probably exceed $25,000, if, indeed, it is more than $20,000, while the money saved at Rainsford and elsewhere amounts to at least $30,000, the net result is quite satisfactory.

At the Reformatories the expenses have increased, save at Westborough, where there has been a considerable diminution in the net expenses, according to my calculation. At the School Ships, on the contrary, there has been a largely increased expenditure.

GENERAL CONDITION OF THE TEN INSTITUTIONS.

These ten establishments differ so much in their purposes and management, that few general statements can be made which will apply to all. Table XI. will give the general statistics of their population.

Deducting the nominal admissions and duplicates in the whole number for 1866, would reduce it to below 8,500, while that for 1867 would be less than 8,000, or about twice the average number. The percentage of deaths to the whole number in 1867 would then be above 6, and when compared with the average number, about 14. I have reckoned all in the Lunatic Hospitals as cases of disease, though they are not so in the same sense that the Almshouse patients are.

From this it will appear that the mortality in these establishments has been much less than in 1866. This has been owing in part to the fact that so many of the State paupers are now cared for in sickness at their own homes, or in the towns where they reside. The decrease in the whole number supported has been attended by a slight increase in the average number.

It will be noticed that, in Table XI., I have given average numbers at the three existing pauper establishments, slightly different from those given in a previous Table. The smaller numbers at Tewksbury and Monson are those computed in this office, and are believed to be more exact than those given in the Annual Reports of the Superintendent. At Monson, at least, this is so, for it has been the custom there to reckon as actually present those who had eloped without being discharged, until an indefinite time had elapsed. In this way, sometimes the fictitious number reported would be ten or fifteen greater than the number by actual count. But, since the difference at the end of the year is trifling, I have allowed the average number, as reported, to stand, when used as a divisor, to arrive at the weekly cost. To obtain exact results in these computations is not so easy as might, at first, appear.

SPECIAL CIRCUMSTANCES.

I.—The Lunatic Hospitals.State Hospital at Worcester.

The finances of the Worcester Hospital, which had long been in a confused state, in consequence of errors made long ago, have at last been investigated and made reasonably clear. At the suggestion of the Board of Charities, the Legislative Committee, last winter, sent an accountant to examine and verify the Treasurer's books, which was done, not in minute detail, but so as to enable the Committee to see when and how the debt of the Hospital had been incurred. The following statements made by this accountant, (Mr. Barbour), will furnish a long-needed explanation:—

"I hereby certify that I have carefully examined the accounts of the late Samuel Jennison and those of Henry Woodward, late treasurers of the State Lunatic Hospital at Worcester, from September 1, 1853, to October 1, 1866, and find them honestly and correctly kept and fully vouched.

"Mr. Jennison resigned his office August 31, 1857, to Mr. Woodward, and reported a debt due at the Worcester banks, at that time, of $8,955.46. The trustees immediately after passed a vote authorizing Mr. Woodward to borrow of the Mechanics' Bank $8,000 to pay the debts then outstanding.

"From that time to the present, the institution has carried a debt varying from about $9,000 to about $20,000, on which they have paid interest amounting to $7,258.82. This debt has been in notes, and in many cases, aside from these notes, there has been a large overdraft at the bank, and the reports made from time to time showing the amount due at the banks do not show this overdraft.

"After a thorough examination of the vouchers it appears that there has been paid by the hospital during this period for permanent improvements, or strictly construction account, . . . $72,161 01

DEBT OF THE WORCESTER HOSPITAL.

Although the books of the institution have not been kept in that clear and distinct form showing plainly, at first sight, every transaction under its proper date, and the true and actual condition of the finances monthly, quarterly or even annually, still I am positive that the accounts are all properly footed and balanced, and from the evidence of the receipts and vouchers which I have carefully compared with the books the result now shown is correct. The hospital has carried a large debt since 1857, and that debt, on the first day of April, 1867, amounted to $18,851.13.

These figures show, more clearly than any comments of mine could do, the past financial condition of this institution. In the future it is hoped that greater foresight and economy will be practised; and that the turn of affairs now begun may be so prosperous as to make a farther appropriation by the State unnecessary, except for the payment of the board of its expenses. This should be at such a rate as to secure them a fair treatment, and save the Hospital from loss; the precise amount to be fixed from time to time, according to the scale of prices in the markets.

PART IV.]

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

Statistics of the Hospital.

The following figures will show the general results at Worcester during the year past:—

WORCESTER HOSPITAL.	Males.	Females.	Total.
Patients in the Hospital, October 1, 1866,	190	191	381
Admitted during the year,	154	134	288
Whole number under treatment,	344	325	669
Discharged recovered,	86	72	158
improved,	47	54	101
not improved,	8	4	12
Died,	26	17	43
Whole number discharged,	167	147	314
Remaining, September 30, 1867,	177	178	355

Out of the 288 patients admitted, 126 were State patients; 129 of this class were in the Hospital at the beginning of the year, 101 at its close, and the average number was 132. The total average number being 389, the State patients were 34 per cent. of the whole number; while of the admissions 43 per cent. were State patients. This would indicate, what I believe is the fact, that there is a greater number of recent, and therefore curable cases among the State patients than among the other inmates. It will be noticed that the proportion of State, Town and private patients is more nearly equal at Worcester than at any of the other Hospitals in the Commonwealth.

The Taunton Hospital.Pecuniary Condition.

The remarks made in previous reports respecting the finances of the Taunton Hospital, still hold good. Dr. Choate says, in his Report for the past year:—

“The present financial condition of the hospital cannot be regarded as other than prosperous and gratifying. After five years of unexampled cost of all articles of consumption, during which the price of board, upon which alone it has depended for support, has been increased only forty per cent., the hospital is entirely free from debt, and has been able out of its current income, to make many improvements, some of them expensive, in its grounds and buildings. Much of its financial prosperity and ease is due, undoubtedly, to the promptness with which all its demands against the State, towns, and individuals, have been liquidated. By the liberality of the last legislature, the rate of board was raised from the first of January last to three dollars and fifty cents per week, which is the rate now charged to towns. A considerable expenditure has been incurred during the year, in extending the wall around the farm, in repairs and improvements in the buildings, and in new furniture. The aggregate of these amounts to about seven thousand dollars.

"The total receipts of the hospital during the past year exceed the largest amount received in any former year by five per cent. The amount received from towns and individuals has steadily increased since the opening of the hospital, and now constitutes fifty-seven per cent. of the whole receipts, and is considerably larger than the total expenses or income of either of the first four years after the hospital commenced operations. During the past year the amount received from the State for the support of patients having no known settlement in the Commonwealth, has constituted forty-two per cent., that from towns forty-three per cent., and that from individuals fourteen per cent. of the total income. The amount received for the board of State patients having usually been considerably less than their actual cost to the hospital, the State has been, to some extent, re-imbursed for its original outlay in founding and furnishing the institution. The excess of the cost of support of State patients above the amount received from the State treasury during the fourteen years since the establishment of the hospital, has been about thirty thousand dollars. In addition to this sum, the actual increase in the real and personal property of the hospital, belonging of course to the State, cannot be less than twenty-five thousand dollars."

PART IV.]

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

Statistics of the Hospital.

The following figures will show the facts in regard to the Taunton Hospital, for comparison with those at Worcester:—

TAUNTON HOSPITAL.	Males.	Females.	Total.
Number of patients remaining, September 30, 1866, . . .	163	178	341
Number of patients admitted since September 30, 1866, . . .	129	136	265
Number of patients under treat- ment during the year, . . .	292	314	606
Number of patients discharged during the year, . . .	85	99	184
Number of patients died during the year, . . .	21	18	39
Number of patients eloped during the year, . . .	7—118	0—117	7—230
Number of patients remaining September 30, 1867, . . .	179	197	376
Discharged recovered, . . .	45	45	90
improved, . . .	11	21	32
unimproved, . . .	29	83	62

The admissions the past year have averaged about twenty-two per month. The largest number at any one time in the house, has been four hundred and two. The average number during the year has been three hundred and seventy-nine, of whom 148, or 89 per cent. were State patients; but of the 265 admissions, 155 or 58 per cent. were State patients, while 70 were town patients, and only 40 private patients.

The Northampton Hospital.Pecuniary Condition.

Although the Table of Resources and Liabilities shows a balance against this Hospital, and a bank debt of $8,000, its financial condition is regarded as better than ever before, because it is now earning money instead of falling in arrears. The Trustees say in regard to this,—

“The financial condition of the institution has been considerably improved in the course of the year. This result is due, in part, to the more adequate compensation for the support of State beneficiaries, received in conformity to a legislative Resolve passed in the spring of the current calendar year. It is further due to a pretty largely increased number of boarders, or private patients. The income from this source has been greater by four thousand six hundred and thirty-three dollars and eighty-two cents ($4,633.82) than in any former year. A statement of the receipts from boarders,* for each of the last seven years, is as follows:—

NORTHAMPTON HOSPITAL.

Official year 1860–61,	$12,088 34
“ “ 1861–2,	14,228 19
“ “ 1862–3,	14,972 85
“ “ 1863–4,	17,397 78
“ “ 1864–5,	,556 62
“ “ 1865–6,	19,475 09
“ “ 1866–7,	24,108 91”

This income from private boarders is greater than that from the same source at Taunton, and nearly equal to that at Worcester. Many of this class received at Northampton come from other States, but the number thus received in all our State Hospitals does not much exceed the number sent out of the State to Hospitals elsewhere.

General Hospital Results.

NORTHAMPTON HOSPITAL.	Males.	Females.	Total.
Patients in the hospital September 30, 1866, .	182	223	405

Average No. of State Patients,	—	—	262.32
Patients remaining September 30, 1867, . .	175	238	413

* For board alone, an additional sum being paid for contingencies.

Of those recovered, only 12 were State patients, or one in 22 of the average number; of the deaths, 29, or one in nine of the average number were State patients. Of the 138 admitted, 54, or 40 per cent. were State patients, but only 24 of these were admitted from the general population. About two-thirds of the whole average number were State patients.

The small number of curable cases among this class of patients at Northampton has already been mentioned in my Reports. In this respect Northampton differs materially from the other two Hospitals, chiefly because its State patients are mainly persons transferred as incurable from the other Hospitals. It will be noticed that the admissions, excluding transfers, are but 108 in all, or less than half those at Taunton, and but little more than a third part of those at Worcester, which is the most central of the three.

The Lunatic Hospitals as a Class.

The feature in the Hospitals most worthy of notice is the great increase of admissions, the majority of which are recent cases of insanity. The total of admissions from the general population is 662, of whom 378 had been insane one year or less. In 1866 the admissions from the general population were 601, and in 1865, 508. There has, therefore, been an increase of more than 30 per cent. within the last two years. The number who had been insane less than one year in 1866 was 356; in 1865 it was 306. There has therefore been an increase of recent cases in two years, of $28\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

This would seem to show, what we have reason to believe on other evidence, that during the civil war, many persons, really insane, were so situated as to render commitment to a hospital needless or impossible, who yet, on the return of peace, naturally were committed for restraint or cure.

The great advance in these numbers shows how much pressure there must be on the means for curative treatment in all our State Hospitals, and how much the fact that these are crowded with incurables, interferes with their usefulness.

The Labor of Patients.

As usual, the labor of the patients has been employed about the farm and domestic work. This labor has a twofold value;

LABOR OF THE INSANE.

it is useful to the Hospital and it is remedial to the patient. On this topic, Dr. Earle, in his Report, speaks as follows :—

“What is true of mankind in general, in this respect, is true of the insane. Occupation, either bodily or mental, is desirable for all whose health will admit of it; and the occupation should, as far as practicable, be such as will contribute to health by sufficient corporeal exercise. This is especially true in respect to all who have been accustomed to manual labor. It may still be asserted, as in some earlier reports, that not less than three-fourths of all the labor upon the premises, within doors and without, is performed by patients; and to this assertion may be added another—that the amount of work upon the farm, in the course of the year just closed, pretty largely exceeds that of any former year. The change in the location of the road, mentioned more particularly in another place, was made by the usual working force of the institution. The mass of effective laborers are the incurable beneficiaries of the State. But there are many exceptions to this rule; and it not unfrequently occurs, in all classes of curable patients, that when the person begins to work we feel a full assurance that he will be restored to mental health: and this assurance is rarely falsified.”

Dr. Bemis, speaking of the same thing, says, in his last Report :—

“About sixty per cent. of the patients perform some labor, directed and assisted by their attendants, and about twenty per cent. labor to advantage, under the direction of their attendants, without assistance. A very large proportion of the females are employed during some part of each day, at labor of some description. The males suffer from the want of those light employments which are so convenient and useful to females, and having been bred only to labor of a rougher character, are, when insane, little inclined to form any new habits useful to themselves or others.

“All labor done by the inmates of the hospital is of an unsteady, unreliable nature, requires constant oversight, direction and assistance, and is of a quality which few employers would be willing to purchase at any price.”

The experience of Dr. Choate is understood to be to the same effect.

II.—THE STATE PAUPER ESTABLISHMENTS.

The Rainsford Island Hospital.

The small number of patients in this establishment since October 1, 1866, is due to the fact that, by the operation of the Sick Law of 1865, the admissions were so much reduced that a year ago the Hospital was closed by order of the Governor. There has been no occasion since to re-open it, nor has the want of it been felt. The money expended, (nearly $5,000,) was chiefly for expenses incurred before January 1, 1867; the whole amount expended since that time being but about $1,500. The appropriation for 1867 was $10,000, of which nearly $8,000 will remain unexpended. The average annual expenditure at Rainsford for some years having been $25,000, there is this year a saving of at least $20,000 at that establishment. The number of patients being so few, it was not thought expedient to carry out the division for average cost by the week in the Tables.

The Tewksbury State Almshouse.

This Almshouse, under the action of recent laws and the policy of your Board, has become the chief receiving station for the State poor. At the same time, the insane at Bridgewater have been nearly all transferred to Tewksbury, while many have been sent in by the towns.

The Insane at Tewksbury.

The whole number of insane at Tewksbury October 1, 1866, was 145; a year later it was 248. The average number during the year has probably been 200.

As the condition and treatment of this class of persons (for the most part incurable and harmless,) is now of interest to many persons, let me quote from the Report of the Physician, Dr. Wakefield, some account of what has been done:—

“The insane asylum connected with this institution was informally opened for the reception of females in July, and for males in August, 1866. One hundred and forty-five persons were, by order of the board of state charities bearing date October 1st, 1866, transferred from the almshouse proper to the asylum for harmless insane persons, when it was formally opened. Of these, seventy-four were males and seventy-one females. Eighty-three resided in the new building—thirty-eight males and forty-five females. Forty-nine were detailed for labor—thirty-two males and seventeen females—and were domiciled among the inmates of the almshouse. Eight—two males and six females—unable to labor, were detailed for residence, and remained with the inmates of the almshouse, while five—two males and three females—were detailed for treatment in the hospitals of the sick. This was the number and the division of the inmates at the opening of this department of the institution. Nineteen of these had been transferred to Tewksbury from Bridgewater, Monson and the insane hospitals, in the months of July, August and September, during which the asylum had been in operation informally. This would leave one hundred and twenty-six as the number of insane that was in the almshouse July 1st, 1866. There are no data by which can be ascertained the number of insane here from time to time prior to this date. For the last three or four years, the number has probably varied from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five. The number of deaths among the insane last year was thirty-six. The number reported in 1865 was twenty-six, and in 1864 was eleven. There was no separate record kept of the insane, and no reports of their deaths have been made prior to 1864.

“Of the thirty-seven discharged, one was returned to the insane hospital at Worcester, not because he was not incurable, but because he was not harmless. Two were sent to Taunton hospital, being recent cases. Two were taken by overseers of the poor to the cities where they belonged. Eight were discharged because they no longer needed the restraints of a hospital, or were so far restored as to be enabled to procure their own living. Eight were sent out of the State as not being subjects legitimately belonging to the Commonwealth to support, while sixteen have been taken away by their friends."

Twenty-five of these came from the insane hospitals of the State or the other State almshouses since the asylum was informally opened, and all but two died of debility, phthisis and atrophy, which diseases are the most fatal among this class of patients.

The General Mortality at Tewksbury.

In connection with this mortality among the insane, it will be well to see what has been the general mortality there. Concerning this and its antecedent disease, Dr. Wakefield gives these facts:—

"The buildings formerly occupied by the boys and girls as workshops have been transformed into hospitals and answer a very good purpose. They were opened about the first of January last. By this addition the more acute cases have been provided for away from the other inmates of the institution. The large increase in the number of our chronic cases rendered it necessary that more ample accommodations should be provided for the sick. The average weekly number on the sick list last year was one hundred and fifty-three. The average weekly number since the institution was opened has been one hundred and fifty-seven, while the average weekly number this year is two hundred and six, which is an increase of more than twenty-five per cent. The whole number of admissions to the hospital since its opening is twenty thousand two hundred and twenty-eight, which is an average of one thousand four hundred and forty-four admissions per annum. There have been admitted to the hospital for treatment this year one thousand eight hundred and sixty cases, and there have been two hundred and sixty deaths,—males one hundred and sixty-two, females ninety-eight. This is the largest number of admissions to the hospital, and it is also the largest number of deaths that has occurred in any year, while the ratio is slightly diminished from that of last year, and but six-tenths in excess of the average mortality since the institution was opened.

It will be noticed that the deaths of infants are but 45 this year, instead of 76, the number a year ago, while the whole number of deaths, under five years old, is but 58. This is owing in part to the smaller average number of infant children retained in the Almshouse, many of this class being sent with their mothers to Bridgewater. Yet, as the number of births has been but six less at Tewksbury than in 1865-6, the decrease in deaths doubtless indicates that means have been found to give infants a better chance of life. The great change has been in retaining the mothers, under sentence, so that they could not abandon their children; but there has also been an improvement in the care of such as had no mothers to provide for them. The interest taken by Dr. Wakefield in these cases has led to a decrease of mortality,—a most gratifying fact.

At Bridgewater, as we shall presently see, a similar change for the better has taken place. At Monson, the new Hospital will furnish means for like improvement in the condition of infants as well as of invalids.

The increased number of deaths at Tewksbury is owing to the fact that fewer able-bodied persons are now retained there than was formerly the case. Concerning this matter the Superintendent speaks as follows, in his Report:—

“The change in our population is due to the method of classification adopted by the Board of State Charities, and put in force somewhat over one year ago. Under this, 261* persons of vicious or doubtful character have been removed to the State Workhouse at Bridgewater, under sentences ranging from six months to three years; 179 children including a few adults,—mostly the mothers of the children,—have been transferred to the State Primary School at Monson, that the latter might receive a course of instruction before being placed in suitable homes; and three unruly insane have been transferred to Taunton or Worcester. In return we have received from Bridgewater and Monson 223 inmates, nearly every one of whom were defective in mind or body; in fact, the pitiable survivors of all the imbecility and misery which had for many years accumulated in those institutions; and from the three State lunatic hospitals 71 patients pronounced fitting subjects for our asylum, as being harmless and incurable. The area of admission has also been enlarged, many towns in Norfolk and Worcester Counties now sending their State paupers hither, instead of to Monson and Bridgewater. And in future we shall be expected to accommodate all the classes named from the above five institutions, besides the applicants from a largely increased territory. It will be seen at once that our permanent number must be considerably larger, while in any business panic or sudden emergency, we might be put to great inconvenience by the incoming crowd. To obviate this possible risk, to effect the classification as promptly as possible, and also to cause the immediate removal of those belonging elsewhere than in Massachusetts, the Board of Charities has stationed at Tewksbury one of its examining officers, who investigates and reports thereon to his superiors each case as it arrives. A suitable room has been prepared and furnished for the use of that Board and its officers, and this arrangement will be in the future, as experiment has proved it in the past, effectual and economical. Should our inmates still increase too rapidly, the Board has several hundred beds at its disposal at Rainsford Island, which are held in reserve for any such emergency.”

* Only 256 of whom were received at Bridgewater.

THE STATE OF THINGS AT TEWKSBURY.

In consequence of this classification, the disease and mortality at Tewksbury have increased, while diminishing elsewhere, as has been seen by Table XI. The whole number of deaths at Tewksbury since the Almshouse was opened has been 2,703, a yearly average of about 200. The percentage of deaths to cases of disease has been about 13.3; this year it is 13.9; the previous year it was 14.2. Among the insane, the percentage of deaths to the whole number has been 15.2; much higher than in the State Hospitals, but probably no higher than among the same class of persons there.

Schools, Labor, etc., at Tewksbury.

By the establishment of the Primary School at Monson, the number of children of the school age at Tewksbury has been greatly reduced. Only one school-room has been occupied during the past year, and the average number of pupils in that has not exceeded 40, who have been taught by a female teacher, in a satisfactory manner.

For the same reason, the placing of children in families from the Tewksbury Almshouse has nearly ceased. So far as the records show, the whole number of this class since 1855, (previous to which there are no records,) has been 412. These have been sent to 510 places, under the care of 413 heads of families. 51 children have been placed out more than once, the aggregate number of their places being 149. The number of heads of families taking more than one child has been 64; the number of children taken by them being 148.

The Inspectors have recently appointed one of their board a special agent to look after these children, of whom from 100 to 150 are supposed to be still in their places. There is little doubt that the experience of Mr. Fisk, in regard to the children placed in families from Monson, will be repeated in the case of the Tewksbury children.

The productive labor performed by the inmates at Tewksbury is, on the whole, less under the new classification than before, because so many of the able-bodied, or partially able-bodied, are now transferred to Bridgewater, while those who take their places are either invalids, insane or feeble-minded persons. A considerable number of the insane can perform some labor, but not more than three-fifths of the whole, while few even of these can do the work of an able-bodied man or woman. It is believed that the labor required of them benefits their health and facilitates their recovery, so far as they have any chance to recover.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

The cost of supporting the different classes of inmates cannot yet be accurately determined. Probably the very sick are the most costly, and next to them the motherless children. The rate for the support of these two classes cannot be less than $2 per week, and may be more. The insane cost perhaps about that sum, while those suffering from slight ailments, the healthy old people, the partially able-bodied, who can earn something by their labor, cost less than $1.75 per week. The average weekly cost of the whole, according to my computation, is $1.88, and according to Mr. Marsh's, $1.77. Reduced to a gold valuation this is but $1.25 to $1.35 per week, which, all things considered, is a very low rate, and ought not, on the score of humanity, to be much diminished.

The addition to the farm has been of much service, and more land could profitably be purchased or hired.

The Monson Establishment.

Perhaps it is wrong to class the institution at Monson with the State Pauper Establishments, since the Primary School, the pupils of which are no longer paupers, constitutes this year nearly two-thirds of the whole establishment. But, with the unfavorable influences which have prevailed in the management, the Primary School has not risen entirely above the status of a pauper school, and cannot do so till the spirit which inspired the statute shall prevail in its administration. That such will hereafter be the case, I believe.

The School Department.

The most important information concerning the classes under instruction is given by the Principal, Rev. Charles F. Foster, whose capacity for his difficult position has been fully tested during the past year. Mr. Foster says, in his Report:—

THE SCHOOLS AT MONSON.

"There are seven departments of the school. During the past year, the chapel has been divided by a sliding partition, so as to accommodate two schools, and with the doors opened on Sunday it admits of a large audience. New desks and new floors are much needed for these two rooms; in other respects the schools are well provided for.

"The whole number of scholars has been 642. Of these, some remained but a few days, others a few weeks or months, and only 203 who were present October 1, 1866, continued through the year. The number put into families has been larger than usual. The necessary changes in the school, as well as irregularities, owing to sickness and the employment of scholars for working purposes, have brought down the average attendance to 341. Only the common branches of study are pursued. Classes have been formed in grammar and history, but they have not been able to make much progress on account of the frequent removals of the larger scholars. Three remain out of a class of twelve formed one year ago.

"The average age of the children is about nine. Twenty-one have been over fifteen years of age. Most of these, however, are such as have had no previous advantages for study, or such as have been detained here by some physical infirmity. The latter class is numerous and is continually increasing. People who take children into their homes, seek generally only the able-bodied. It follows that our permanent scholars must consist for the most part of the physically disabled. While this affects unfavorably the appearance and condition of the school, we may console ourselves with the thought that an asylum is here provided, and the means of mental improvement furnished for this unfortunate class."

. It will be seen that the whole number of pupils has been but 20 greater than the previous year, although the numbers at Tewksbury and Bridgewater have been much smaller. This indicates that fewer school children find their way into the Almshouses than formerly, which is a good sign. The average attendance at Monson, however, has been so much greater than the previous year, when it was but 265, that the average attendance at the three establishments is little less than in 1865-6.

The Visiting Agency.

The diligent Visiting Agent of your Board has given so full a statement of his work and its results in his Annual Report,*

* See Chapter First of the Supplement, pages 145-161.

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

that I need not go into details concerning them here. I would only say that the good consequences of his labors have far exceeded even the anticipations formed of them. The Commonwealth can now be assured that the poor children, whose guardianship she has assumed, are not given over and neglected so soon as they pass from the shelter of the establishment that received them. The protecting arm of the State now reaches throughout her borders and beyond them, to defend and assist the friendless orphan, formerly too often exposed to fraud and neglect. Even the pecuniary results of the Agency are remarkable. Mr. Fisk has collected for the benefit of the children, or of the State, the sum of $3,478.23 in twelve months, of which more than $2,000 has already been paid to children who had become of age, while more than $1,400, including interest, has been deposited in the Savings Bank for other children. The number of children visited is more than half of those who have gone to places from Monson.

The New Hospital.

For several years the Monson establishment has greatly needed a new Hospital. At the last session of the Legislature all the money asked for to build such a Hospital was readily granted, and it was hoped that it would be ready for occupancy on the first of August. In my opinion it might have been, but the Superintendent, Dr. Brewster, allowed the work to drag along until the appropriation was exhausted; while it is still unfinished, and can hardly be occupied before the first of January. The Inspectors, in their Report, speak of it as follows:—

“A new hospital building has been erected on the hillside, east of the main buildings. It embraces a two-story centre building, thirty-two feet square, with one-story wings running east and west, each sixty feet in length. The centre building is designed for the office of the physician, hospital kitchen, and lodging-rooms for nurses. There are two wards in the male department, and three in the department for females and children. Connected with these are small rooms for patients when very sick, also bath-rooms and other conveniences, which make the new hospital more comfortable than the two now in use. An appropriation of forty-five hundred dollars ($4,500) was made by the last legislature to build the hospital; but that amount will hardly be sufficient to complete it."

Other Improvements at Monson.

Besides the Hospital, other improvements have been made at Monson. New school-rooms have been fitted up, the dining rooms have been made better, play-houses for girls and boys have been put in good order, and the general aspect of the place much bettered. But much still remains to be done.

The Bridgewater Almshouse and Workhouse.

Their Inmates.

Some mention of the Workhouse at Bridgewater has already been made. It is now more important than the Almshouse, which receives few inmates in comparison. Of the Almshouse inmates since the first of January, 1867, many have been infants, whose mothers were sentenced to the Workhouse. Concerning these and their condition, Dr. Sawyer, the Physician, writes as follows:—

"During the year, forty children have been born, and twenty-three children under one year of age died, three of whom were foundlings.

"Of eighty children under five years of age who have been in the institution during the past year, twenty-five deaths have occurred, being less than thirty-three per cent. of the whole number; this percentage of deaths compared with that of the same class of inmates occurring in previous years in this, or with those of children of the same age recorded in other institutions, must be very gratifying to a philanthropic public.

"We attribute this improved mortality among the children, first, to the fact, that at no time during the year have we numbered more than about three to four hundred inmates, instead of nearly three times that number as formerly has been the case, which circumstance has done much to secure for us a free circulation of pure air, a thing of vital importance to the life of these children. It seems to us that large numbers in institutions of this character, where cleanliness is so difficult a thing to enforce, must be especially pernicious to children of this tender age, if not to those of maturer years.

"In speaking of the advantage which, in our opinion, has come to the children from the small numbers here the past year, we would not pass over those other advantages which have arisen to this class from the present system of sentencing the mothers for a fixed term, making it of no advantage to them to be freed from the care of their offspring, and preventing them from taking their children away with them, perhaps soon to be returned to this or some similar institution, where they may die from exposure endured after being given up to the care of the mother. The mothers themselves have been no freer from diseases of their own choosing, which so often prove the death of their infants, during this than during former years. On the contrary, the records of this, compared with those of the previous year, show an increase of thirteen per cent. of venereal diseases, the greater part of which are among the females, and the deaths from this cause alone, are fourfold those from the same cause in the preceding year.

PART IV.]

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. I.

"By reference to Table No. 3, it will be seen that of the forty births the past year, thirty-eight were illegitimate children. Of these, twenty-one died, being fifty-five per cent. of all the illegitimate children born during the year.

"But few cases of foundlings and deserted children have been entered the past year, owing doubtless in a measure, to the fact that the class of mothers most liable to desert their children, are by the present system not allowed their 'discharge,' but made to have proper care over them."

The Superintendent, Mr. Goodspeed, speaks to the same effect in his Report. He says:—

"The light mortality in the infant department is no doubt greatly owing to the law now in force, detaining the mothers, whereas by the old system of admitting and discharging, the mothers of these infants, after obtaining their discharge, would not unfrequently leave them to the charity of the public, to be returned to the almshouse, where their chances of living would be very small after the exposure incident to desertion. In this particular, most certainly, the present system is doing a great good, for while it furnishes better care for these little ones than it was possible to before without law, it is believed the number of births of illegitimate children will be lessened by the operation of the present classification law."

Schools, Labor, etc., at Bridgewater.

No schools are now kept inside the Almshouse at Bridgewater. The reason why appears from the following statement:—

THE STATE PAUPER ESTABLISHMENTS.

“The very small number of children of suitable age to attend school now here has made it necessary to discontinue the schools in the house, and provide instruction elsewhere for the few temporary scholars admitted from time to time, which has been done at the district public school in the immediate vicinity of the institution.”

The labor of the inmates of the Workhouse has not been so thoroughly organized as to pay a profit, or even to support the inmates, as is the case in some prisons to which persons of this class are sent. Nor is it likely that their earnings will, for the present, at least, be equal to their expenses. The great majority are women, of whom many are in feeble health, while not a few of the men are disabled for steady work by their course of life. But the labor of the sentenced persons is, on the whole, so much more available than that of Almshouse inmates, that even with a smaller average number, as much work can be done on the farm, and more in the work rooms than formerly, thus diminishing the cost of their support.

The building and the repairs necessary for the uses of the Workhouse have been carried along rapidly and with good economy; presenting, in both respects, a striking contrast to the case of the Monson establishment. Whatever the hand of Mr. Goodspeed finds to do is done with his might; and he is no less watchful for the State's interests than for his own.

The Four Pauper Establishments.

As already stated, Rainsford Island Hospital is closed, awaiting an emergency such as to require its re-opening.

A few general remarks will be in place concerning the three other establishments; and first, the gradual and constant decrease in the number of inmates.

On the 1st of October, 1865, there were 1,779 inmates. This number steadily grew till the 10th of February, 1866, when there were 2,134 inmates; it then diminished steadily till the 22d of September, 1866, when it was but 1,591; then slowly rising again, on the 26th of January last it stood at 1,949, including 69 in the Workhouse. At no time since has it been so large, and it does not seem probable that the number will this year rise above 2,000 at any time.

The causes of this diminution of State Paupers, as have been said, are various. The passage of the Military Settlement Law, and of the law forbidding certain sick persons to be removed from their place of residence, has had a great effect; so, too, has the new State Aid Law. Co-operating with these have been the diligence of your Board in removing persons to their place of settlement, and, of late, the fear of the vicious poor that they would be sentenced to the new Workhouse.

This fear extends also to the honest poor, and often prevents them from entering a State Almshouse, when they ought to go there. In such cases it works no little hardship; but the choice is between this and too lax an administration which would leave the door open to many abuses.

The character of the offences for which a sentence to the State Workhouse is imposed, is so undefined in the common apprehension, and some of them have been of late years so lightly punished, that there may sometimes appear to be too great severity in the penalty for what many would deem a venial matter. For example, a young woman is seduced, and gives birth to an illegitimate child in the State Almshouse, whither she has taken refuge to avoid the notice of her family or friends. If she is complained of and sentenced to Bridgewater, many will say that she has been harshly treated. But a little consideration will convince us that this is not so. She has violated more than one of the laws of Commonwealth, as well as that law of God which forbids unchastity in women. She has given birth to a child whose welfare the State is bound to secure, but whom her course of life, if she is left at liberty, will expose to great risk of suffering and death. A short term of imprisonment at Bridgewater secures her from the temptation of evil companions, at least for a while, and makes it impossible for her to desert her infant if she should be so inclined. Moreover, it increases the chance of ascertaining the father of the child, and obliging him to do his duty towards it. Sentences of this kind then, though they may at first seem severe, often result in saving the mother from further shame and suffering, saving the child from death, and saving the State from the burden of unnecessary pauperism. It is necessary, no doubt, that there should be a careful examination of the facts in each case, and that the pardoning power should be readily used to correct mistakes and prevent injustice.

Most of the persons sentenced to the Workhouse, however, have been those whose reputation and offences were such that no one could doubt they came clearly under the terms of the law. Confirmed vagrants, drunkards and harlots, idle and vagabond persons who have lived for years on public alms,—these are of just that class for which Workhouses were established. The honest poor will soon find out that they are in no danger from measures taken only with regard to the worthless, and, though they will always, it is to be hoped, dread the Alms-house, they will not have an unreasonable repugnance to it.

III.—THE JUVENILE REFORMATORIES.

The State Reform School at Westborough.

The most important event in the affairs of this institution during the past year has been the resignation of the Superintendent, Mr. Joseph A. Allen, and the appointment of Mr. Orville K. Hutchinson, for many years the Assistant-Superintendent, to succeed him. Mr. Allen resigned in the latter part of April, after having held the office of Superintendent for six years and upwards, with much credit to himself and much benefit to the School.

His term of office was longer than that of any of his predecessors, and, on the whole, more satisfactory to the Trustees and to the public. In some respects I considered his management of the affairs of the institution unsuccessful, and did not hesitate to communicate this opinion to those interested, and to himself. But it has always seemed to me that he had the good of his pupils at heart; that he labored for them with fidelity, and that he had much success in some of the most difficult tasks of a very difficult position. His resignation, it is understood, was occasioned by an irreconcilable difference of opinion between himself and a majority of the Trustees, which made it impossible that he should continue longer to hold the office. One of the points of difference undoubtedly had reference to religious faith and observances; but this, it is probable, would have been overlooked, (as it should have been,) but for other causes of disagreement. These appear to have been matters of opinion and of temperament, affecting the general management of the institution, but not reflecting in any degree upon the integrity or the humanity of Mr. Allen. His successor has made, as yet, few changes in the general discipline of the School, but has improved, in some details, upon the former state of things. It remains to be seen whether the acknowledged and inherent defects in the institution, (in most respects so worthy of praise,) will or can be completely removed. Mr. Hutchinson has the advantage of long experience and an intimate acquaintance with the School; his views are in accord with those of a majority of the Trustees, and there is reason to hope much good from his administration.

Except for a slight increase in the earnings of the pupils, a considerable reduction in the net expenses, and a more rapid discharge of pupils, the record of this institution, in respect to its other affairs, would be much the same as last year.

The State Industrial School at Lancaster.

The Lancaster School has gone on, much as usual, during the past year. Its number of pupils has occasionally been greater than ever before; but the average number for the year remains about the same. The current expenses have increased, so that the average weekly cost of a girl at Lancaster is this year about the same as of a boy at Westborough.

• The Massachusetts Nautical School.

This is the new name imposed by law on the School Ships, which are no longer a branch of the Reform School at Westborough, but have a separate existence in law as well as in fact. The School itself is still established on board two ships,

INSTITUTIONS AIDED BY THE STATE.

—the George M. Barnard, lying in Boston harbor, and the Massachusetts, at New Bedford. Of the two, the former usually has the most pupils; but the Massachusetts ships more boys to sea than the other. No important alteration in the arrangement or discipline of the pupils has been made since my last Report. The annual expenses, however, are much larger than ever before, being, according to the Superintendent's estimate, $54,800.38, against $45,000 in 1866, and $35,000 in 1865. My own estimate this year, makes the expenses $58,000, against $42,000 a year ago; allowance being made for something more than $2,000 belonging to the accounts of 1866, but included in the expenses of 1867. I have also taken into account the diminished inventory, which increases the annual cost. The average weekly cost for each pupil is not much more than last year, and by the Superintendent's estimate, is even less.

CHAPTER II.—THE INSTITUTIONS AIDED BY THE STATE.

THEIR NUMBER AND CHARACTER.

These are at present eleven in number, being the same as last year, with the addition of the New England Female Moral Reform Society. Their names are as follows, in order of the date of their establishment, and with the amount of the appropriation made for the calendar year, 1867 :—

Perhaps there should be added to these appropriations the sum of $3,000, given by the State in aid of the education of deaf mutes, at an earlier period than was provided for by the laws before the Clarke Institution at Northampton was established. The greater part of this sum will be paid for the education of State pupils at Northampton, so that the whole cost to the State of educating deaf mutes in 1867, is likely to be about $21,000, or $1,000 more than is paid for teaching the blind. With this addition, however, the aggregate sum is less than in 1866, by nearly $2,000.

Eight of the above named institutions are in the city of Boston.

(1.) The Massachusetts General Hospital.

Having received no report from this institution, I can present no information in regard to it. Its Annual Report is usually printed in February.

(2.) The Hartford Asylum.

The Board of Education having been intrusted with the supervision of the deaf mute children taught at Hartford and elsewhere at the expense of the State, I need not make any special statement concerning this Asylum. On a subsequent page I shall speak of the number of deaf mutes in Massachusetts, and may have occasion to refer to the Asylum.

HISTORY OF THE EYE AND EAR INFIRMARY.

with the law of 1867. From an article in the newspapers, which appears to represent the facts correctly, I have gathered the following statement relating to the treatment of diseases of the eye, and to the origin and history of this particular charity:—

“The study of the eye and its various forms of disease did not claim the attention of scientific men for years, whilst other branches of medicine advanced with rapid strides. It is now a hundred years since an interest was awakened in this branch of medical science which in 1773 resulted in the setting aside of certain wards in the General Hospital of Vienna, for the treatment of patients suffering from ophthalmic disease, and the clinical instruction of students in this department of medicine. In the year 1804 this example was followed in Great Britain, in the establishment of the London Eye Infirmary, which, six years later, was opened to students. To this school were drawn young American physicians, then pursuing their studies abroad; and to the interest in this subject awakened in their minds is due the inception of similar enterprises in this country. From this resulted the foundation of the Eye Infirmary in New York by Drs. Delafield and Rodgers, in 1821.

“The honor of the first impulse given to the systematic treatment of diseases of the eye among the poor of Boston, is due to our venerable fellow-townsmen and present trustee, Dr. Edward Reynolds. He, in connection with Dr. John Jeffries, established, in November, 1824, the first gratuitous clinique in this city. Furnished with limited means, and commencing with a single room, the benefits conferred by their labors were nevertheless strikingly apparent. Eighteen months later, at a meeting convened for the purpose, a report of their proceedings was considered; and so impressed were those present with the humanity and success of the enterprise, that a subscription was at once undertaken to give it permanency. This was promptly responded to; and in March, 1826, at a meeting of subscribers, the institution was regularly organized under the name of the Boston Eye Infirmary, and a board of managers appointed. In February of the following year it was incorporated by the legislature of the State, under the name of the Massachusetts Charitable Eye and Ear Infirmary. During the following ten years its locality was thrice changed, the last removal being to the Gore Mansion house in Green Street, where with increased accommodations and facilities, it not only enlarged its sphere of usefulness to the suffering, but threw open its doors to medical students, and established a course of lectures. It thus imparted a new impetus to the study of diseases of the eye, and, through its pupils, spread its benefits far and wide. For fourteen years the institution continued its good work in Green Street; the number of its patients steadily increasing, until, in 1850, nearly twenty-five thousand patients had received relief. Before this date it was found indispensable to again increase its capacity, or allow many applicants to suffer for want of assistance. The State and private individuals again came forward to its support; and in 1850 the present building on Charles Street was ready for occupation. During the last seventeen years, the increasing number of patients has vouched for the continued and still increasing usefulness of the institution. From November, 1824, to May, 1850, a period of twenty-six years, the whole number of applicants for relief amounted to 24,339; from May, 1850, to October, 1867, a period of seventeen years, the number has increased by 47,797. Thus, during the last seventeen years, the number of patients was about double that of the preceding twenty-six years. The total, as already mentioned in the beginning of this report, amounts to 72,136 persons, whose names are found recorded on our books. The last exhibits a larger number than any previous year; showing the rate of applications to be still on the increase, and that the poorer classes are fully awake to the value of the institution, and disposed to avail themselves of its charity.

"The number of beds in the infirmary is thirty-nine; nineteen being devoted to males, and twenty to females. Half of these are free; the remainder pay the nominal board of three dollars a week, fixed many years ago. In no instance, however, is an urgent case refused gratuitous admission, when it can be accommodated."

A Table near the end of this chapter will give some additional information in regard to this institution.

(4.) The Blind Asylum.

For the past two years I am now able to exhibit an imperfect analysis of the finances of this Institution. For various reasons it is impossible to compare the returns strictly with those of the ten institutions already tabulated, although they are made on blanks uniform with those sent to the State Institutions. Indeed, for most purposes, both this establishment and the Idiot School may be regarded as State Institutions.

REMARKS ON THE PRECEDING TABLE.

To explain why the Receipts and Expenditures do not balance each other, even with the addition of the cash on hand, it should be said that the liabilities of previous years are not all reckoned in the Expenditures. The Receipts for 1866, were $50,917.25; the expenses, $39,821.25; the cash on hand, $1,954.87; previous liabilities, $8,843.53 for Construction.

The Receipts for 1867 appear to be $44,606.66; the Expenditures $41,865.55; and the cash on hand October 1, 1867, $2,741.11.

Ever since the first of October, 1863, the annual expenses of the Blind Asylum have been largely increased, as at most other institutions, and have generally exceeded the regular receipts. As well as can now be ascertained, the whole amount of current expenses in these four years has been $152,685.38, which would give an average of about $38,000 in each year. During the same period a large sum has been paid for construction and extraordinary repairs; probably about $30,000.

The Resources and Liabilities this year reported include those of the Workshop as well as of the Asylum proper.

Temporary Superintendent of the Blind Asylum.

During the absence of Dr. Howe in Europe, Dr. Edward Jarvis, who has long been familiar with the Blind Asylum, became temporarily its Superintendent, and for six or seven months managed its affairs, as he did also those of the Idiot School, of which he may claim to have been one of the founders.

(5.) The New England Female Moral Reform Society.

This organization has existed for some thirty years, but has, for the first time, received aid from the State this year. It has connected with it an establishment known as the Temporary Home, in Kneeland Street, Boston, and it also maintains an Employment office, and publishes a monthly journal. It devotes itself to the prevention and reformation of unchastity in women, and, for this purpose, furnishes employment and provides temporary shelter for poor and friendless women in the city. Its operations are not very extensive, so far as I can learn, but they are useful in their limited sphere, and perhaps can be properly aided by the State. The amount granted this year is but $600.

(6.) The Agency for Discharged Convicts.

It is now twenty-two years since the State has annually appropriated a small amount in aid of convicts when discharged from prison. To this is added the amount contributed by a private society for the same object, and the whole is expended under the direction of an agent appointed by the Governor. This agent at present is Captain Daniel Russell; the amount appropriated by the State is $1,800, of which, during the year ending September 30, 1867, there have been expended $1,705.66, for the relief of 182 persons. Probably no money serves a better purpose than this, and if the appropriation were doubled, and more active exertions made to prevent a relapse into crime of those who leave the county prisons, it would be still better.

The following Table, (XIII.,) gives a view of the finances of this school for two years:—

In reporting to the Trustees upon the condition of this School, Dr. Jarvis has taken occasion to present some valuable statistics which may, in part, be quoted here. He says that during the nineteen years since the School was opened there have been 429 applications for admission.

The Finances of the School.

By the financial statement given on a preceding page, the Receipts for the Idiot School are $26,833.63, while the Expenditures only foot up $15,804.92; leaving an apparent balance of cash on hand of $11,028.71. It appears, however, that the cash really on hand is but $687.10; leaving more than $10,000 to be accounted for. The return from which this table is made up states that $8,700 of the receipts were from loans, and that $1,200 is still due to the bank. The Annual Report states that $9,121.92 of the debt had been paid. This still leaves more than $1,000 unaccounted for. And in explanation of some features of it, it appears, by the reports of Dr. Jarvis and Mr. May the Treasurer, that there were debts of the institution on the 1st of October, 1866, amounting to $2,789.09, besides an indefinite amount of outstanding claims. Adding to this debt the sums borrowed since ($8,700,) we have an aggregate debt of $11,438.09. The payments of money borrowed and interest in the same period have been $9,121.92, leaving, apparently a debt of $2,317.17, besides outstanding bills, on the 1st of October, 1867. But, according to Dr. Jarvis, this debt is much smaller, while the outstanding bills are more than offset by bills due the Institution. He says:—

“At the present time, the Treasurer owes a note to the Globe Bank of twelve hundred dollars, ($1,200.) He has in his hands six hundred and seventy-four dollars and ninety-six cents, ($674.96.) Balance against the treasury, five hundred and twenty-five dollars and ninety-six cents, ($525.96.) This "balance in favor" supposes that all the accounts on both sides had been settled, which is by no means the case. But since the first of October, the receipt of $3,750 from the State Treasury has enabled the institution to pay all its debts. It is very desirable to avoid contracting others; but this can only be done, it is probable, through an increased State appropriation.

Change of Location:

It was suggested in my Report last year, that the Idiot School ought to be removed from South Boston into the country.

This question is likely to become a practical one this year, for the Trustees seem to have decided, instead of using the

INSTITUTIONS AIDED BY THE STATE.

$7,000 granted them last spring for building a hospital, to do nothing at present, but to make application to the next Legislature for an appropriation of $15,000. I trust the grant will be made only on condition that the present land and buildings shall be sold and a new establishment built somewhere in the country. I will not dwell on the arguments for such a change; but, with this suggestion, will leave the question in your hands.

(8.) The Washingtonian Home.

This establishment has lost the services of Dr. Albert Day, the efficient Superintendent in former years, who resigned last May to take charge of the New York State Asylum for Inebriates, at Binghamton. His successor, Mr. Lawrence, is zealous and apparently successful in carrying on the work of the Home, which is one of the most interesting and beneficial of all our public establishments.

(9.) The Discharged Soldiers' Home.

The operations of this institution have been somewhat curtailed during the past year by the fact that the State has appropriated only $10,000 for its expenses instead of $20,000 as formerly. This reduction was made because it was thought that the State Aid Law, (in addition to the provision made by the General Government in the form of pensions, and with the opening of the national asylums for disabled soldiers,) would furnish nearly all the pecuniary aid needed by this class of beneficiaries. In consequence of this reduction of the appropriation, those inmates who were receiving pensions were mostly discharged last June, and the great majority of those admitted since have been entitled neither to pensions nor to State Aid. It is found by experience that there is a considerable number thus left unprovided for, to whom this Home is a suitable refuge. Death and recovery are constantly lessening this number, but until it shall be considerably diminished it will be best to maintain the establishment, perhaps with a still smaller appropriation from the State. It is now dependent almost wholly upon the State for its support, although the interest taken in it by the benevolent persons who first established it, and others, does much to increase its usefulness and something to lessen its cost.

The building now occupied has been sold by the city of Boston to another charitable society, (the Old Men's Home), with the understanding that it should continue to be used for its present purpose a reasonable time longer, or until needed for occupancy by the purchasers. It is not improbable that the latter may wish to enter into possession in the coming year, in which case another location must be found for the discharged soldiers.

The statistics of this and the other institutions named in this chapter will be given in a table on a subsequent page.

(10.) The Temporary Asylum at Dedham.

The fourth Annual Report of this establishment has been made, and some of its results can there be read. It is managed with economy, and with such efficiency as experience has taught the benevolent ladies who control it. As the first of a group of Refuges for female prisoners, I have regarded it with great interest, and have taken pleasure in commending it to the notice of the Legislature; looking upon such establishments as a necessary part of our prison system, and as perhaps the most available means for the reformation of the criminal. In the decrease of crime among women, there will be less apparent need of them; yet it will be long, I fear, before we can receive persons enough in them to make their influence widely felt throughout the State.

The attention of the managers has been directed to some of the defects of our present penal system, and to the need of improving prison discipline. They desire some legislation that shall make it easier to control and protect friendless girls, who now, in too many instances, enter upon and remain in a life of crime from which they might be saved. Precisely what measures they have in mind, I have not learned, but their suggestions are worthy the consideration of your Board and of the Legislature. I could wish that the long needed revision of our penal and prison laws might this year be commenced.

INSTITUTIONS AIDED BY THE STATE.

(11.) The Home for the Friendless at Springfield.

A small amount, ($2,000,) has for two years been granted in aid of a similar Refuge at Springfield. In one respect, the plan of this establishment differs from that at Dedham; the inmates at Springfield not being exclusively discharged prisoners, but including children and indigent women who have no other home. It is not desirable that this mixture should long continue, since, in my opinion, the managers of the Springfield Refuge will find that they will have need of all their room, and all their resources, for the vicious persons whose cases are brought to their notice. But should they decide to continue their present arrangement, and ask for aid from the Legislature, it ought still to be granted.

STATISTICS OF INSTITUTIONS AIDED BY THE STATE.

An Act of the present year, (Chapter 243,) was intended to secure uniformity in the reports made to the State authorities by those private societies and institutions to which a grant of money is made by the General Court. This Act is as follows:—

[CHAP. 243.]

AN ACT concerning Reports of Private Charitable Institutions.

Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

SECT. 1. Every private society or institution for charitable purposes when aided by a grant of money from the state treasury, shall cause to be annually prepared and forwarded to the board of state charities, a report of all its proceedings, income and expenditures, properly classified for the year ending on the thirtieth day of September; which report shall state the sum appropriated by the state, the sum expended under said appropriation, the whole number and the average number of beneficiaries, the number and salary of officers and employees, and such other information as the board of state charities may require.

SECT. 2. The report provided for in the preceding section may be either in writing or in print. If in writing, it shall be sent in to the board of state charities on or before the fifteenth day of October, and if in print, on or before the first day of November in each year; and for the present year shall be held to apply to all appropriations made or expenses incurred between the thirtieth day of September in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-six, and the thirtieth day of September in the year eighteen hundred and sixty-seven.

SECT. 3. This act shall take effect upon its passage. [Approved May 16, 1867.]

Very few of the institutions to which this law applies have this year made their reports as here prescribed. The Eye and Ear Infirmary, of which the annual reports have heretofore been difficult of access, and often greatly delayed, this year seems to have made its report to the editors of one of the city newspapers. Up to the present time, (December 18th,) no report from this establishment has been received at the office of the Board; and the statements copied on a previous page were taken, at the risk of error, from the columns of the newspaper above mentioned. In several other instances, the reports have been made for some other period than that prescribed in the Act; one institution, with a singular precision of error, closing its accounts on the 18th instead of the 30th of September. Others have omitted important particulars; and so I have been compelled, with much trouble and delay, to make up an imperfect statement from such means as were at hand. Another year will doubtless witness an improvement in this respect; but, until a penalty for violating this law is assigned, it will be violated every year through somebody's neglect. If the State Treasurer were required not to pay out any money after the first of September to these institutions, until they produced a certificate that their reports had been made, according to law, there would be less delay and neglect in this matter.

Allow me here again to call your attention to the importance of requiring all private charitable and educational societies to report to the State authorities annually the condition of their funds and the nature of their expenditures. The good of the public demands that there should be somewhere a yearly statement of these things, and there is no valid objection to such a requirement.

The following Table, (XIII.,) furnishes such facts as could be gathered with any uniformity respecting the eight institutions named therein. The Massachusetts General Hospital declined to send in any report, and the Hartford Asylum, being without the State, was not amenable to the law.

I have received other information concerning these institutions, from which I gather the following statistics :—

The Eye and Ear Infirmary has relieved, in 43 years, .	72,186	beneficiaries.
In the last year,	8,918	"
The Washingtonian Home has relieved, in 10 years, .	2,519	"
In the last year,	322	"
The Discharged Soldiers' Home has relieved, in 5 years, .	3,233	"
In the last year,	801	"
The Temporary Asylum has relieved, in 3 years, .	162	"
In the last year,	50	"
The Home for the Friendless has relieved, in 2 years, .	100	"
In the last year,	58	"

The total expenses of the Blind Asylum, in Table XIII., are made up so as to include $5,606.88, expenditures incurred but not paid in 1866; but excluding $2,411.08 for similar liabilities in 1867. The expenses for 1866, made up in the same way, would have been $39,821.25; the current expenses for 1866, $36,659.37. The current expenses for 1867 would be $39,525.01; for the two years, $76,184.38, according to this calculation.

SUMMARY OF PART FOURTH.

From what precedes it will be seen, by examination and comparison, that the State owns ten Establishments (besides the Charlestown Prison,) including twelve distinct Institutions; that the valuation of them comes nearly up to two millions of dollars; that their actual cost in money drawn from the State Treasury for Current Expenses is about $400,000; their whole cost to the State about $420,000; and their whole cost to the community a little less than $550,000; exclusive, in all cases, of the interest on the cost of their construction ($2,500,000,) which would increase these several amounts by about $150,000; that the whole number of their inmates has been between 7,500 and 8,000 persons, and the average number a little upwards of 3,600. If we add the Charlestown Prison to the list, the actual cost to the States is diminished by about $21,000 without interest, and increased by about the same amount if interest is reckoned; while the average number of inmates is increased to nearly 4,200. Of these, however, only about 3,600 are chargeable to the State for support.

It also appears that there are eleven Societies or Institutions aided by the State, at an expense for the year ending September 30, 1867, of a little more than $88,000.* The whole cost in money drawn from the Treasury during the year for Current Expenses of both classes of institutions, is therefore about $490,000, or, including the Charlestown Prison, $470,000; while the actual cost to the State has been a little above $500,000, or, including interest on the cost, about $650,000.

In Part Fifth it will be seen that the cities and towns pay more than this sum for an average number considerably less.

* No account is here taken of the Clarke Institution for Deaf Mutes, which was organized in July, 1867, and is aided by the State, but has drawn no money as yet from the Treasury.

NEW LAW CONCERNING RETURNS.

THE PAUPER RETURNS.

CHAPTER I.—PAUPER RECORDS AND RETURNS.

The law of 1864, (Chap. 307,) by virtue of which the material for the Annual Pauper Abstract has been collected, was this year modified so as to read as follows, (Chap. 209:)

[CHAP. 209.]

AN ACT concerning Records and Returns from the Overseers of the Poor.

Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

SECT. 1. It shall be the duty of overseers of the poor in all the cities and towns of this Commonwealth to keep full and accurate records of the paupers fully supported, the persons relieved and partially supported, the travellers and vagrants lodged at the expense of said cities and towns, together with the amount paid for such support and relief.

SECT. 2. Such annual returns of the number, sex, place of settlement, place and cost of support, sanity and temperance of the persons supported and relieved by towns and cities, and such other particulars concerning them as may be required by the board of state charities, shall be made by the overseers of the poor to the secretary of said board on or before the twentieth day of October in each year, and shall relate to the year ending on the thirtieth day of September preceding.

SECT. 3. If the overseers of any town or city shall refuse or neglect to comply with the requirements of this act, said town or city shall forfeit the sum of one dollar for each day's neglect, and the amount of such forfeiture shall be deducted from any sum to which said town or city may be entitled in re-imbursement for relief of state paupers as provided in chapters one hundred and sixty-two of the acts of the year

PART V.]

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

eighteen hundred and sixty-five, and two hundred and thirty-four of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and sixty-six; and in case no such re-imbursement shall be due to said town or city, the forfeiture shall be deducted from any money which may be due such town or city from the state.

SECT. 4. It shall be the duty of the secretary of the board of state charities to prepare tables from the returns thus made, and to report the most important information thus obtained to the board, who shall cause the same to be printed in their annual reports for the use of the legislature.

SECT. 5. Sections six and seven of chapter three hundred and seven of the acts of the year eighteen hundred and sixty-four, and all other acts and parts of acts inconsistent with this act are hereby repealed.

SECT. 6. This act shall take effect upon its passage. [Approved May 4, 1867.]

On the 25th of June last, your Board having prescribed the questions to be answered by Overseers of the Poor, the necessary blanks were sent out with a circular, of which the main part (after quoting the new law,) was as follows:—

“You will please take notice that this Act,—

(1.) Requires the keeping of full records by all towns and cities,—

(2.) Provides for annual returns instead of those heretofore made twice in a year,—

(3.) Leaves the number and character of the questions to be decided from time to time by the Board of Charities,—

(4.) Changes the penalty of the old law to one which can easily be enforced.

(1.) Records. These should of course include, in case of each person, all the particulars of which you make an annual return, and such others as are important in determining the settlement and history of the persons relieved or supported. In the case of State paupers relieved, under the Acts of 1865–6, these records are subject to examination at all times by the General Agent of this Board, who audits all bills for such relief, and a failure to keep sufficient records may cause the forfeiture of the claim against the State. The penalty of the Act will also be incurred by a neglect to keep full and accurate records of town paupers.

INSTRUCTIONS TO OVERSEERS OF THE POOR.

(2.) Annual Returns. These will be made, under the law, in October; and will include returns on the Schedules as well as answers to the General Questions. But you will notice that Schedule II. is to be used no longer, and that the period for annual returns is extended ten days. After the 20th of October, unless some imperative reason for delay shall appear, the penalty of the law will be enforced.

(3.) The Questions. Acting under the second section of the law, the Board of Charities have prescribed the questions, as follows:

The present Schedule I. is to be retained, but to be filled up only once a year. Schedule II. is to be given up, except that part which relates to travellers and persons sent to State Almshouses; but certain questions from Schedule II. will appear on the list of General Questions, the blanks for which are sent herewith. Nos. 3 and 12 of the former Annual Questions are to be given up, and one or two added which are not now found on any schedule. These will readily be noticed in the blank.

By consulting the Tables of Town Paupers in the Appendix to the Annual Report of this Board, you will see what particulars are required to make up these Statistics.

You will please observe that in giving up Schedule II., the overseers are relieved of a great part of the labor of returns; but that the new General Questions cannot be answered without a careful record of many of the facts heretofore noted on Schedule II.

(4.) The Penalty. It is hoped that this will not be incurred by any town. If due, it can and will be collected by stopping so much of the money due from the State to the towns, as is necessary to cover the forfeiture. The days of delay will begin to be counted from noon on the 22d of October, thus allowing two days for mailing."

The General Questions, to be answered annually in October, are as follows:—

in the State, except Webster. Of these towns, 223 occupy and use an Almshouse, mostly owning it, but in a few instances hiring one. A few towns, 6 in all, make use of the Almshouses of other towns; two or three towns own but do not use Almshouses. The number of towns and cities that have no Almshouse and make use of none is about 100.

CHAPTER II.—IN-DOOR AND OUT-DOOR RELIEF IN THE TOWNS AND CITIES.

The customary Tables, to be found in the beginning of the Appendix, will show what has been the number, cost, mode of support, etc., of the poor of the Towns and Cities of this Commonwealth, during the year ending October 1, 1867. It will be noticed that the expenditures for these purposes have been this year about the same as in 1866, amounting, without reckoning interest on the value of the Almshouse property, to upwards of $750,000. Since this valuation is about a million and three-fourths, the addition of interest would make the total cost more than $850,000. The sum first named ($750,000,) is unequally divided between the two principal modes of aiding the poor, namely,—In-Door Relief, or Full Support, and Out-Door Relief, or Partial Support; by far the larger amount being paid for In-Door Relief.

(1.) Full Support, or In-Door Relief.

This is given in various ways and places, but chiefly in three, namely, in the Town Almshouses, in the State and City Lunatic Hospitals, and in private families in the several municipalities. The average number fully supported in Town Almshouses is this year about 3,000; the average number in Hospitals is about 450; the average number fully supported in private families is uncertain, but probably about 550. At all events, the number in Almshouses is considerably more than two-thirds of the whole average number fully supported.

In previous Reports I have spoken of the condition and character of the Town Almshouses. They seem to be gradually improving, although this is by no means true of all of them. They are also increasing in number, though there has been no great change in this respect since 1860. The number of towns in the State steadily increases, but the proportion of these which have Almshouses is somewhat larger this year than ever before.

It will be noticed that the cost of support at the Town Almshouses is this year considerably greater than last year, while the average number fully supported in Almshouses remains about the same. This, of course, increases the average weekly cost; and since the number of acres in the Almshouse farms is about the same, (over 22,000,) and the Valuation considerably advanced, (standing now about $1,800,000,) the average cost with interest added has increased still more. With only about an average population of 3,000, the municipal Almshouses have nearly fifty times as much land connected with them as the State Pauper Establishments with an average population of more than 1,700; while the aggregate Valuation of the latter is only about 38 per cent. of the former, though the average population is at least 57 per cent. The actual cost per week averages more in the Town Almshouses than in those of the State, while the average of comfort is perhaps less, though there is more freedom for the inmates in most of the Town Almshouses, except for those who are insane.

Of the persons fully supported by the towns, whether in Almshouses, Hospitals, or elsewhere, a very great majority have a settlement in the State. Probably of the five or six thousand of this class in the State, less than 500 are unsettled persons, though there may be more whose settlement is in doubt. But, under the Sick Law of 1865, the number of State Paupers in the Town and City Almshouses is somewhat increasing, and a part of the cost for the support of the sick poor of the State appears in the "Expense at Almshouse." A part also appears in the "Expense out of Almshouse," but the total amount probably fails to be included in the total of town expenditures for the support of the poor.

OUT-DOOR RELIEF.

Among those having a settlement in the towns are a great many of foreign birth or extraction, who have complied with the conditions of settlement or have inherited one from their parents. Notwithstanding this, and in spite of the Military Settlement Law, the number of the settled poor in the State does not seem to be increasing at all. Should the State Aid Law be repealed, there would, no doubt, be a considerable addition to the number of paupers having a military settlement.

(2.) Out-Door Relief or Partial Support.

The modes of bestowing this charity are more numerous than the modes of full support. In many cases the applicants receive a fixed sum for every week in the year; in others, only for certain months of the year. Some receive supplies of food, clothing, fuel, etc.; others are relieved by individuals who are re-imbursed by the Overseers, so that the money paid does not go into the hands of the person relieved. Many of those returned as partially supported are at Reform Schools, Prisons or other places where the Overseers pay a part of the cost of their support; and in some cases, the sums paid out to feed and lodge vagrants are included in the expenditure for out-door relief, as well as those paid for the relief of sick State Paupers.

By comparing the Tables in the Appendix with those for 1866, it will be seen that the sums paid for out-door relief are much less than those paid in 1866.

Some attempt has been made by me to ascertain how much of the sums paid, and what proportion of the persons relieved is likely to vary much from year to year, and what proportion is more permanent. From my investigations I conclude that at least three-fifths of the amount expended goes to a class of poor persons as permanent from one year to another as the class of persons fully supported, while the remaining fraction is in the nature of casual relief. The number of persons in the whole State receiving stated out-door relief I estimate at 12,000; the number occasionally receiving it at 8,000; the whole number, excluding duplicates, being less than 23,000.

PART V.]

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. II.

Of the whole sum paid, which probably exceeds $200,000, above $150,000 was probably for stated, and $75,000 for casual out-door relief.

I have this year made special inquiries to ascertain, if possible, how large a number of those receiving out-door relief are unsettled persons. The returns are not so accurate in this matter as could be wished ; but I have no doubt they give what is substantially the fact concerning this subject. They show that of the whole number of those receiving support or relief in the municipalities, the larger part are settled persons. This may not continue to be so for many years, unless farther changes are made in the Law of Settlement ; for while the settled poor of the towns are scarcely increasing at all in number, those without a settlement, especially in the class receiving out-door relief, are increasing very fast. It is desirable to have no more State paupers than is unavoidable, after our Settlement laws have been made as equitable as possible ; every poor person should have a settlement in some municipality, so far as it can be given without injustice. I hope, therefore, that your Board will recommend, and that the Legislature may adopt a further extension of the law of pauper settlement, so as to meet the case of thousands of the honest poor, who are now compelled either to go to the State Almshouse, to refuse all relief, or to be aided in violation of the letter of the law.

(3.) Vagrants or Travelling Paupers.

The returns this year show a slight increase in the number of vagrants lodged at the expense of towns and cities. I estimate the whole number of different persons of this class at 20,000 ; of whom some hundreds are known to be professional tramps. I have a list of such, as, by their habits in this respect, have made themselves liable to imprisonment in the House of Correction ; this list, when carefully revised, will be sent to the Overseers of the Poor in all parts of the State to guard them against being imposed upon by these vagabonds.

Much valuable information concerning the towns' poor can be gathered from the Pauper Abstract, in the Appendix.

GENERAL REMARKS.

PART SIXTH

CHAPTER I.—PAUPERISM.

During the earlier period of my investigations on the subject of Pauperism, it seemed best to confine the attention closely to the facts on which our legislation had been based, and to the practical results of that legislation. It was important to show what was the distinction between paupers of the State and of the towns,—how such a distinction arose and to what it had led. The establishments for the relief of each class were to be described, and some comparison made between them in respect to cost, comfort and efficiency. Having performed this preliminary work, however imperfectly, it remains to consider briefly the principles on which our public relief of the poor depend, and to ascertain what, if anything, can be done to check the growth of Pauperism.

1. Must there always be Public Provision for the Poor?

This question has been negatively answered by some theorists who seem to have conceived a state of society in which either sickness, old age, emigration, orphanage, and other adjuncts of our present social condition are to cease entirely; or the justice and charity of individuals are to act with a constancy, celerity and good judgment which has never yet been witnessed on earth. Far be it from us to discourage the hopes of those who look forward to a better age of the world; such a hope is undoubtedly as just as it generous; but we must be allowed to doubt the coming of a time when disease will not incapacitate, nor age enfeeble, nor emigration produce poverty in the midst of strangers, nor death deprive children of their natural guardians. So long as these things are so, and until private charity has been taught to relieve distress with the same speed and certainty that is seen in the best forms of public almsgiving, the public alms must be given, and all that we can reasonably hope is to reduce them to a minimum.

2. What Proportion of the People are to be Supported at Public Charge?

To reduce this almsgiving to a minimum, two things are essential; first, to reduce the number of the recipients to the lowest figure which justice will permit, and second, to provide for as many of these as can well be done, through private charity. And this involves a knowledge of the condition of Pauperism in Massachusetts, and the proportion of dependent persons to be found in the State.

If we take the present population of Massachusetts as 1,300,000, (which is little enough,) we find that about one in every 130 of that number has been fully supported as a pauper the past year; the average number thus supported being about 6,250, or one in every 208 of the population. Of this average number, about 4,000 are supported by the towns and cities, and about 2,250 by the State.

The number relieved and partially supported, including about 1,400 persons for whom the State has made or will make re-imbursement, is about 23,000, or one in every 56 of the population. The number of vagrants I estimate this year as 20,000,* but, since most of these, probably, would not be included in the census returns, let us take 7,000 as the number of that class properly belonging to Massachusetts. This would be one in every 185 of the whole population; and the whole number supported and relieved would become 40,000, or one in every 32 of the population. Can this proportion be materially reduced?

I believe that it can and ought to be. The number of vagrants can unquestionably be diminished one-half, and probably three-fourths by the use of proper means. Five-sixths of them are men, and more than half are between the ages of 20 and 40,—fully able, in a majority of cases, to earn their own living. They should be compelled to do so, and to cease from their scandalous way of life. The number of those partially supported can also be materially reduced, by finding employment for some, and requiring them to earn what they receive, when it is practicable; by investigating the condition of others, and procuring for them the means of living without recourse to public charity; and by stimulating in all cases, if possible, the benevolence of kindred, friends, neighbors and the community in general, to which the persons needing relief belong. Except in times of great financial distress, it is probable that the number of persons receiving public relief could in this way be reduced from one-third to one-half.

* Whole number, including duplicates, 40,000 and upwards.

PUBLIC PAUPERISM TO BE LESSENED.

Coming now to the class receiving full support, either constantly or for short periods, we find that this is mainly composed, both in the State and the municipal almshouses, of persons who are unable to earn their living. The great majority of them are either old persons, young children or invalids; while of the able-bodied adults, a very great majority are women. The only way in which the support of these persons by the public can be avoided at present, is by finding kindred, friends or benevolent people who will assume their support, or by removing from the State such as do not properly belong here. These are numerous, and are constantly removed by the General Agent of the Board of Charities so fast as they come to his notice, provided he has the means of doing so, and provided it can be done without hardship. But it is impossible to ascertain them all, or to remove all who are known to be improperly here. The General Agent also does much in the way of finding kindred and friends who will support persons otherwise chargeable to the State; and if all the Overseers of the Poor, each in his own municipality, did the same, the number of the towns' poor would be considerably diminished. I estimate that of the 10,000 persons this year fully supported by the State and the municipalities, at least ten per cent. (1,000) could be otherwise provided for, if proper diligence and sagacity were employed to find out their true place and means of support, and to see that they were thereby supported. This would include many persons who are allowed to remain too long in Almshouses and Asylums. The effect of wise measures, diligently pursued in regard to all classes of our paupers, would reduce them, as I believe, from 40,000 to 20,000.

8. Can we Ascertain and Lessen the Causes of Pauperism?

Thus far I have spoken only of practical means for diminishing the aggregate of public pauperism; but these means, even when judiciously employed, would do comparatively little to diminish the actual poverty, incapacity and sickness which create public pauperism. They would do something in that way, and they would transfer the burden to those who ought properly to bear it; but they would not greatly lighten the burden itself. If, however, we could get at the causes of pauperism, and destroy or diminish those, we should find the burden fast disappearing. This would be very desirable; is it also possible?

There are communities which have few paupers, although there are none in which poverty and disease are unknown. Our Western States, for example, though abounding in vice and crime, are comparatively free from pauperism. Certain counties in Massachusetts—Dukes and Franklin, for instance—appear to be measurably free both from crime and pauperism; but, if we look at such communities, we shall generally find that they are somewhat exceptional in their circumstances. Either, as in the West, the vigor of youth, the ease of living, the lack of social distinctions, and other circumstances natural to new communities, will account for their freedom from pauperism; or, as in Dukes and Franklin Counties, a prosperity already attained, and a simple manner of life, undisturbed by the new competitions of industrial and commercial activity, and sobered by the continual drawing away of the youthful population to more stirring scenes,—these circumstances have led to similar results. But is it possible, in the great aggregate of Counties and States and Nations, to escape the miseries of pauperism by removing its causes?

In a certain degree, I believe this is possible. The causes of pauperism are, in my opinion, first, Physical degradation and inferiority; second, Moral perversity; third, Mental incapacity; fourth, Accidents and infirmities; fifth, (and often the most powerful of all,) Unjust and unwise laws, and the customs of society. These may be regarded as general causes, but under these five heads come innumerable minor and proximate causes, such as intemperance, profligacy, insanity, indolence, false education, monopolies, privileges, ignorance, superstition, and, indeed, all the enemies of human advancement; for pauperism is one of the sloughs in which the progress of mankind is stopped.

Some of those which I have called general causes cannot be removed. Accidents and infirmities occurring to individuals, such as result from earthquakes, storms, floods, unwholesome seasons, the maladies of a locality, and the like, cannot be removed by human agency, beyond a certain degree. Moral perversity in the individual, also, being incident to moral freedom, must always be regarded as one of the few necessary evils of human life. But physical and mental degradation, and the unwise laws and customs of society, can be reached and removed gradually, and with them would disappear much of the pauperism which now molests and poisons our civilization. Such is my belief; which, however, there is here no room to explain and illustrate.

CHAPTER II.—CRIME.Its Nature and Causes.

Crime may be taken to be that portion of human depravity and passion which is regarded and punished by human laws. As distinguished from Vice, it is more overt, more dreaded by the community, and held in greater abhorrence; but Vice, on the other hand, is more insidious, more general, and more ruinous to the individual; though frequently held in little reprehension by the community. The vice of drunkenness, for example, was little censured among English speaking persons a hundred years ago, and is still held in honor in many parts of the world; while the crime of parricide, though infinitely less pernicious, (because it could never become common,) has always been execrated by all. But since Vice is defined by conscience and opinion, and Crime by law, (which is the slow result of conscience and opinion,) nearly every vice comes, in some time or place, to be stigmatized as a crime; while crimes not unfrequently are remanded to the catalogue of vices, and sometimes of virtues. For a double reason, therefore, the moralist cannot regard Crime precisely as it is esteemed in the popular judgment.

It has more than once been declared in these Reports that the mass of Crime is the direct result of poverty and its attendant evils. Longer experience has only confirmed this opinion; though it is painfully true that crime resulting from other causes is also common. With Vice the case is different; for although that also is fostered by poverty and misery, it is no less stimulated by the ease and opportunity of affluence. Between Vice and Crime the distance is short, but pauperism is not seldom an intermediate stage. From the class of comfortable and respectable persons men are continually lapsing through vice into pauperism, (either in themselves or their children,) and from pauperism into crime; and even when this is not its genealogy, Crime may be traced ordinarily to the five general causes of pauperism already specified. To neutralize these causes in the community is not always possible, but it may be done in many and perhaps most individual cases. For this purpose, among others, our penal laws and prisons were contrived. Let us see, then, how many and of what kind are the persons restrained thereby.

The Criminal Class in Massachusetts.

The apparent aggregate number of persons committed to the two State Prisons, the twenty Jails, the sixteen Houses of Correction and one House of Industry, in all thirty-nine prisons in Massachusetts, during the last year, was 10,885, of whom 2,871 were females, or a little more than a fourth part. But the true number, after excluding duplicates and transfers, was not above 9,500, of whom about 2,400 were females, and about

THE CRIMINAL CLASS.

3,900 had been previously imprisoned. About three-fourths of the whole number were of foreign parentage, and more than 56 per cent. were born abroad. Nearly 3,000, or about 31 per cent., could neither read nor write, while only about 20 persons had a superior education. Nearly 3,000, or more than three-eighths of all the male prisoners, claimed to have served in the army or navy. About 300 were under the age of fifteen; about half as many had been in some Reform School; the whole number of minors was about one-fifth of all committed. Less than half the whole number were married, and less than one in twenty had ever owned property to the value of $1,000. More than four-fifths of both sexes are reported as intemperate, but only about one in ten would allow that their parents were intemperate.

From the above statistics it might hastily be inferred that the criminal population in Massachusetts is only about 9,500. But it should be remembered that there were more than 2,400 persons in prison in Massachusetts on the 1st of October, 1866; and although nearly 2,000 of these were discharged during the year, yet not more than 500 probably were recommitted so as to make a part of the 9,500 committed during the year. If this be so, we could not set the whole number of persons imprisoned during the year at less than 11,000, which, again, is probably less than half of the so-called criminal class in the State. I estimate the number in that class at 25,000; of whom perhaps 5,000 appear also among the 40,000 paupers and vagrants mentioned in the preceding chapter; making the total of both classes some 60,000. A few more statistics will show how easy it is to overestimate the criminals in the State.

For the period of three years and seven months between March 1, 1864, and October 1, 1867, the number of reported commitments to prison in Massachusetts was about 40,000, or a yearly average of about 11,200; but the whole number of different persons during that time was not more than 28,500, or a yearly average of 8,000.

These statements are made on the authority of my Prison Registers, which have been analyzed in part during the past year.

PART VI.]

SECRETARY'S REPORT.

[CHAP. II.

Between March 1, 1864, and October 1, 1866, there were entered on these Registers 28,866 names, of which some 8,600 were of females, and some 20,266 of males. But these names only represented 20,700 different persons,—a number smaller by more than 8,000 than the apparent number of criminals. In a period of five years this reduction would have been still greater, amounting probably to at least 45 per cent. of the actual number of persons imprisoned, instead of 39 per cent. as in the shorter period given. That is to say, in a period of five years, if the Massachusetts statistics were made up, as they always were until 1864, from the registered number of commitments, they would show a criminal population greater by nearly one-half than is really the fact.

Of the 20,700 persons who were in prison in Massachusetts between March, 1864, and October, 1866, about 6,200, or thirty per cent. were females, and about 14,500 were males. Of the females, a little less than thirty per cent., (or nearly nine per cent. of the whole number,) were recommitted during this period of two years and seven months, while of the males not quite twenty per cent., (or about fourteen per cent. of the whole number,) were recommitted. The whole number of recommitted persons was about 4,700, while the number of recommitments was upwards of 8,000, of which rather more than one-third were of females. It seems, therefore, that, in proportion to the whole number of female prisoners, the percentage of recommitments is greater than among men. This is owing partly to the shorter sentences usually awarded to women, and partly to the well-known and proverbial fact that the case of a bad woman is more hopeless than a bad man. It was La Bruyère who said it, but he only uttered the common voice of mankind when he said, "Women are extreme in all things; they are always either better or worse than men."

The proportion of female criminals to the whole number is now rather less than it has been throughout the whole period since March, 1864, but the proportion of recommitments is, for that very reason, rather larger.

Looking now at the nature of the offences for which these 28,500 persons have been committed to prison, we find that by far the larger number are what would, in most countries, either be punished very slightly or not at all. The "crimes against the person," together with the higher "crimes against property" make less than a sixth part of these offences, while the "crimes against order and decency" are more than half, and Drunkenness and Violation of the Liquor Law alone are nearly half of the whole number. The commitments for Drunkenness, (including Common Drunkards,) have this year been less than in 1866; those for violating the Liquor Law about the same. "Crimes against the person" have also decreased in the past year, while certain classes of crime against property have increased.

It would seem, therefore, that the number of high crimes and of hardened offenders in Massachusetts is not very large, notwithstanding the formidable number of persons arrested and imprisoned during the year. Many of these are young men and women, and no small number are boys and girls. Those under age are about one-fifth of the whole, while more than half are less than thirty years old. There can be no doubt, then, that a good proportion of our so-called criminal population could be reformed or turned from evil ways, were an earnest effort made by society, aided by a better system of penal laws and prison discipline. Some of them are, in fact, so reformed, but far less than is possible.

Intemperance and Crime.

Of all the proximate causes or occasions of crime, none is so fruitful as intemperance. The returns show that from 60 to 80 per cent. of our criminals are intemperate, and the proportion of those whose crimes were occasioned by intemperance is probably even greater.

In view of this fact, well known to all who are familiar with our prison population, the course of legislation and of public opinion, in regard to the sale and use of intoxicating drink, becomes a matter of the most serious importance, requiring the earnest consideration of men who have the good of society at heart. It should not be left to the fluctuations of party necessities, and, still less, to the self-interest of the class of persons most concerned in maintaining a fearful evil. All the virtue of the good and all the intelligence of the wise is needed to frame our laws on this subject. The decrease in arrests for Drunkenness and of "crimes against the person," slight as it has been, would seem to show that the better enforcement of the prohibitory law has had some effect to diminish crime in the past year.

CHAPTER III.—DISEASE.

The agency of Disease, whether inherited or acquired, in enfeebling the powers and diminishing the prosperity of individuals and the community is too well known to be more than touched upon here. If any means could be devised for reducing the average sickness of a people one half, the average length of life, and the productive power, wealth and comfort of that people would be increased in due proportion. Hence the importance of a careful study of the sanitary condition of our people, in cities and in the country; and hence much of the value of an accurate Registration of the statistics of mortality, with such inferences deduced from them as they will fairly justify. If such statistics show that the number of births is decreasing in proportion to the deaths, and that the mortality among infants is increasing, then it behooves the community to see if such a lamentable state of things cannot be remedied. If they show that the accumulation of our population in cities and large towns is peculiarly unfavorable to health, then means must be found, if possible, to counteract the unfavorable tendencies. And, generally, it is the business of the statistician, the sanitary reformer, and the wise legislator, combining their forces, to promote the public health in all feasible ways.

Among the most noteworthy causes of disease now prevalent, especially among women and children, is the growing disuse of manual labor and muscular exertion among women not dependent upon their labor for a support. And even among those who do support themselves by labor, there is a growing distaste for hand-work, or a choice of the lighter kinds of work which only exercise a few of the muscles.

DEAF-MUTES IN MASSACHUSETTS.

This same aversion to manual labor appears also, and perhaps quite as manifestly, among young men ; but the ill effects of it are seen more plainly in the case of women ; especially since it is often accompanied with a disproportionate exercise of the brain and the nervous force. From this results weakness and disease, particularly when the natural functions peculiar to the sex are called into action ; and hence come, in course of time, unhappy marriages, a diminished and enfeebled offspring, and a long train of wretched consequences.

No doubt there is some compensation for these evils, but they are evils, none the less, and the community will suffer until some means can be found to avert or remove them. The researches of Dr. Allen, who from the first has been a member of your Board, have thrown much light on this topic, and, I trust, will continue to do so.

The Prevalence of Deaf-Dumbness.

Without dwelling farther on Disease in general, allow me to say something of that particular form of disease which gives rise to the interesting, unfortunate class of Deaf-mutes, for whose better education your Board has so successfully labored. The discussions of last winter, following the suggestions of the Board and the recommendations of the Governor, have drawn public attention in an unwonted degree to the subject. Taking advantage of this, and induced by a belief that the figures of the Census, in regard to the number of deaf-mutes in the country, could not be accurate, I have made a partial census of them in Massachusetts, with such means as were at my disposal. The chief clerk of this Department, Dr. Henry O. Prentiss, first copied and carefully revised the names of deaf-mutes returned in the State Census of 1865 ; the original number being but 512, was by him corrected to 548, and afterwards, by the compiler of the returns, to 561, as it now stands. To this list were added such additional names as were found on the list of State pupils at Hartford, on a list of the deaf-mutes of Boston and the vicinity, furnished by Amos Smith, Esq., and on the list of Mr. Fisk, the Visiting Agent of your Board, who made thorough inquiries in a portion of the central and western part of the State. Other names have been furnished by town officers, by physicians and clergymen, parents of deaf-mute children, and others interested in the inquiry. As the list now stands, it contains the names of upwards of 800 deaf-mutes; and, from the result of the inquiries of Mr. Fisk and others in the towns which have been thoroughly examined, there is little doubt that there are in the whole State no less than 950, and perhaps 1,000 of this class, including those under five years old. The United States Census of 1860, as revised, gave only 427, or less than half the number now believed to be residing in the State. The State census of 1865, which gave 134 more,—an apparent increase of 31 per cent. in five years,—sets down only 53 in Boston, where there are more than 100, none in Roxbury, where there are at least 15 and probably 25, none in Grafton, where there are 3, none in Northampton, where there are 2, and so on. The closer investigation begun in this office, shows that the ratio of deaf-mutes to the whole population is as great in Massachusetts as in European countries, being at least one to every 1,400, and perhaps one to every 1,300. In Ireland, to which many of our deaf-mutes trace their parentage, the proportion is still greater.

Out of 762 on my list whose ages are given, 98 are of the age of ten and under, 108 are from 10 to 15, and 92 from 15 to 20; in all, 298 under 21, and 206 under 15. Making the needful additions to the list, it is probable that the number of children of the school age would be found not less than 250, of whom only about three-fifths are or have been under special instruction. This is about the proportion of all deaf-mutes found in the State who have been instructed at Hartford; and no more than this proportion can be instructed there at present. Indeed, it is probable that the present number there from Massachusetts, (108,) is less than three-fifths of those who should be under instruction.

It is desirable, therefore, that the city of Boston should open a public school, at the expense of the city, for such deaf-mute children as live within reach of such a school. The number probably would be 30, and the cost of instructing them, under competent female teachers, would not be more than $1,500 a year, or $50 for each pupil. It now costs the State nearly four times as much for each pupil at Hartford and at Northampton; the whole number of State pupils in both places being about 115.

My inquiries lead to the belief that the proportion of congenitally deaf children is greater than would be supposed from the statistics collected at Hartford, to which I alluded last year. I find that at least three-fifths of all whose case is reported were born deaf, while many more were born with such predisposition to deafness that they lost their hearing very early. In this respect, as well as in the ratio of the deaf-mute to the whole population, our American statistics, when accurately collected, will approach more nearly to those of European countries.

The Clarke Institution for Deaf Mutes.

The Board of Education will, no doubt, lay before the Legislature accounts of the gratifying success of Miss Rogers in teaching articulation to the pupils at the Clarke School at Northampton. The hopes entertained by those of us who have advocated a greater use of articulation in teaching the deaf, have been fully realized; and there is reason to believe that this method will be more extensively used at Hartford and in other American Schools, as it should be. The observations of Mr. Gallaudet of Washington, in the deaf-mute schools of Europe, though they did not persuade him to give up the use of signs, have led him to favor articulation more than before. The inferences drawn by Dr. Howe from a less extensive but more searching examination of European schools, have already been communicated to your Board.

CHAPTER IV.—INSANITY.

No subject earlier engaged the attention of the Board of Charities than that of the treatment of the insane. Four years ago, when Mr. Norcross, the present Mayor of Boston, was Chairman of this Board, the question was thoroughly investigated under his direction, and with the assistance of Drs. Jarvis, Choate, Bemis, Prince, Butler, Chandler, Walker and others, who had some acquaintance with insanity as it exists in Massachusetts. Ever since that time, at intervals, the investigation and discussion have been renewed, and certain practical measures have been taken, with the approval and sometimes with the co-operation of your Board. Among these measures were the continuance of removals from the State Hospitals of those chronic cases which were regarded as practically incurable; the establishment of an Asylum at Tewksbury for the reception of such cases, and for the better care of the insane already in the State Almshouses; the law of 1864 compelling the treatment of curable cases in the State Hospitals; and the increase of the State appropriations for the support of the insane, both curable and incurable. By these means not only has their condition been prevented from becoming worse, in a State where they are fast increasing, but it has actually been considerably improved, in the judgment of all those who have taken the trouble to investigate the facts. Nay, more! I will venture to say that there is no part of the United States where so much care is taken, so much money expended, or so much comfort secured for the insane of all classes, as in Massachusetts; the truth of this assertion to be tested, not by guesses and hopes and assumptions, but by facts and figures. These things being so, those in Massachusetts, including the Board of Charities, who have been instrumental in bringing about this state of things, may be content to endure the misunderstanding of their situation which seems to be prevalent in the Association of Medical Superintendents of the Insane. But they ought not to be content with things as they are, provided they can be bettered; and there is no doubt that much still needs to be done in Massachusetts as well as elsewhere, for the care and treatment of the insane, both curable and incurable. The great Asylums and Hospitals need to be freed from the crowding of so many incurable patients; to be made less like prisons, less mechanical in their daily routine, and more varied in their classification. The inert mass of chronic insane, too often neglected and abused, need to be placed under less restraint, with greater facilities for labor, for communication with sane people, and for a natural way of living. Some means must be found for receiving and properly caring for the increasing host of curable patients, whose claim to immediate attention is all the stronger because their cure depends upon it.*

To devise ways for all this requires time and wisdom, and the best men will hold different opinions as to the best way. There can be no question, however, that the tendency of opinion among thoughtful men is towards a stricter classification of the insane, a less expensive mode of providing for the incurables, and a more varied treatment for recent cases. I suppose that your Board share in this tendency, and that you have not regretted the defeat or modification of a plan providing hospital room in the old fashion of an immense structure for the insane poor of Boston. May we not hope that, in reconsidering their action, the city authorities will agree upon a method more simple and more comprehensive, which may be adopted by the State authorities also, and by the friends of the insane all over the country? Many of these are already agreed upon something of the kind; the names of Drs. Chapin, Cooke, Lee, Workman, etc., being joined to those of Butler, Choate, Bemis, Walker and others, in favor of a departure from the established order.

In Europe the same subject is under discussion, and measures akin to those advocated in this country are either adopted or proposed in France, Belgium, Scotland and England. A high medical authority in London has lately said:—

“It need not excite surprise to read that the three large asylums for the county of Middlesex are full, and that extended accommodation for the insane poor is urgently required all over England. The subject is

* There are now seven Hospitals and Asylums for the insane in the State. The whole number of patients in them all, for the year ending September 30, 1867, was about 2,675, the average number 1,777, the cures 360, the deaths 230. The admissions were between 800 and 850, of which about 450 were recent cases. Of the average number, about 750 are supported by the State, 450 by towns and cities, and the rest by individuals. Probably 1,350 of them are incurable; to which may be added 350 in town almshouses and elsewhere, making an average of nearly 1,500 indigent incurables in the State.

now under the serious consideration of the Commissioners in Lunacy, who will advise the Home Office. The question before them is not so simple as it may seem. A very general feeling has arisen that the system of building enormous and expensive asylums has been carried far enough, and that the lunatic and idiot poor may be better cared for, at less expense, in smaller buildings or in private dwellings."

In Scotland the Lunacy Commissioners have adopted a plan such as is recommended by your General Agent on page 216 of his Report, with good results, so far as is known.

CONCLUSION.

In closing my Report, I will, according to custom, sum up what I regard as the more important suggestions contained in it for the consideration of your Board and the Legislature:—

- I.—That the General Court at its next session should devise and pass a law for the enfranchisement of the Massachusetts Indians, upon terms just to all parties.
- II.—That all private charitable societies shall be required to make a report to the State authorities, and that, under strict guarantees for their proper treatment, juvenile offenders may be committed to private reformatories.
- III.—That the Settlement Laws be extended and modified, to secure the relief of more persons by the municipality where they have chiefly resided, with provision for the relief of others who may be State paupers, without, in all cases, requiring their removal to the Almshouse.
- IV.—That some plan be agreed upon, and sanctioned by law, for the better care of the chronic, and the improved treatment of the curable insane.

Your attention is once more invited to the Statistical Tables in the Appendix, which have been prepared with much labor by the clerks in this Department, and will repay a careful examination.

Secretary of the Board of State Charities.

REPORT OF THE VISITING AGENT.

SUPPLEMENT TO THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

CHAPTER I.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE VISITING AGENT,
OCTOBER 1st, 1867.

To the Honorable Board of State Charities.

GENTLEMEN :—Having completed a year's service as Visiting Agent for your Board, I herewith submit my annual Report.

On the first of October 1866, under instructions from your Secretary, I commenced visiting the children placed out in families from the State Almshouse at Monson. At that time the records of the institution showed that the number of children placed out since its opening in 1854, was 912, but as some of these had been indentured several times, the actual number was found to be 821. Of this number 603 were supposed to be in their places. The remaining 218 were reported as out of their time, returned to their friends, or as having run away. Since the first of October, 1866, there have been placed out from the State Primary School and Almshouse 156, making the number supposed to be in their places 759.

These children have been scattered over the States of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire and New York, with here and there one in the Western States. A large number had not been heard from since leaving the institution, and it was not known how they were faring, or what had become of them. The authorities of the Almshouse had placed them out, requiring a yearly report of their condition, but these reports were seldom made. Masters moved from one town or

REPORT OF THE VISITING AGENT.

State to another, without giving information to the superintendent of the institution. Children were transferred from family to family, without authority, and became lost to the knowledge and care of the State. That neglect and abuses were frequent under this system, is not surprising. The State had for twelve years been providing homes for its orphan and friendless children, without causing them to be looked after, or correcting the wrongs that had grown up among them. To your Board belongs the credit of investigating this department of the State's charity, and inaugurating a safeguard for the children.

The following is a list of the States and towns in which children have been placed, with the number of children in each, from the opening of the Almshouse in 1854, to October 1, 1867.

REPORT OF THE VISITING AGENT.

Your Agent, in entering upon his duties, soon found that a greater work was before him than he had anticipated. At almost every step he encountered the accumulated wrongs and neglects of a dozen years. To correct these, to counsel with families and encourage the children, has been a mission of constant care and anxiety. From month to month reports have been made to your Board, showing the nature and progress of the work. These reports have also contained numerous incidents of a cheering character—some of a touching or romantic nature, others of wrongs and hardships.

After a careful examination into the condition of each child, the following blank, provided by your Board, has been filled out, with such additional facts as could be ascertained :—

Date of visit.

Four hundred and ninety-five of these blanks have been filled, showing that so many of the children have been visited or their condition ascertained by visiting the families where they were placed. This number includes twenty-three who had left their places or had run away from the Almshouse and found places for themselves. The condition of the latter was generally found to be deplorable,—they were penniless, ragged, moving from place to place, and fast sinking into vicious habits. To improve their condition by establishing them in permanent homes, or hiring them out and looking after their wages, has been one of the cares of the Agency.

The following statistics will show the condition of the children :—

INSTANCES OF NEGLECT AND FRAUD.

The common neglects from which these children suffer are insufficient schooling, non-attendance at church upon the Sabbath, and inadequate clothing. Occasionally a child is overworked and maltreated, but such instances will diminish now that the children are visited and more carefully looked after. Among numerous instances of injustice which have come under the observation of your Agent, the following may be mentioned:—

A boy's master died, and the boy was re-indentured by the master's son, and kept in his place till twenty-three years of age, when he was told that he had become of age and might take care of himself. Another was kept till within a few months of his majority, when he was turned away on a slight pretext and the $100 and two full suits of clothes due him at the expiration of his term were withheld. Others have been let out from year to year, their wages taken by their masters, while the boys have been poorly clad and kept from school. During the war, several masters sold their boys to towns or bounty brokers, keeping the money, which in several instances amounted to $500. Two selectmen of towns did this, and while boasting of the sacrifice they had made, put the money in their pockets, making no report of the transaction to the authorities at the State Almshouse.

In several instances, girls, not knowing their age, have been kept a year or more over their term of service, and then sent away without receiving the sums stipulated in their indentures. One of these, at New York, left her place when she had become of age, when she was hunted down by a police officer, taken back, and made to do longer service. A colored girl had been kept three years after her time was out, employed out of doors as well as in the house, and knew nothing of her age or for how long she was to serve. Another had been let out for two dollars per week for two years, her master taking her wages and clothing her scantily, without giving her schooling. Others have been seduced by members of families where they lived, and the matter quietly disposed of.

In the settlement of twenty-five of these cases of injustice and abuse, three thousand four hundred and seventy-eight dollars and twenty-three cents ($3,478.23) have been recovered. One hundred dollars have been paid into the State treasury, two thousand and eight dollars and fifty-three cents ($2,008.53) to children who have become of age, and thirteen hundred and sixty-nine dollars and seventy cents ($1,369.70) deposited in the savings bank in the names of children, on which there is about one hundred dollars accrued interest. In only two of these cases has litigation been resorted to, and these were conducted without any expense to the State. There are yet several bounty cases unsettled, involving about $1,500, which will probably be secured for the boys entitled to the money.

It may be inquired why these children have not appealed to the authorities at the Almshouse for protection and justice, and the reply comes back that they have usually shunned the almshouse as if it were a hideous monster, revolting to their pride and finer feelings, and suffered hardships and wrongs rather than ask assistance from that quarter. With the State Primary School pupils it will no doubt be different.

But these cases of injustice and abuse are the exception, not the general rule. Aside from slight neglects, which are now being corrected, the majority of the children are doing well, and have pretty good homes. Some of them take the names of the families in which they live, and are treated in all respects as children of those families.

In visiting the children your Agent has endeavored to make them feel that he is their friend—that he has their interest at heart and desires to benefit them. He has been happily surprised to find how readily they have confided in him and made known their various wants. They have been anxious to learn about their brothers, sisters and other friends, information of whom has been communicated by letter as soon as it could be ascertained. To each of the children visited a book has been presented, at an expense to the Agent of about $100. These little gifts have been kindly received by the children and have aided materially in obtaining their good will.

Another feature of the agency, which is calculated to interest the children, and obtain a correct knowledge of their condition, is correspondence. During the year your Agent has written to them over three hundred letters, and received from them nearly as many. To show how they appreciate the interest taken in their behalf, the following brief quotations are made from some of their letters :—

“I can hardly think what will be the most interesting to you ; but I suppose it will be of interest to you to know how I am getting along. I am well, and am striving to be a good girl. I love my home, and my good friends who teach me to be useful. I was much pleased with your visit, and for your kind regard for me. I have read the little book through which you gave me, and found it to be very interesting.”

“I am trying to be a good child, and pay my kind friends at Monson for taking such care of me when I was left destitute, without a mother's care. I do feel very thankful to you, and always will.”

“I hope my brothers are well, and have good places to live. I wish they had as good a home as I have. I want them to come and live with me. It would be so nice to live with my brothers. I could do many things for them. I could knit their stockings, and mend their clothes.”

“I am sorry you could not find where my mother is. I think I had a good mother, for I remember her. I would like to express my gratitude to you, and through you, to the State of Massachusetts, for taking care of me and so many other little children in their helplessness, and furnishing so many of them with good homes—especially me.”

“I had rather go to the Almshouse than stay here. I shall look to you as a friend, for I have not many other friends in this world. I want to have you come and see me, and do the best you can for me.”

“I am thankful for the interest you have taken in me, and hope you will be rewarded. No one can tell the feelings of an orphan child, only those who have experienced the hard fate of an orphan.”

“I have thought of your letter and my sister all day long, wondering if my sister has thought of me this long, long day ; but I suppose she does not know that she has a friend or relative in the world to care for her. The thought that she has not got a good place fills me with horror, for I know what it is. But such is the lot of the orphan. Yet it is a blessed thought that we can have One who has promised to be a Father to the fatherless. I shall always remember you, and thank you for your kindness, and hope our first meeting will not be the last.”

“I cannot thank you enough for helping me out of prison. I mean now to be a good boy. I hope you will be rewarded for what you have done for me, in the next world, if not in this.”

REPORT OF THE VISITING AGENT.

"Your visit did me good. I hope the Lord will very much bless your labors for the poor and destitute."

"You will be glad, I feel sure, to hear from me. I am now teaching a very pleasant school, although a little larger than I like. It numbers seventy scholars. I shall ever remember you with gratitude, and intend that you will always feel your kindness was not wasted, and hope you may not be discouraged in doing for many a poor child what was done for me."

The children have also been encouraged to write to their brothers and sisters when they have any. Some of them have been separated since early childhood, without hearing from each other. The following, from a girl to her sister, from whom she had been separated seven years, is so expressive that it is worth quoting:—

"TO MY SISTER.

Oh, sister, darling sister,
I long for you to-day;
I want you when I'm sitting still,
I want you when I play.
The girls are kind and gentle,
And my friends are kind to me,
But there's none like you, dear sister,
And your face I want to see.
Where are you now, my sister?
Are you very far away?
And are you very happy?
And do you like to stay?
I went away so quickly
I could not say good-bye;
I want to kiss your cheek again,
And look into your eye.
The days are passing swiftly,
And soon the time will be,
When we shall meet, dear sister,
And I your face shall see."

Twenty boys, placed out from the Reform School, at Westborough, have also been visited. These boys are of a different class from those put out from Monson. They are older when placed out, and do not grow up with the families, to become attached to them. They are taken for their work, solely, and if they have been at Westborough several years, they think more of the superintendent and teachers there, than they do of the families they live in. They suffer some neglects, but will not bear much abuse when they can run away so easily. Some of these boys are indentured to their own fathers, who sent them to the School. They do not usually stay in their places as contentedly as the children from Monson, though some of them remain through the term of their indenture.

Your agent has also inquired into the condition of girls from the Industrial School at Lancaster, when they have come under his observation. These girls are generally looked after by the superintendent and teachers, who correspond with them and the families having them, but they are not often visited. In addition, some assistance has been rendered your Board, in the way of collecting statistics concerning the deaf and dumb.

Another feature of the agency is the finding of homes for children. One hundred and forty-seven families have been found who promised to take children. Many of these have already visited the institution and made their selections. To others, children have been sent, among them several boys from Westborough.

Too great care cannot be exercised in letting children go out among strangers. It is not enough that the applicant bring the recommendation of the selectmen, for it has been found that almost anybody can get such a recommendation. A careful inquiry should be made of the applicant concerning his family before the child is permitted to go. With this precaution, and an effort to furnish children adapted to families, many troubles will be avoided.

Your Agent has generally been received with cordiality by the families he has visited. They have seemed glad to counsel with him, to listen to his suggestions and correct delinquencies he has pointed out. He has made in all 609 visits, including re-visits, travelled 10,246 miles, received 431 letters and written 442.

The monthly reports made to your Board have detailed more fully the business of this agency. In this Report only a general view is taken. The field of labor widens and increases in importance as the work progresses. The children will more and more rely upon the Visiting Agent as their friend—looking to him as a protector in times of need, and the pacificator of all their difficulties; and he will find it easier and pleasanter to prevent wrongs and abuses among them than to correct those which have been so long accumulating.

To Mr. Sanborn, your Secretary, I am indebted for many suggestions and for cordial assistance; and to each of you, gentlemen, I desire to express my thanks for the confidence and interest you have manifested in my labors.

G. M. FISK, Visiting Agent.

SUPPLEMENT TO SECRETARY'S REPORT.

The preceding lists are printed from the official returns, in which there are evidently many omissions, so that the totals will not agree with the totals given in the Tables of Expenditure, in all cases. This is so at the Worcester and Rainsford Hospitals, the three State Pauper Establishments, the Westborough and Lancaster Schools, the Blind Asylum and Idiot School, the State Prison and the County Prisons. The discrepancy is owing to various causes, not all of which are known to me.

FOURTH ANNUAL REPORT
OF THE
GENERAL AGENT
OF THE
BOARD OF STATE CHARITIES.

1866-7.

GENERAL AGENT'S REPORT.

PRELIMINARY.

To the Board of State Charities.

GENTLEMEN:—Your General Agent has the honor to present herewith his Fourth Annual Report, being the Tenth which it has been his duty to prepare since his connection with the administration of the State Charities.

Successive enactments of the Legislature, the result of obvious defects in our system of charities, or the necessary consequences of unforeseen events both in our national and local relations, have materially added to the duties of your executive officer. Instead of fulfilling the simple task of the Alien Commissioner, he is now charged with the execution of numerous Statutes, distinct in themselves, yet having mutual relations. So complicated is the character of the work, and so burdensome its details, that the satisfactory performance of the whole by one individual is absolutely unattainable; and yet it is so indivisible in its nature, that to insure any degree of success it must be grasped by one brain and carried out by one directing will. If fully advised beforehand of the magnitude of the task, few men of any degree of competency would venture to assume a position so destitute of honor or substantial remuneration, the duties of which no skill can systematize or simplify, since they depend on the contingencies of human life and the exigencies of each succeeding day,—so wearying to the head, so painful to the heart.

Conscious of his own inability, without succumbing in mind or body, to carry out the laws in spirit or in letter for a lengthened period, and at the same time to meet the unreasonable exactions of the philanthropic, to combat error, and defend the outposts you have gained, your Agent has long sought a final release from his official duties. For the same reason he hesitates to offer suggestions which, adopted by the Legislature, would so add to the labors of the office, as to make it quite untenable. His reserve, in this regard, will not be taken as an indication that he does not deem further legislation both necessary and desirable.

As possibly he may not be called upon to prepare another Annual Report, he feels bound in honor to allude, as he can with entire propriety, to a matter which has greatly annoyed and grieved him during the past year. His colleague, the Secretary of this Board, is the Head of a Department of the State Government. That department was established by the Legislature on an equal footing with all the others, after a hard struggle of several years' duration, in which your Secretary had no share. The utility of the service assigned to it was derided by many and denied by more, while the new duties and responsibilities devolved by the Statute on the municipal authorities, could hardly fail to render it at first unpopular. It is not singular that, for a time at least, some portion of the bitterness of the contest should cast its rancorous shadow over its administrative officer, (even though, as was the fact, he did not seek the position,) obscuring his merits, and so depriving him of a just return for his labors. But your Secretary organized his Bureau with signal ability, and has conducted its varied and difficult details of duty with such industry and effect, that your Reports are now read, and what Massachusetts has done and proposes to do for her dependent classes, is now known and pondered in every State in the Union, and every enlightened country in the world. And he has so improved the heretofore "mysterious ways" of the local authorities in making their returns, and so probed the unsound portions of our charities, reforms and corrections, that if his department were blotted out to-morrow, its influence and the ideas it has developed would live for generations to come.

But while rendering this faithful service, and devoting to the public interest the best years of his life, he has been refused the proper and usual emolument of the Head of a Department, and actually receives less than is paid to the principal clerks of his associates in the government. The undersigned feels most strongly that the Board should no longer acquiesce in this gross injustice to their colleague and Secretary, but should strenuously urge upon the Legislature the justice and the propriety of placing him on an equality in point of compensation with the other Heads of Bureaus in the State Administration.

SUBORDINATE OFFICERS AND THEIR COMPENSATION.

Your Agent stated in his last Report that his permanent force consisted of four deputies, four clerks, and two boatmen, and alluded to the inadequacy of their regular compensation, which averaged to each but $691 per annum. The Finance Committee of the Legislature of 1867, after a careful investigation of the amount and description of duty performed and the salaries allowed, declared with entire unanimity that more officers must be employed, and the rate of payment be raised forthwith; and in proof of their sincerity, added nearly nine thousand dollars for salaries alone, to the amount asked for by your Agent. He has accordingly, with your approbation, so far raised the rate of compensation, that it averages $858.33 to each, being an average increase of twenty-four per cent. But he has deemed it best to nominate but two new officers as part of the permanent force, preferring to meet temporary exigencies by employing temporary aid, as the more economical plan. One of the two was an additional boatman required by the transfer of the yacht "W. S. Thatcher," to the custody of your Agent, by order of His Excellency and the Executive Council; the other, a clerk whose services were demanded for the execution of the Statutes in respect to the support and burial of State paupers by the cities and towns. The regular salary of each was fixed at $600 per annum. The actual salary of each employé will appear in the schedules that follow. The number and names of additional officers will be found in the detailed account of the sub-departments to which they are respectively assigned.

GENERAL AGENT'S REPORT.

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS.

The receipts for the General Agent' office for the year ending September 30, 1867, amount to	$30,255 82
Its expenses to	13,928 15
Balance in favor of the office,	$16,327 67
Of this sum he has paid into the treasury,	$30,157 82
And to Institutions,	98 00
Entire receipts of this office,	$30,255 82
Entire expenses of all departments of the Board,	25,047 91
Surplus,	$5,207 91

These results show that, notwithstanding the wide-extended ramifications of its business and its apparent costliness, the Board of Charities is still a direct source of income to the State. It is only fair to add that by employing a larger force this income would be increased in a greater ratio than the amount expended, and that this state of things would continue till the material to work upon was exhausted.

PERMANENT OFFICERS.

The following is a list of the persons in the permanent service of the Department, with their respective salaries, as fixed by the Board for the present year:—

1. General Agent, $3,000 00

Sub-Department of Immigration and Local Business.

2. First Deputy, $1,500 00
3. First Clerk, 800 00
4. Fourth Deputy, 1,000 00
5. Fourth Clerk, 800 00
6. First Boatman, 800 00
7. Second Boatman, 600 00
8. Third Boatman, 600 00

 COMPENSATION OF OFFICERS.

Sub-Department of Settlement and Bastardy.

9. Second Deputy,	$1,800 00
10. Second Clerk,	800 00

Sub-Department of Transportation.

11. Third Deputy,	1,000 00
12. Third Clerk,	500 00

Sub-Department of Municipal Bills and Accounts.

13. Fifth Clerk,	600 00
	$10,800 00

Thus it appears that the number of officers regularly employed by the General Agent is 12, at a gross compensation of $10,800, and an average salary for the financial year 1867 of $858.33.

He deems it only just to say that these officers, with one exception, are required to labor, not six hours per day merely, as is the case in most of the Departments, but as many hours as the public interest and the immediate exigencies of business may require. They certainly average ten hours per day each, and probably more; and though at times some of them may appear to be comparatively at leisure, at other times they are compelled to work both through the day and night, performing duties usually disagreeable and not always safe. And this they do on salaries less by some hundreds of dollars than those paid to other employes of the State of equal grade. The officer above excepted works during the usual six hours for $600 a year, and receives additional compensation from another source for additional work.

These facts are mentioned not in a captious spirit, but merely to show that if this Board is "costly," on account of the varied and immense amount of labor assigned it to perform, it is not the extravagant Department of the State Government, and not altogether, in a pecuniary view, an "unprofitable servant."

GENERAL AGENT'S REPORT.

The appropriation for the year ending September

30th, 1867, was, $19,375 00

A surplus remains of $5,446 85

Comparing the expenses with the receipts, we find a net profit to the State of $16,827.67, enough to pay the cost of the Board and its remaining departments, and leave a balance of $5,109.91 in the treasury.

Expenses of the Board and its Secretary.

An appropriation of $3,600 was granted to this Board for the present financial year. During the first nine months there has been expended of this sum $2,230.30, as follows:—

1. Travelling expenses,	$508 53
2. Rent of offices,	312 00
3. Fuel,	50 82
4. Furniture, &c.,	45 00

$2,230 30

Leaving for the last quarter of the year a balance of 1,369 70

$3,600 00

The Secretary states his expenses for the year ending September 30th, 1867, at $7,966.93, which with $922.53, the amount of the Board's expenses for the last quarter of 1866, makes a total expenditure for the Board and all its departments of $25,047.91, as given on page 186.

ALIEN PASSENGERS.

1.—Sub-Department of Immigration and Local Business.

These branches of your General Agent's business require the services of seven officers, one more than last year, in consequence of the consignment of the yacht "Thatcher" to the care of the Board. Of these seven, five devote themselves to matters concerning immigration, and one to local business, all being under the supervision of the seventh, who is the officer next in rank to the General Agent, and is styled the First Deputy. He has charge of the office at 59 Long Wharf, where all this business is conducted, and is responsible therefor. Whenever the condition of their own business permits, these officers render efficient aid in other departments.

1. The Immigration.

In previous Reports the undersigned has fully explained the methods of executing the laws in respect to alien passengers, and the necessity for their "thorough and impartial enforcement." It is not necessary to repeat them here.

In connection with his colleague, the Secretary, and with the aid of His Excellency the Governor, he has made some effort the better to protect the State from the evil consequences of the Immigration by land.

It is hoped to secure such co-operative legislation on the part of adjoining States, as to obtain for all a comparative immunity from these burdens, and at the same time such harmonious action as to the method of executing their respective laws of settlement as shall obviate all friction between the States, insuring the speedier detection of imposture and the more certain and effectual relief of the deserving poor. These negotiations being yet unfinished, he deems it best to omit any detail of them for the present.

The general depression of business in this country might be supposed to affect immigration very unfavorably; but it has rather operated to cut off its natural and expected increase, than to cause any serious reduction.

An examination of the statistics given below will show that the number of vessels boarded and of new immigrants arriving, as well as the amount of commutation money received, varies but slightly from the results of the last year. There is a decrease in the whole number of passengers, but it is mainly due to the falling off of 14 per cent. in those of American birth and those who had been here before.

It would be interesting to consider the mighty problem of Immigration in its material, social, political and moral relations, and in its probable or possible effects on the character and physique of both immigrants and natives, tracing the intricacies of the past by the aid of statistics, and attempting to prove what results would be or what might be on given conditions. But the limits of a brief business report forbid it.

The undersigned desires, however, to correct one error he has found prevalent among the usually well-informed, to the effect that a large part of the pauperism of the State, and its consequent charitable expenditure, is due to the immigration into the port of Boston. This is far from being the truth. The fact is, the aliens so arriving have paid head money enough to cover all the expense of supporting those of their number who have become chargeable to the public, including the entire cost of collecting the same and of the previous examinations, and leave a large surplus towards paying for the public buildings devoted to charitable purposes. In fact, if our foreign pauperism had been confined to this class, we should have had occasion for no such buildings.

For the large outlay we have incurred, we are indebted solely to the pauperism of the immigration into other States and the Canadas, which has found its way overland into Massachusetts. The inadequacy of our protection in this regard for many years is the true cause of an expenditure of certainly two millions of dollars, and of disabilities from which centuries will hardly relieve us.

Another matter deserves mention—the sanitary condition of the vessels arriving at this port, as proved by the rate of mortality among the passengers. In the two years ending September 30th, 1867, out of 41,081 passengers received, only ten have died on ship board, or two hundred and forty-three thousandths of one per cent.

ALIEN PASSENGERS.

Statistics of the Immigration.

During the year ending September 30th, 1867, the Fourth Deputy has boarded 1,074 vessels arriving in Boston from foreign ports. This is a decrease of 15, or $1\frac{4}{10}$ per cent., nearly. It is gratifying, however, to notice, as an indication of the continued revival of American Commerce from the effects of the Rebellion, that the number of American vessels has increased from 215 to 253, or 18 per cent., nearly; while the number of foreign vessels has decreased from 874 to 821, or 6 per cent. These vessels have brought 19,812 passengers, all the survivors of whom have been duly examined, and their names, and those of the vessels bringing them, entered in the Registers of the office. This is a decrease of 1,457, or $6\frac{8}{100}$ per cent., in the whole number of passengers. Of this, $5\frac{8}{100}$ per cent. is due to the falling off of 1,196 in the number of the American born and previous comers, and only $1\frac{22}{100}$ per cent. to the decrease of 261 in the actual immigrants.

The following table will show the nationality of the above vessels, the places whence they sailed, and the number brought by each class:—

Local Business.

There are three localities in the State, whither lines of communication converge from all directions. These are Springfield, Worcester, and Boston. In all three, as a natural consequence, strangers congregate in large numbers, and of course the number of persons becoming public charges is proportionally great. Although the material benefit derived from their position and from the labor and capital accompanying this influx, may be deemed by some an offset to the expenses attending it, the Legislature has thought it just that some portion of the burden should be borne by the State at large. It has therefore provided for the relief of these, (and other cities and towns which suffer from the same cause but to a less extent,) by several enactments which are very effective, and yet involve but a trivial cost. Among these is the law of 1860, which provides that persons in distress may be sent to their homes or friends or the places legally bound to maintain them, without the intervention of an actual removal to an Almshouse or Hospital. Their constructive presence only is required,—a permit being furnished in each case, which is sent to the Institution, that the name of the person may be duly entered upon its Register. The parties are forwarded forthwith to their destination. Thus the comfort of the individual is promoted, an honorable pride respected, and the municipality relieved at once from all expense, the cost of the removal being paid by the State.

For the execution of this and other laws, as far as Boston and its vicinity were concerned, the sub-department of "local business" was established at 59 Long Wharf, whither all applicants for relief are referred. It is managed by the First Deputy and his clerk, who also register the returns from the public Institutions, and furnish information concerning the inmates to their friends and relatives.

During the past year these officers have examined 1,641 cases, and caused the removal of 1,198 paupers and lunatics. The expenses have been as follows:—

For Salaries,	$1,522 50
For Rent and Office expenses,	447 94
Total,	$1,970 44

The efficiency, economy, and humanity of this simple arrangement can hardly be overrated. Our Almshouses and Hospitals would long ago have proved insufficient for the accommodation of applicants having a legal right to admission, had it not been stringently carried out. Your General Agent believes that much more can be accomplished in this direction, and recommends that an officer be appointed or detailed to examine every State pauper about to be committed from Boston, either to an Almshouse or Lunatic Hospital, to the end that the city may be relieved of the trouble and expense of the transportation, and the State of the cost of support and transportation back to Boston, in case the pauper should be proved to "belong" without its limits. There were formerly Agencies maintained by the State, at Worcester and Springfield, to accomplish these ends. While the undersigned does not advise their re-establishment, he is in favor of making some arrangement with the Overseers of the Poor of each of these cities, whose executive officer might, for a moderate compensation, perform these duties under his supervision, and thus considerably reduce the number sent to the Institutions, as well as the expenditure for local relief.

2. Sub-Department of Settlement and Bastardy.

This is a most important bureau, being, in fact, a necessary preliminary to all the others, save the first. It is the shield of the State against the grossest fraud and imposture, and its officers are a detective force to "ferret" out evil-doers, and furnish the evidence which will drive them from its borders or consign them to wholesome restraint and punishment. It is this which, aided by the officers of Transportation, keeps down our State paupers and lunatics to the aggregate of twelve years ago, averts the necessity of new Institutions, and saves the Commonwealth from an expenditure for this class alone, of at least half a million a year; which maintains an equipoise between the municipalities and the State, as regards the intricate laws of settlement; which restores thousands of wanderers to home and friends, rights many a wrong, and quietly compels the cruel and unfeeling to do justice and show mercy, even though they do not love it; and does all, too, so quietly, that but few of our citizens are aware of the protection they receive, or the source that affords it.

The officers assigned to it, are the Second Deputy and Second Clerk with certain temporary assistants who will be spoken of presently, all being under the special supervision of the General Agent. It is necessary, in explanation of their business, to say, in every yearly Report, that "ever since the State system was established, it has been customary to examine all the inmates of the several Institutions as soon as possible after their admission, to ascertain their birth-place and previous residence, their occupation, habits, and personal history; also the names and residences of their parents, grandparents, and more remote ancestors in the direct line; the civil and pecuniary condition of all these parties, with such other facts as might throw any light upon the question of their settlement; and, if foreigners, the time and mode of their immigration, the port where they landed, and the date of their entry into the State."

During the past year, your Agent, his deputies and clerks, in pursuance of this duty, have made numerous visits to the Institutions, as well as to different towns within and without the State, have travelled many thousand miles, and conducted an extensive correspondence.

Examinations for Seven Years.

EXAMINATIONS, &c.

After examination, each case is carefully studied, and all necessary investigation made, with the view to ascertain some possible means of support through a "lawful settlement," or "kindred of ability;" or, failing these, to verify the propriety of removal by some one of the methods provided by law; and in the next table will be found the result of these labors for the past seven years:—

Thus it appears that, since October 1st, 1866, 4,382 cases have been investigated; 82 settlements found in this State and 711 in other States, and 450 persons given up to the proper officer to be sent to their friends who have sometimes wholly or partially re-imbursed the State for its outlay. More than 1,700 others have been placed in the care of the same officer for transportation to the "places where they belong or whence they came."

The State Workhouse.

As a means of discipline, and an effectual check upon those abandoned and reckless individuals who have been wont for many years to make the charity of the State subservient to their vicious indulgences, the State Workhouse has fully met all your Agent's expectations. It has been admirably managed by its Superintendent, Mr. Goodspeed, who promises in time to show in the matter of dollars and cents an equally gratifying result. It has virtually displaced the State Almshouse, the latter containing only some 60 inmates, aside from those waiting sentence and the infant children of the sentenced.

By the Act establishing the State Workhouse, it is made the duty of your General Agent to prosecute all cases arising under it, and of his officers to serve all the legal processes, and convey the parties to Bridgewater. Preferring to err on the side of caution in performing this duty, he has selected for prosecution those persons only whose appearance and condition were sufficient evidence of their violation of law, in the hope that, by the example thus shown, those less advanced in crime might be deterred from throwing themselves on the public charity. And he believes that in the case of many this has been the result, there being, without any other apparent cause, a very large decrease in the number of "former inmates" returning, when the condition of business would ordinarily have brought about a large increase.

Complaint has been made of the length of sentence, but this is precisely what the Legislature determined to effect; that if reform was possible, abstinence from indulgence and the habit of daily labor might accomplish it, and the party might leave the institution robust in body, and with that knowledge of some kind of work, which would in ordinary times insure immediate employment; if reform was not possible, that the vicious poor might be saved from themselves, and the public protected from their depredations when without, and their uncompensated support when within the charitable institutions; and that instead of being consumers and destroyers they might become producers, at least to the extent necessary to their maintenance.

Complaint has also been made that your Agent has prosecuted the mothers of illegitimate children. But the tongue of the fault-finder would be forever silent, if the fearful catalogue of crimes against the innocent and helpless, only growing longer and more fearful with each added year of your Agent's service, could be fully revealed to him. Your Agent is instructed by the Statutes to institute and prosecute complaints in Bastardy; but unless the complainant is detained as a witness, the guilty father escapes, and the costs are thrown upon the Commonwealth. For this reason and to save the lives of hundreds of little ones, by making the discharge of the mother depend in a great degree on the care taken of her child, he has caused them to be arrested and tried. So ample is the power of the Board to pardon, that any case thought to be deserving can be promptly investigated anew, and any injustice unwittingly done can be immediately remedied.

The undersigned believes that the Workhouse can hardly be regarded any longer as an experiment, but as an accomplished fact and an undoubted success.

The whole number of trials is as follows:—

At Tewksbury State Almshouse,	230
At Bridgewater,	56
At Monson,	14
Total,	<hr/> 800

No expense whatever has attended these trials, except the fee of one dollar in each case paid to the justice from the appropriation for the respective Almshouses, and the usual fares of the sentenced parties to Bridgewater.

Bastardy.

There is no abatement of the difficulties attending prosecutions under the Bastardy Act. On the contrary they have rather increased, and neither judge nor legislator seems willing to aid in expounding the present law, or enacting one that shall be clearer and more effective. There is little doubt that some of those manifesting this utter indifference, on a subject so vital in its relation both to the public morals and political economy, will live to deplore it most deeply. We cannot, of course, put a stop to illegitimacy, but we can very considerably curb it, and prevent the parties from using our institutions of charity, not only to hide their disgrace, but to bear the burden of its cost. And, above all, we can and ought to do something effectual now to check the growth in this community of a new class of irresponsible “nobodies” which will too surely prove “the seed and the root of all future evils.”

A single illustration of the difficulties of prosecution will suffice: A. B., in the County of ———, made a complaint against D. as the father of a child with which she was then pregnant. D. was arrested and brought before the justice, but having represented that he would marry the plaintiff she did not appear against him, and he was "discharged," as appears by the record of the justice "for want of evidence." As he failed to keep his promise of marriage the girl had him arrested a second time, and taken before another justice who discharged him on the ground that the girl was barred from making a second complaint. Meanwhile the girl became a State pauper and her child was born, and the State officer designated in the Statute caused a new complaint to be made on behalf of the Commonwealth, as she neglected to take any further action. The man D. was re-arrested after much trouble, and taken before the same justice, who again discharged him on the ground that the State should have prosecuted one of the original complaints, and had no right to initiate a new one. These complaints had both been killed, one by his own decision, the other by the discharge of the respondent on his promise to do justice, so that to prosecute either was impossible. Thus guilt has gone unpunished and the public is the sufferer. And this is a fair specimen of the experience of the Department. Hence, out of several hundred cases only 18 have been prosecuted during the year, which, with the seven pending at its commencement, show the following result: three were settled by marriage, seven by the payment of various sums of money, one by the payment of costs, three were discharged by order of Court and two only were convicted, and nine are still pending. In some four or five other cases, consent was given to settlement by the parties, it being apparent that the children would not become a State charge. The whole amount of money collected was $1,225, of which $175 was paid to the parties or to others in their behalf, and $1,050 was paid to institutions or into the State Treasury. The legal expenses of the cases, so far as paid by the State, were $219.45.

Expenses of the Sub-Department.

The cost of the sub-department of Settlement and Bastardy, paid from the regular appropriation, including one-half of the salary of the General Agent, has been as follows:—

DEPARTMENT OF SETTLEMENT AND BASTARDY.

Salaries,	$3,525 00
Travelling expenses,	214 90
Record books and office expenses,	25 00
Total,	$3,764 90

Special Department of Settlement, &c.

But this does not include all the outlay for these investigations. A very able Joint Special Committee of the Legislature of 1865, appointed to consider the expediency of changing the laws of Settlement, came to the conclusion that the existing Statutes concerning both settlement and bastardy should be more stringently enforced; and seeing that the hands of your Agent were tied by the lack of means to carry them out, and the absurdity of compelling him to "make bricks without straw," they reported that there was need of a special appropriation for this purpose, which was immediately fixed by the Committee on Finance and granted by the Legislature. That appropriation has been yearly renewed to the great benefit of the State. The sum yearly voted is three thousand dollars, though only about one-third of that sum has usually been expended. It is, however, of great importance, to have an ample margin, in view of the emergencies so liable to arise in the charitable department. Owing to this arrangement, your Agent has been able to remove or find settlements for 127 lunatics during the year, without material interference with his usual routine; while last year he was able to remove only 60—the effort to accomplish which caused great confusion throughout his Department. The number of lunatics at the Hospitals has thus been decreased from more than 560 to about 510, their cost has been lessened more than $175 per week, and the State has saved, for the present year alone, several times the amount expended, to say nothing of what these parties would have cost in the future.

The amount expended up to October 1, 1867, is as follows :

Compensation of clerks and examiners, .	$870 00
Travelling expenses,	39 00
Record books and office expenses, . . .	67 23

GENERAL AGENT'S REPORT.

Legal costs (for 1867,)	$158 15
Assistance of various kinds, (in Bastardy cases,)	70 00
	<hr/>
	$1,204 38
And their remains of the appropriation,	1,795 62
Total appropriation,	$3,000 00

From Cities and Towns,	$4,496 61
From Individuals,	1,409 21
Total,	$5,905 82

And a substantial basis has been laid for yet larger collections in the future. The amount received from cases of illegitimacy, which swells the total receipts to $6,955.82, will be found under the head of Bastardy. Thus it appears that the expenses of both the regular and special agencies are paid from the receipts, and a surplus is left for the Commonwealth of $1,986.54. This is well enough; but the great usefulness of this branch of the Board's business consists in what it saves—not what it earns.

The Military Settlement Law.

This Statute remains unchanged. It has operated to save many a disabled survivor of the war, with numerous widows and orphans of the dead, from commitment to a State Almshouse. Your Agent, however, believes that it would be more equitable in its working, and accomplish a yet greater amount of good, if the alterations suggested last year, which he strove in vain to have incorporated into the original bill, could even now be adopted. It is unpopular with some of the town authorities, who dislike any addition to the number of their public charges. But these gentlemen seem to forget that the amount of assistance granted to such persons is now within their own control; whereas, if these parties were sent to the LAW OF MILITARY SETTLEMENT.

State Almshouses from the entire State, in the absence of any such law, the towns would have to pay in additional taxes a sum not within their control, which might, and under the circumstances probably would be, larger than that which they now expend for them. The aid of friends, the contributions of the benevolent, and such labor as they may perform, all combine to reduce the charge to the towns; whereas the State would be compelled to assume and the tax-payers to be assessed for the cost of their entire support. Besides, by this law the family is saved from the demoralization of utter pauperism, and the ancient policy of the State is recognized, which assumes as the foundation of our system of settlements, in the words of the Attorney-General, "that it is better that paupers should be chargeable upon towns than upon the State."

In closing this topic, your Agent desires to express his obligations to the several Superintendents and their subordinates for the assistance extended in making the necessary examinations; and particularly to the Inspectors and Superintendent at Tewksbury, where this labor has to be performed daily, who, with great courtesy and considerate kindness, have prepared a suitable room and neatly furnished it for the special use of the Board and its officers, thereby greatly facilitating the performance of their duties.

8. Sub-Department of Transportation.

After the examining officers of the Department of Settlement have finished their labors, the results are made up by the General Agent, who proceeds with the officers of Transportation to make the necessary transfers and removals. Those regularly employed for this purpose are the Third Deputy and his clerk; but much temporary aid is needed, and one extra officer is required for nearly the whole time. All extra service is paid from the appropriation for Transportation. It never exceeds the rate of $66.67 per month. The whole amount thus paid will be found opposite the item "Assistance," in the Analysis of moneys expended on account of Transportation. It is less than the average salary of your Agent's clerks, though at times several persons have been employed. If these places were made permanent, the officers would have too much leisure; if any hindrance should occur to the examining and investigating officers, they would be entirely idle, and yet would receive full salaries. The undersigned has therefore availed himself of the permission of the Board to employ such temporary assistance as he might need, as the most efficient and economical plan. The effect of the extra labor in the Department of Settlement is seen at once in the increased Transportation, the number of removals and transfers having been over 3,000, an increase of just 25 per cent. over last year. The expenses of this sub-department for the past year have been as follows:—

Salaries of deputies and assistants,	. . .	$1,243 33
One-half the salary of the General Agent,	. . .	1,500 00
Rent and office expenses,	285 50
Total,	$3,028 83

As stated below, the cost of the removals and transfers, including all extra assistance, has been $9,277.13. Has the outlay of these two sums been a good investment? The question is answered best by asking another. How much would it cost to keep the 2,149 paupers and lunatics removed—for a single week—a single month—a single year? This number is larger by several hundred than our entire average supported through the past year at a cost of some $160,000, and yet if let alone, most of these people would remain permanently in the institutions, or go there to remain. The problem then stands as follows: If it costs $160,000 to maintain an average of 1,717 inmates for a year at the State Almshouses, what would it cost to maintain all that would remain of 2,149 in addition, the said almshouses being totally insufficient to accommodate them?

The whole number of removals for the year ending September 30, 1867, was 2,149; of transfers, 870; in all, 3,019. The expense of sending the above number, including their necessary food, clothing and outfit, has been $9,277.13; the removal to places beyond the sea costing $1,172.86, or an average of $11.85 for each person sent; to other places, $6,368.95, or $3.10½ for each. The transfers have cost $1,735.82 in all, or $1.99 each. The appropriation for this purpose for the financial year 1867 was $10,000; for the year ending September 30, 1867, $9,750.

The growth of our population, especially in its foreign element, demands increased and incessant effort on the part of your Board, to reduce the State patients to that number which the laws of the Commonwealth and a discriminating humanity imperatively require us to retain. Not only is this requisite for the bodily and mental health of the remainder, but any remission of effort will inevitably entail on the State another huge "Public Institution,"—a result which some, at least, of this Board, will not contemplate with equanimity. Your Agent certainly believes that every effort in reason should be made to avert this evil day.

He feels, too, that all the energies and skill of our accomplished Superintendents, are required for the management of recent and curable cases of insanity; and that their powers should not be wasted, and their lives sacrificed, in attempting to supervise in addition the individual units in a mass of imbecility and idiocy, which science and experience tell them cannot be cured or improved where they are.

And here he believes that the Board of State Charities should step in to their relief, with suggestion and experiment, for their sakes, for the sake of the curable and doubtful patients, and for the purpose of ascertaining whether, in some other place and under other influences, some benefit may not be wrought out for cases where science is at fault, and which experts have abandoned. And he has little doubt that faith and courage will work out a way whereby, at a moderate expense, this forlorn class of dependents will receive every comfort that an enlightened humanity demands, or that they are capable of enjoying, in a condition somewhat less akin to perpetual imprisonment; a way, too, whereby their physical frames may be strengthened, and the latent spark of mind, if not utterly extinguished, be kindled anew, though it be but faintly, by the reviving of the vital powers. He pleads that, when skill and learning confess their failure, nature and common sense may at least "have a chance." He hopes, because he has seen.

He begs to remind the Board, that among the thousand State patients they have visited the past year, there are numbers of the chronic insane who were always happy at home, and whose friends are devotedly attached to them. Their committal was asked for with pain, and only because the straitened means of the family demanded the labor of all its healthy members. The patient could be fed and lodged and clothed at home, but not one could be spared to attend upon her. And so the parting must come,—with many a pang to the mother, whose tenderest love is reserved for her stricken child; with many a heartache for the daughter, who would only too gladly soothe the declining years of her aged parent. But need it come?

He respectfully suggests to the Board, that in nearly all these cases, a small weekly allowance to the family,—equal only to the support of the patient in the Almshouse,—would enable her to remain among sympathizing friends, in the enjoyment of her familiar home. Then why not pay two dollars per week, if so much is required, from the appropriation for the support of State Lunatic paupers, directly to the family, in consideration of the proper support of the patient—who might be under the close supervision of an officer of this Board, and be visited by him at least weekly, and without previous warning. The trial of the plan can do no harm, and its adoption would perceptibly reduce the number of State pauper lunatics in the Hospitals, and also the present outlay for their support.

And further,—there are many others declared to be incurable, long resident at the Hospitals, who from certain idiosyncrasies or the peculiar delusion under which they labor, ought not to live at home. But many of these could live in other families than their own with a considerable degree of liberty and more of comfort. Others of the same description having means of their own, or kindred of ability, are “boarded out” in the country, where your Agent has had occasion to observe that they receive the kindest care. Then why should not the State pursue the same course, and instead of cumbering its hospitals with this class, which is practically to them a sentence to life-long imprisonment, secure them boarding places in the quiet country, making it a part of the contract that they shall be encouraged in every proper way to labor daily, and put them under a supervision so close that any indifference to their welfare, would be at once detected? We shall never know what can be done in this direction till we make the trial.

Of course no help can be looked for, and only opposition, or at best an ominous silence can be expected from a class of gentlemen outside of this Commonwealth, who having made the care of the insane a specialty, seem to regard themselves as if by some “divine right” the directors of the public on this whole question, and to think that any suggestion or proposition as to the treatment of the insane not originating with themselves is rank heresy. To this comforting self-delusion no objection is made. Their science, their zeal, their fidelity through years of trial and sacrifice demand for themselves the highest respect, and for their opinions, as experts, the profoundest deference. But when they have confessedly exhausted their resources as far as cure or improvement is concerned, and have nothing to propose for the benefit of “harmless incurables” so called but additional hospitals, there are those who will remember that for sundry reasons of habit or interest they may be partial to large institutions, and who will venture to suggest other modes of dealing with the class alluded to. And if these methods shall appear to the public, and the legislators who represent it, to be both economical and humane, they will most certainly have a fair trial.

While Massachusetts abates not a jot of her zeal for humanity, and will never be niggardly of her means in sustaining every good work, her people will yet regard with favor every effort of this Board to reduce the array of great institutions, and to to lessen the numbers in the "Exceptional classes."

The Lunatic Asylum at Tewksbury.

This receptacle was formally opened on October 1, 1866, 145 inmates being transferred from the Almshouse proper to its register. It then received all the debris in the way of idiots, imbeciles, epileptics and defectives that had been accumulating for twelve years in the other two State Almshouses, 144 in number, and 73 "harmless incurables" from the three Lunatic Hospitals. Not over 150, however, have at any one time resided in the Asylum, so many proving themselves suitable to mingle in daily intercourse, and finally to live permanently with the sane inmates of the Almshouse.

The quiet, decency and order of the establishment, as well as the amount of labor performed, have entirely exceeded the expectations of your Agent. He does not go into a detail of events that have occurred, because it is the first year of the establishment, and they would probably be reckoned among the "remarkable coincidences." It is enough to say that it has amply met the designs of your Board, which were: 1st, to provide a decent shelter for the defectives long resident in the three State Almshouses; 2d, to relieve the crowded hospitals; 3d, to prevent the otherwise inevitable necessity of calling immediately for measures precedent to erecting a fourth Lunatic Hospital; 4th, to afford the incurables a better opportunity for labor than the hospitals could provide without incurring undue expense and trouble; and 5th, to save in the support of these incurables whatever might be consistent with a proper humanity. And he believes that all these intentions have been accomplished. The imbeciles have comfortable accommodations; by removals hither and elsewhere the hospitals have been relieved of some 120 inmates; the question of a new hospital is postponed; persons have been induced to work steadily who would do no labor in the hospitals, and the value thereof is in some cases $20 per month, whereas if in those institutions the State would have to pay $15 per month for their board. And finally, up to the time of writing this Report, the Commonwealth has saved over and above their cost at Tewksbury, in the dollars and cents which would have been drawn from the Treasury for the board of these patients, the annual interest on the entire investment at seven per cent., and at least eight per cent. of the investment itself.

But does any one say, "these people cost more than the other inmates at Tewksbury, and your estimate is unfair?" The answer is ready. "A few of them do; an equal or greater number pays a decided profit to the institution; the bulk cost no more than ordinary paupers." Besides, there are some figures to refer to.

In 1866, Tewksbury had as the average of inmates,	717
The current expenses were	$69,248 87
The average weekly expense for each inmate was	1 85 $\frac{4}{10}$

In 1867, Tewksbury had as the average of inmates,	757
The current expenses were	$69,643 82
The average weekly expense for each inmate was	1 77

Thus, with the insane present, it has actually cost $8\frac{4}{10}$ cents less per week, for each person, than during the previous year, and this with a loss of several thousand dollars in the valuation of the property, as made up by a new appraiser.

As a matter of history, your Agent desires to avow most distinctly that the Board of State Charities of Massachusetts is not, and never has been, committed to the policy of congregating the chronic insane in Almshouse establishments. They wait for light before adopting any policy which so nearly concerns the vital interests of the stricken beings committed to their charge. But, while waiting, they will strive for light, and, if any should dawn upon them from the workings of this establishment, enforced as it was by exigencies necessitating immediate relief, they will gratefully welcome and share it with their co-workers everywhere.

This building originated with your Agent, who was compelled to witness, while powerless to relieve, the increasing embarrassments of his friends, Drs. Choate and Bemis, at Taunton and Worcester. With these gentlemen and the Hon. Moses Kimball he consulted, as being wise and competent advisers, not as to what ought to be done, but as to what could be done; and as the result recommended to your Board to apply to the Legislature for means to erect this building, by no means as an "experiment," as has been proclaimed to the world by shocked savans, but as the only attainable method of relief. The exigency was comprehended; the application made; the appropriation voted; and our plain and unpretending shelter erected and placed in charge of kind and competent men as Superintendent and Physician. It may be "full of errors," but it will not "be a failure." It is doing its work. The inmates appear to be comfortable. The taxpayers are saving some money by the operation. And this is all.

We will try to do better in Massachusetts when the wise men will show us how. Failing that, we will try to find out "how" ourselves, and, meanwhile, the rest of the world consenting, we will continue to use our temporary expedient till the revelation of some safe and judicious policy that shall be permanent only till a still better can be found.

The Mortality at Tewksbury.

The percentage of deaths at Tewksbury one might naturally expect to be large: 1st, because it receives all the aged and infirm from several other institutions; 2d, because it is here that this same class is sent from four-fifths of the State, when all hope of protracted life is gone, on purpose to die amid such comforts as the Commonwealth affords to the unsettled poor;

THE MORTALITY AT TEWKSBURY.

3d, because it is the general receptacle for foundlings, who usually die from previous exposure or congenital disease. The tendency of the classification adopted by your Board is, of course, to increase the number of the sick and rate of death at Tewksbury, and diminish both at the other institutions.

The average number at Tewksbury, for 1867, has been . . .	757
The average number of sane persons, for 1867, has been about .	550
The average number of insane and imbecile, for 1867, has been . . .
about	207
The total number of deaths,	260
Number of deaths among the sane,	205
Number of deaths among the insane,	55

The ratio of the deaths among the insane to the average number of the insane and imbecile is less than the ratio of the deaths among the sane to the average of the sane. As compared with the whole number of each class supported it is larger.

The 55 deaths among those registered on the books of the Asylum are distributed among the three classes which compose the inmates for the year 1867, as follows:—

Among the 181 idiotic and imbecile originally at Tewksbury or received during the year from cities and towns, there have died	80
Among the 112 idiotic and imbecile transferred from the other State Almshouses, there have died	23
Among the 71 chronic insane transferred from the Hospitals, there have died	2

One of whom was afflicted with syphilitic disease, too offensive to allow a further stay in the Lunatic Hospital, and was known to be near his end when transferred, and the other with phthisis.

In the year before the Asylum was opened the number of deaths at Tewksbury among the idiotic, imbecile and chronic insane was 36 on an average of about 105, and a total supported of about 150. The figures of the past year, so unfavorable in its circumstances, cannot fail to induce a good hope for the future; for the worst period has been passed, and the mortality of former years has decidedly diminished.

GENERAL AGENT'S REPORT.

4. Sub-Department of Municipal Bills and Accounts.

This was rendered necessary by the passage of the Act of 1865, providing for the relief of sick State paupers in the towns where they might happen to be, and forbidding the removal of those afflicted with contagious diseases to the State Almshouses.

Your Agent is compelled by the terms of the law to examine into every case, both as regards the history of the individual, the propriety of the amount charged and the correctness of the bill. He at first endeavored to do the whole work himself, but notices and demands came in such numbers that he was compelled to employ an additional clerk, who commenced his labors on the first of January, 1867. The expense of the Department to October 1st was $450 for clerical assistance.

In 1865 there were notices received for 170 cases. The amount thus far allowed is $1,690.26. Number of claims unsettled, 36.

In 1866 there were notices received for 820 cases. The amount thus far allowed is $7,441.63. Number of claims unsettled, 262.

In 1867 there were notices received for 1,373 cases. The amount thus far allowed is $12,518.46. Number of claims unsettled, 693.

It will be seen that this legislative action is likely to cost the Commonwealth a large annual sum; but it will cost the people no more than before, as it is merely a transfer of the burden from the towns to the State. It will prevent few from commitment to a State Almshouse, because, as a general thing, allowance is made only for those unable to be moved at all or at least to such a distance. Still, your Agent believes that the principle underlying the law is correct, as it tends to prevent the breaking up of homes and the separation of families. And he believes, too, that the time has come when local aid, to be re-imbursed by the State, can safely be granted to certain classes of families where no illness prevails, with great advantage to all concerned. If it were possible to gain the ear of the legislature and to excite the interest of the people in a subject so nearly affecting thousands of the living and the generations to come, he feels assured that no time would be lost in making the changes necessary to stay pauperization and crime, and to promote the comfort and happiness of multitudes, by extending the benefits of the laws of settlement to classes hitherto excluded therefrom.

The Laws of Settlement.

At the request of the late Governor Andrew, your Agent prepared for his last Annual Message a paragraph recommending certain changes in these antiquated Statutes. With the exception of one or two slight additions, for which he is not responsible, and in which he does not concur, as being hardly practicable, the paragraph stands in that document precisely as originally written. Believing that it expresses the views of the entire Board, as well as his own, he respectfully refers thereto for a concise statement of the changes desired. The law of military settlements excepted, the propositions were defeated at the time in the Joint Special Committee to which it was referred, by the opposition of the local authorities of Boston, and the unwillingness of its legal members to countenance any change whatever in statutes so thoroughly settled by judicial decisions. But your Agent ventures to suggest that the day has come when the happiness and comfort—as well as the morale—of thousands should no longer be sacrificed to “rescripts” and “precedents,” and that the changes proposed are demanded by the simplest rules of political economy, and by the pleadings of a common humanity.

Forms of Bills and Notices.

Great difficulty has been experienced in obtaining from the towns any precision of statement in their accounts for the support and burial of paupers, or any of those details of date and history which are absolutely requisite to a legal and intelligent audit. To this looseness and neglect alone is due the delay in the settlement of these accounts, which has elicited so many harsh expressions of complaint, and so much censure of the auditing officer. A simple perusal of the statutes would seem to furnish all necessary guidance; but as this sort of reading is clearly unpalatable to many town officers, your Agent has prepared the following forms, an exact compliance with which will secure the immediate audit of their bills.

1. When a State pauper falls ill in a city or town, and calls for help, on the very day the same is granted, one of the overseers should forward to the undersigned a notice similar to the following:—(and for this reason. The Statute allows no re-imbursement soever for aid granted before the day of notice.)

To the Board of State Charities.

GENTLEMEN:—John Brown, a State pauper, is ill in this town, [or city,] and unable to be removed to a State Almshouse. He has called for aid which we have rendered, and for which we shall claim re-imbursement from the State to the extent of the Statute.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN WILLIAMS, Overseer of Poor of Residence, No. 2 Oak Street.

Disease, Consumption.

Where there are no streets, the overseers must designate the locality of the party's residence as distinctly as possible, that he may be visited without trouble or delay by some officer of the Board, if thought desirable.

2. When assistance has ceased, it is expedient to make up and send in the bill immediately, while the facts are yet fresh in memory. And here follow two forms, one of which is to be used when the party is aided at his own home or at the house of some friend; the other when he is removed to the local Almshouse, or supported by agreement in a family at a given weekly rate. Overseers must give such a history as will show that the party, as far as they can possibly ascertain, has neither a military or civil settlement in the Commonwealth. They must also specify with accuracy the date of the commencement and close of the relief, as the law requires the re-imbursement to be fixed at a weekly rate during its continuance.

GENERAL AGENT'S REPORT.

CONCLUSION.

In addition to the duties above mentioned, a large amount of business falls to the lot of the General Agent which cannot be classified, and is not of sufficient importance to the public to be mentioned in detail. The promptness of its transaction, especially in the matter of correspondence, is greatly impeded by the necessity of frequent and protracted absence, for the purpose of examining the dependents of the State, and relieving the several Institutions of those who are not legitimate charges upon the Treasury. His short-comings must be ascribed, in all charity, not to any unwillingness to labor, but to the utter impossibility of the performance of so many duties by one individual, within what seems to others a reasonable time.

* Approximate; no return made.

Blanks in the preceding table simply indicate that there is nothing to report; not a failure to make returns, except where that fact is distinctly stated. In the column giving the "number relieved and partially supported," a portion of the figures are well-considered estimates, made necessary by imperfection in the returns arising from misapprehension; this column, therefore, represents only approximately the number partially supported. Many of these are no doubt reported twice, so that of the whole number reported in the State, (26,014,) it is probable that there are no more than 23,000 different persons.

REMARKS ON TABLES XVII.—XVIII.—These two Tables represent the condition in respect to numbers, etc., of the three Pauper Establishments; but they include the pupils of the State Primary School, who are not legally paupers, and the inmates of the State Workhouse, who might also be classed as prisoners. The classification (men, women, etc.,) is made in respect to the apparent number of persons, which, at Monson, is always different from the actual number. The averages computed differ slightly from those previously given, because the dates taken are not precisely the same. Table XVIII. includes the children actually in school at the three Establishments. The additional numbers in the State Primary School include children who are kept out of school for some reason. Many pupils are admitted there who are too young to go to school, others are ill, some are employed about the Establishment, etc.

* Including duplicates, this would probably be little more than 10,000.

† Approximate.

NOTE.—To the amount paid for State Paupers should be added the sums paid to towns under the Sick Law of 1865. These, for the year ending September 30, 1867, were about $15,000, the average number of persons supported being probably from 75 to 100, and the whole number not far from 900. This would make the whole cost of the support of State Paupers about $285,000. The sums paid for burials were less than $5,000, making a total of less than $290,000 for State Paupers, and about $785,000 for all classes. To this is to be added about $250,000 for partial support by the towns, making an aggregate of upwards of a million of dollars.

REMARKS ON THE PAUPER ABSTRACT.

REMARKS ON THE SERIES OF TABLES COMPOSING THE PAUPER ABSTRACT.—I have this year enlarged this series of Tables so as to show all the main facts concerning both Town and State Paupers, as was intended by the laws first directing the Abstract to be prepared. In order to show the pauper expenses for a number of years, I have prepared Tables of Expenditure since 1854, (Tables XXIII.—XXV.) by which it appears that while the State has paid for the support of its paupers since 1854, at least $3,200,000, the Towns and Cities have paid more than that amount, (namely, $3,587,489.18,) for the support of their poor in Almshouses; while their whole expenditure for in-door and out-door relief has been more than eight millions, ($8,104,866.98.) Therefore the total expenditure for all classes of the poor, for the past thirteen years, has been not less than eleven and one-third millions of dollars, or an average of about $875,000 a year. It is true that the statistics before the year 1864 are not very accurate with regard to the town paupers, but there can be no doubt that the sum named is less than the actual expenditure.

With regard to the statistics of the year 1867, which are given in some detail, a few explanations are necessary. They show, more exactly than in previous years, the number of persons aided and the sums paid for each class of beneficiaries, but the actual number of persons must be considered as overstated, because so many are counted two or more times.

For example, the whole number fully supported by the State is set down as 5,473,—by the towns, 5,862; making an apparent total of 11,335. But, without knowing precisely how many of these are duplicates in the town list, we know that many are; we know, too, that some are duplicated on the State list, and that there are some common to both lists. Moreover, of these 11,335 there are probably some hundreds who also appear among the 26,014 aided by partial support. All things considered, therefore, I estimate the true number of those fully supported as not much above 10,000. The number of the insane is overstated in the same way, it is probable, and so with regard to others.

It is worthy of notice that a great majority of those applying for relief are females, (6,111 out of 10,151.) The sum reported as paid, ($260,974.12,) appears to be too large; probably because it includes the sums charged to the State, and to other towns. It would seem that just about twice as much is paid by the towns for full support as for partial support.

APPENDIX TO THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

REMARKS ON THE PRECEDING TABLES.

In the Classification of Crimes it is needful to make use of the whole number of Commitments, since the same person is often charged with or convicted of several offences, or committed to several prisons. For this reason the number of crimes, in the aggregate, will appear too large. Thus, in the commitments for Murder, 1 male appears both in the State and County Prisons, and 4 males in more than one County Prison. The true aggregate for this crime is not 36, but 31; viz., 23 males and 8 females; and 4 of these 31 were counted in 1866.

The total commitments for Manslaughter are 8 instead of 10; 2 males appearing in more than one prison.

The totals for Rape become 28 instead of 36; 5 men appearing both in the State and County Prisons, and 3 in more than one County Prison. 4 of these 28 were counted in 1866.

The totals for Arson or Burning become 56 instead of 65; viz., 51 males and 5 females; 4 males appearing both in the State and County Prisons, and 5 males in more than one County Prison.

The totals for Burglary are 50 instead of 61; namely, 48 males and 2 females; 3 males appearing both in the State and County Prisons, and 8 males in more than one County Prison.

The totals for Adultery become 96 instead of 111; viz., 62 males and 34 females; 1 male appears both in the State and County Prisons, and 12 males and 2 females appear in more than one County Prison.

These totals would be still farther reduced by comparing the returns for two years together and excluding those crimes which appear more than once on the Prison Register, during two years; the whole number committed for Murder in both years being but 54; for Manslaughter, 31; for Rape, 51.

As compared with 1866, it will be seen that Crimes against the Person have decreased about 5.2 per cent., Crimes against Property about 8 per cent., Crimes against Public Order and Decency have increased 2.8 per cent., and Crimes of all kinds have decreased 3 per cent.

It has been stated that the number of different persons committed, which is nominally 10,884, is really not more than 9,500. The exact number cannot be given because, after ascertaining all the different persons committed to a single prison, lists must be compared to see if the same person has not been committed to several prisons during the year. This frequently happens, especially when the prisons are in the same county or vicinity, but it is common for the name to be changed, either by the prisoner himself, to escape identification, or by the clerk, from indistinct hearing or haste in copying. A certain number of the duplicate commitments therefore fail to be counted in each year, even when all the lists are compared together, which cannot always be adequately done for want of time. After all the deductions which, without doubt, are proper to be made, the total of 10,884 becomes 9,900, but this number is probably too large by 300 or 400.

Slight discrepancies may occur in these tables as now prepared, arising from a misunderstanding in regard to the commitment of escaped prisoners, persons held on two charges, etc. It is proper to state, however, that the tables for the past three or four years are known to be more exact than for any former period.

The Table of Sickness and Punishment does not, probably, give the whole number of cases of either description, but may be taken as exhibiting the general state of those facts.

The statement of the number remaining in confinement September 30, 1866-7, as given on pages 43-4, has since been discovered to be somewhat incorrect.

The totals for the State, as given below, will correct these errors, and at the same time represent the movement of the prison population during the current year:—

APPENDIX TO THE SECRETARY'S REPORT.

On page 43 the number in the Cambridge House of Correction should be 172; in Boston Jail, 171; in the Boston House of Correction, 397,—all on October 1, 1867. The number in the House of Industry, October 1, 1866, should be 426; a year afterwards it was reduced to 408.

B.—THE SEX, EDUCATION, ETC., OF PRISONERS.

The following Tables will show the increase and diminution of crime among women, the state of Education among prisoners, and the Recommendations for a series of years, so far as the facts are reported. For the last three years the Boston House of Industry has been included in the tables. If this could have been done for the preceding years, the number of women would appear considerably greater, for a majority of those committed to this large prison are women. The State Prison receives none but males. The State Workhouse is this year included for the first time.
